MURDERED BY NEGRO

Farmer's Wife's Assailant Found Sleeping by Dead Body.

Mrs. William Peak, Living Near Stratford, Is Assaulted and Killed by Black Tramp Who Had Been Loitering In Vicinity—Sons Find Mother In Cellar With Her Slayer Drunk on Floor at Her Side.

Stratford, Oct. 1.—A terrible tragedy occurred yesterday afternoon at the rural home of William Peak, a farmer living on lot 11, con. 1, Downie, about two miles from this city.

While the husband and two sons were absent from the house a tramp negro named Frank Roghmond entered the house and, it is believed, outraged Mrs. Peak, the woman being found about four o'clock lying dead on the cellar floor.

Roghmond was also lying asleep in the cellar, his hands, face and clothing spotted with blood, while blood covered the face of the victim. Mafks would indicate that the woman had been choked and that a hemorrhage resulted.

The tragedy happened between noon and four o'clock. Mr. Peak and the boys, George and John, had gone to work. About four o'clock John returned to the house to get a jug of cider, and arriving at the cellar he saw the form of the sleeping negro. Rushing to the field he informed his brother that a negro was asleep in the cellar. Both returned to the house, when the horrible discovery was made that their mother was lying dead with a portion of her face covered with blood.

George hurried across the road to a neighbor's, Robert McIntosh, saying "Hurry over, Bob, I believe mother is dead." Other nearby neighbors were soon on the scene, while John Peak was despatched to Stratford for Chief McCarthy.

Before the chief arrived, however, the negro awakened and tried to escape from the house. He was pounced upon by the brawny and incensed farmers, while Robert Fuller placed the noose of a heavy rope over his body, pinioning his arms to his side.

Roghmond told a very unlikely story to the effect that he had been carried to the cellar by three men and robbed of $15.

Roghmond is about 33 years old. He was found loitering around Stratford Tuesday night and jailed by the police and arraigned yesteray morning on a charge of vagrancy. He was given a couple of hours to get out of town, but before he left he purloined a coat belonging to one of the police officers, which he wore when caught. The farmers who gathered at the Peak household were infuriated, and there were murmurs of lynching.

Mrs. Peak was 60 years of age.

PESTILENCE AFTER FLOOD.

India Is In Peril of Plague—Death List Heavy.

Hyderabad, India, Oct. 1.—It is feared that pestilence will follow the floods that have occurred in the Hyderabad and Deccan districts as a result of the unprecedented rainfall of the past few weeks.

The waters subsided Tuesday and the country is strewn with unburied bodies estimated to number not less than 1,000.

Most of the corpses are those of women and children. They are decomposing already, and as it will be impossible to get them under ground promptly an outbreak of illness is feared.

Many elephants are at present employed in removing the dead.

Later reports from the flooded districts point to a much heavier mortality than was at first supposed.

The rescuers up to the present time have only touched the edge of the desolated area, but from the numbers of bodies already found it is feared that the fatalities will total several thousand.

One report places the death list at 10,000. The Village of Ghouligooda, which consisted of one thousand houses on the bank of the River Musi, has been entirely engulfed in the mud.

The catastrophe that overwhelmed Hyderabad, the capital of the Nizam's dominions, was one of the most sudden and most appalling of many visitations on India.

In the Nizam's dominions are many tanks or lakes, the largest of which communicates with the River Musi. Tremendous rains caused the lake to river. which in turn burst its banks. overflow into the river, which in turn burst its banks. swept down upon the city, carrying everything before it, and completely devastating several quarters of the city. The flood actually wiped out a district a mile long and half a mile wide.

KILLED BY BLAST.

One Is Dead and Another Badly Hurt Near Kingston.

Kingston, Oct. 1.—A terrible accident occurred yesterday afternoon at Westbrook, seven miles from here, when Henry Smith was killed by explosion while blasting, and his brother Alfred Smith badly injured.

He was brought to the General Hospital here, where the right arm was amputated. He will recover.

The young men's mother [illegible] a few days ago.

Henry Smith lives at Collins Bay, and his brother belongs to Cleveland, having been called here to attend his mother's funeral.

Mrs. Alfred Smith has been in the hospital several weeks undergoing an operation and has not been told the awful story. Henry Smith's body was terribly mutilated. There will be no inquest.

An American Camel.

Amherst, Mass., Oct. 1.—Professor Frederic E Loomis of Amherst College has just returned from the west with a perfect skeleton of a new series of dwarf camel about the size of a goat, which he discovered imbedded in sandstone near Lusk, Wyoming.

This find is claimed to establish the fact that the camel originated on the North American plains a million and a half years ago. He has many more imperfect skeletons and the bones of scores of camels.

Strike Situation Quiet.

Montreal, Oct. 1.—There has not been any new move in the present efforts to end the strike on the C.P.R. yesterday.

It was, however, stated yesterday evening by James O'Connell, president of the metal workers' section of the International Union of Railway Mechanics, that a prominent Canadian was now interasted as intermediary between the men and the company, and that he would very speedily open negotiations.

Spend It On The Farmers.

Mr. Borden Addresses Big Meeting at St. Mary's.

Declares That It Is Government's Duty to Make Conditions Better For Agricultural Classes—Government Has Been Flagrantly Extravagant—Col. Hugh Clark, Hon. W.J. Hanna and Dr. Steele Speak.

St. Mary's, Ont., Oct. 1.—Into the home of J. H. McIntyre, South Perth's representative in the last Parliament, came R. L. Borden and his platform colleagues yesterday.

The meeting was held in the opera house, which was full to the doors at 7.30, and overflowing at 8 o'clock, when the Conservative chieftain arrived. Mayor Willard was chairman.

Dr. Steele, the Conservative candidate, condemned the extravagance of the Government, pointing to an expenditure of $644,000 in the riding of Bonaventure, as a sample. The $47,000 postoffice in St. Mary's was also an example of money improperly spent.

The Conservative leader received a warm reception.

Mr. Borden discoursed on the duty of true Canadians to maintain the principles of honest government. There would be differences of opinion as to the tariff or public ownership, but on the question of morality in public life, honest and capable administration, there could be no two opinions.

The Government had wantonly, unblushingly and audaciously misspent the money of the people of Canada and outraged public decency.

It was no answer to the people of Canada to say that the Opposition were muck-rakers. Describing his own efforts to have the Marine Department investigated and Sir Wilfrid's characterization of his allegations as "froth and wild talk." Mr. Borden exclaimed "that is the man who is the guardian of the public honor of Canada and of the public treasury as well."

"We believe that the resources of this country could be used for no better purpose than to make the conditions of living and production more favorable to the farmer of this country," said Mr. Borden.

The tendency, he said, was towards the city. This could be overcome and Mr. Borden looked forward to the day when the home of every farmer would be attended by all the comforts and conveniences of modern civilization.

Col. Hugh Clark said if the Whitney Government had adopted the Laurier system in disposing of Cobalt Lake it would have received only $11,000, instead of $1,085,000.

People who condemned the Whitney Government for raising the salaries of the school teachers had not a word to say about the Turriffs, the Burrows and the Frasers and others of that class.

Hon. Mr. Hanna declared there was not much in the Liberal platform of 1893 about which fault could be found. But there was not a plank that had not been broken, and, in addition, he might say the Liberal Government had broken every one of the ten commandments.

Ice Famine In Brockville.

Brockville, Ont., Oct. 1.—Though a supply larger than usual was harvested last winter the source of the local ice supply is well nigh exhausted.

The excessive hot dry summer increased the demand and in addition to this much melted away in the storehouses. The hospitals have the first call on what is left and the stock is being conserved for these institutions, leaving little for the general public.

The same conditions are said to prevail in many places in this district.

Hit Over Head With Bottle.

Hamilton, Oct. 1.—Sheridan Randall, a colored stableman, says he was struck over the head with a bottle, held up and robbed, near the racetrack last night. He was taken to the city hospital with a broken nose. His story is that he was sent to an hotel to get a bottle of whisky, and in making the purchase got a $10 bill changed. When he got outside he claims that a gang set upon him, knocked him down and robbed him.

Strike-Breaker Shoots.

Winnipeg, Oct. 1.—What might have been fatal shooting took place about 9 o'clock last evening on the corner of Main and McDermott streets within a stone's throw of "Newspaper Row," when Archie McKay, a strike-breaker, pulled a gun on strikers who were threatening to hustle him. He fired three shots, one of which struck a foreigner in the foot. McKay was arrested.

Offers Reward For Evidence.

New York, Oct. 1.—Firm in his belief that evidence exists which, if brought to light, would bring about the arrest and conviction of his son's murderer, Henry Dexter, multi-millionaire and nonagenarian, made public yesterday the announcement that he would pay a reward of $10,000 for such evidence.

Steamer Rams Schooner.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 1.—The steamer Princess Victoria was in a serious collision yesterday morning. While running at ten miles an hour in the fog, the Princess, a fishing schooner, was so badly damaged she had to be beached. Twelve men aboard the schooner were saved.

Hard Kicks For Lazy.

London, Oct. 1.—C. A. P.)—Mrs. Rennie Clark, writing in the October number of The Quiver on the chances for women in Canada, says there is no comfort for the helpless in Canada, not even bed and board, and only hard kicks for the lazy.

Business Deal at Sarnia.

Sarnia, Oct. 1.—The executors of the estate of the late Thomas Symington have sold his extensive dry goods and carpet business to Geddes Bros. of Sarnia and Strathroy. The business, valued at $50,000, was established over 40 years ago by Messrs. T. & J. S. Symington.

Shot; Won't Tell.

Winnipeg, Oct. 1.—Robert Bains, victim of a shooting Tuesday night at Norwood Hotel, is still in a critical condition. Johnson, his assailant, was remanded yesterday morning. Bains is very reticent and will not talk of the shooting.

Evangelist Wanted $3,000.

Hamilton, Oct. 1.—The Dr. Chapman evangelistic meetings have been called off on account of the guarantee of $3,000 asked, and because the business manager insisted upon his renting a big hall after all arrangements had been completed for holding the meetings in Centenary Church. The committee in charge was very much incensed over the conduct of the evangelist's business manager.

May Be a Wreck.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 1.—Thousands of bales of rice straw have been washed ashore on the Lake Michigan coast from Pentwater to Littlepoint Sable, and it is believed a boat has been lost in a heavy storm that has been prevailing for the last three days.

Sir James Whitney's estimate of Mr. R. L. Borden, Conservative Leader :—"There is not a cleaner, abler or brighter man in public life in Canada than Mr Borden." A vote for Mr. Porter will help to defeat Laurier and the extravagant, discredited and exhausted administration.

Sir, William Harcourt, M. P., died 1904.

TIMELY TOPICS

Brown October.

Only twelve weeks to buy your Christmas presents in.

Every commercial traveller that blows in has the same story—Laurier will be beaten.

After the election Mr. Funnell will run away and hide again.

Well, it won't be the first time porter has gone through a funnel. Ahem! No froth on that one.

• • •

Rumor says Liberals will let East Hastings go by default and concentrate all their efforts to beat Mr. Porter in the west.

It is to smile. Porter holds four aces. Only one thing will beat four aces—a royal flush. The West Hastings Grits have only a four flush.

A team of New York street car horses saw a load of hay and ran away. They'd never seen anything bigger than a bale of hay before. See the advantages of living in the country.

Here, it is; we knew it was coming. A Buffalo paper says: "Wild creatures in the Pennsylvania woods are said to be storing food in a way which foretells a hard winter." Isn't that enough to make coal buyers wild?

The new fad is to have your thumb mark, instead of your monogram, on your stationery. Be careful. It might be a fine source of identification some day.

• • •

Mr. J. J. B. Flint draws a vivid picture of awful conditions in some homes in this city. It would appear that some people have not even a graphophone with which to keep the wolf from the door. Joking apart, it is up to everybody to do their utmost to second the efforts of Mr. Flint and the Citizens' committee which is trying to relieve distress. Little children and women must not be allowed to want.

It is rumored that Mr. E. F. Butler, if he were blindfolded, turned around 23 times and then backed up a plank on to the platform, would not refuse the Grit nomination for East Hastings. Such straws as this show that Mr. Northrup need not look for much more than 500 majority.

Talking about the ward system, now—but there, we're not going to talk about the ward system until after the 26th of October. After we've succeeded in rescuing Canada from the clutches of Laurier and the grafters it will be time enough to get industrious on the ward system.

• • •

Hon. Mr. Roblin's voice has failed him. No wonder. No self-respecting throat could stand to have to pronounce the name of the editor of the Globe so often.

However, Mr. Gamey will take Mr Roblin's place, and it's a safe bet the meetings will continue to be fairly spicy.

• • •

Hon. Mr. Lemieux told the people of Berlin they ought to vote Grit because the Government had given them a town clock. This might be called purchasing votes on time.

Laurier will run in Ottawa, as decent Liberals would not stand for Fraser, the man who got a timber limit for $1650 and sold it for $100,000 This plainly shows how serious the situation is. The Grits are on the run.

By the way, before Mr. Butler gets the title of Liberal candidate for East Hastings, we'd like to know if the title has to be searched at the expense of the people of Canada. Because, if it has, and Mr. Butler has to be paid as much for it as he was for searching the title of the drill shed property, we're not going to give him the title at all. The National debt is big enough already.

Toronto Telegram, Independent—Mayor Funnell, of Trenton, is going to prevent E. Guss Porter having an acclamation in West Hastings. He has just been nominated by the Liberals with much acclaim. Even though he started his campaign with a "stirring address" by H. M. Mowat, it is probable that the Tory majority of 879 will be a few too many to overcome.

NOT THE ISSUE AT ALL.

(Hamilton Herald, Ind.)

One would almost suppose, from the editorial columns of certain Liberal papers, that Premier Roblin of Manitoba and Provincial Secretary Hanna, their characters and their records, were the chief issues in this federal campaign. But such a view would be quite erroneous.

Kingston has a "Jack the Hugger," against whom they are swearing vengeance. But isn't a man who wants to hug Kingston girls more to be pitied than censured?

Take warning, Nimrods. An order in council is published in the Ontario Gazette, forbidding the purchase of snipe, snail, woodcock and partridge for three years from September 1, 1908.

Mrs. Mills Buried

The funeral of the late Mrs. Wm. H. Mills, took place this morning from the family residence Franck st. and was attended by many friends. At Christ church the impressive burial services of the Anglican church were conducted by the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, after which the interment took place at the Belleville cemetery. Upon the casket were a number of beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends. The bearers were Messrs. W. Rodbourne, E. T. Cherry, F. Thompson, A. Delaney, G. Dulmade and E. Vennar.

Horton-Reid.

At Christ church yesterday afternoon, Mr. Harry S. Horton, of Rawdon Township, was married to Miss Eleanor Reid, of Moneymore. The Rector, R. C. Blagrave, performed the ceremony. Miss Mary F. Waterhouse was bridesmaid and Mr. Wm. Waterhouse did honors for the groom. The couple will take up their residence in Hungerford Township.

An Unique Idea.

The Men's Bible Class of Holloway St. Methodist Church, Mr. O. S. Hicks, teacher, entertained on Tuesday evening the Ladies' Bible Class in the league room of the church. The supper provided by the gentlemen showed great taste and splendid cooking ability. After supper the chair was taken by Mr. Hicks, who, in a few well-chosen remarks, introduced the topic for discussion, "How can we best increase among our men an interest in Sunday school work and Bible study and so add to the usefulness and fruitfulness of the church?" A lively discussion followed, in which a goodly number took part. The evening was well spent and greatly enjoyed, and will certainly bear fruit.

FIRE THIS AFTERNOON.

Just before 4 o'clock this afternoon the Fire Brigade was called out for a fire on Emily street.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Mr. J. L. Tickell was in Kingston to-day on business.

Rev. R. C. Blagrave left to-day for a visit to Rawdon, Quebec.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Way, of Tweed, are visiting relatives in the city.

Miss Irene Stewart, Bleecker Ave., is confined to the house through illness.

Mr. Thomas Harris is suffering with blood poisoning in his left hand.

Mr. J. B. Halkett, chief Clerk of the Marine department, Ottawa, is visiting Mr. E. Botterell in this city.

Mrs. Ida E. Bowell, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. A. G. Parker, and two children, left for Kamloops, British Columbia, to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Montgomery and little son, of Tweed, were in this city yesterday visiting their daughter, Vera, who is going to High School here.

The name of Mr. W. K. Beech, of Albert College, appears among the list of successful candidate in the September examinations in the departments of History and Philosophy at Queen's University.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

The great baseball race in the two big leagues still continues. New York is again in the lead for the pennant race as the result of yesterday's play in the National League. Chicago, in the lead yesterday, is to-day in third place. Its drop to this point in the standing is due to the victory of Pittsburg over St. Louis, and New York over Philadelphia, while the champions were losing their game to Cincinnati. Chicago is now two points behind Pittsburg, which in turn is four points removed from New York. It is still anybody's pennant, however, the positions of all three clubs potentially hanging on a single day's play. The standing to-day is as follows:

New York	.637
Pittsburg	.633
Chicago	.631

In the American League only two of the leading clubs, Cleveland and Detroit, took part in games. Both won and the relative standing of the three leaders was not changed, except that the winning clubs each drew three points further away from Chicago, not scheduled to play. The percentage to-day:

Detroit	.583
Cleveland	.581
Chicago	.578

The world's baseball series will be played the week after next.

Eddie Summers, a Canadian boy, with Detroit, has won seven straight games from the Philadelphia Athletics.

One day last week Hughie Jennings threatened to bench Ty. Cobb, because the Georgian had not been batting well. That afternoon Ty. walked out and besides getting a homer, slapped the leather for two three base hits and one single.

Toronto Tecumsehs will go to Australia next fall.

The British rugbyists who are now playing in the Antipodes defeated the New South Wales fifteen in the first match played in Australia by a score of five points to none. The Britishers will play five or six matches in Australia.

The Ottawa hockey team is after Paddy Moran, of Quebec, for goal. Pulford will not play. Art Ross, of Wanderers, has, however, been practically signed. The others expected are: Bruce Stuart, of Wanderers; Bert Morrison, of Shamrocks, and Hamby Shore, of Winnipeg.

Don't fail to read "The Mystery," our new story, which starts Saturday. It is entrancing. You will never read a better serial story in a Canadian paper.

A "Sacrifice."

Mackenzie King, formerly Deputy Minister of Labor, now Liberal candidate in Waterloo, reputed to be one of the strongest Liberal candidates, is the latest prophet of Liberal disaster at the polls.

He asks the electors of Waterloo to sympathize with him and vote for him on account of his great sacrifice in giving up his Government post. Now, Mackenzie King knows, and we all know that should Laurier be returned to power he will be made a Minister, if elected—if not elected he will be given back his old position. Mackenzie King likewise knows, and the country is beginning to appreciate the fact, that Laurier is not going to be returned to power — that therefore Mr. King, if elected, will simply be a private member in Opposition, without salary, or if unelected will have no chance to get back to his former post; hence Mr. King's feeling, voiced, as he touchingly put it, "in the presence of his father and mother and brothers and sisters," that he has in very truth too late found out that instead of bettering himself by becoming a candidate, with the promise of a portfolio in his pocket, he has in reality been called upon by his leader to make a "sacrifice," in the forlorn hope of trying to rally the ranks of the faithful around the discredited Laurier Government.

Daily Intelligencer.

Laurier's Defence of His Minister.

At a public meeting held at Niagara Falls, not long since, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, referring to the attacks made upon Sir Frederick Borden, his Minister of Militia, made this defence:

> "A paper which had made references to Sir Frederick Borden had to retract and apologize. When a Minister was charged by a paper in such a way he must either make the paper apologize or go from the Cabinet. There was a Judas among the apostles, and it would be an excellent body, indeed, that might not at some time have one who would be subject to criticism."

This sounds well, and to the uninformed would be conclusive.

The publication referred to by Sir Wilfrid was printed in England, hence it is easily understood why an apology was offered and a certain sum of money paid, rather than fight a defence in court, knowing that witnesses would have to be brought from Canada, and enormous costs incurred.

Without being considered uncharitable or defending these attacks, we venture the opinion that the case would never have been carried before a jury, particularly of Englishmen.

Why do we venture this opinion? Because no action has been instituted, civil or criminal, against the man who wrote and published the article in Canada, attacking Sir Frederick.

Not only did he write and publish broadcast the article, the pith of which was reproduced in the English magazine, for which it apologized, but he has repeated them over and over again in his newspaper, which he boasts of having a circulation of over 30,000, and has materially added to the charges.

Why has not this man been put behind the bars? is the question repeatedly asked by political friends and foes.

Come, Sir Wilfrid, you who are desirous of clean Government, give an explanation.

It will not do to say the man is beneath contempt, and nothing could be obtained from him, if prosecuted.

It is not a civil action that should be entered against him. Money is no compensation to the man who is so attacked, even if a verdict was secured. It is a criminal action that should have been entered long, long ago, and the man found a home, for a lengthy time, in a jail or penitentiary of his country if he failed to establish the truth of his charges.

Come, Sir Wilfrid, let the people of Canada know why criminal proceedings have not been entered against this man, who, you say, has slandered your Minister.

Bribery, Pure and Simple.

Sir Wilfrid, at North Bay, held out the hope that the Georgian Bay canal would be built. The Board of Trade told him the canal was an "absolute necessity if Canada is to assume that commercial importance to which she is entitled." And Sir Wilfrid insinuatingly replied: "Perhaps this is as dear to my own heart as to yours. Some steps have been taken. The surveys have been completed. But this is not the proper time to talk party politics." Humbug! That is what he was in North Bay to talk —politics.

When in Niagara he held out the probability of the deepening of the Welland Canal. That was to assist German in his election.

Sir Wilfrid is a little careful in his promises. What shall we say of the boldness of Postmaster-General Lemieux, who in North Waterloo, sought the support of the electors by telling them what he had done and what he would do if they elected a Laurierite. His words were:

> "Last year I visited your city. You asked for free mail delivery, and almost immediately it was granted. You also asked for a clock in your post office, so that all the good men of Berlin could see when it was time to go home. That clock has not yet been put in, but it has been ordered and paid for and is now on the way to Berlin. It will be in its position before election day."

And then with a brazen-facedness which would put a Dick Turpin to shame, exclaimed:

> "If you can get all this from the Government without a Liberal member representing your riding, how much more can you expect if you elect Mr. King to represent you!"

Consult the Standard Dictionary and it will be found that bribery is defined as:

> "The crime of taking or giving bribes, or of offering or of receiving a reward in order to influence conduct in any office, or to bias a voter in an election."

To what extent has the Postmaster-General laid himself open to the charge of offering bribes?

If the law does not cover such flagrant offers as were made by Mr. Lemieux, the sooner it is made to apply the better in the interest of honest elections.

Need For Missionary Effort Among the Poor of This City.

Mr. J. J. B. Flint Writes of the Awful Conditions Which Have Come Under His Notice Recently--A Terrible State of Affair ..

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir,—If the good citizens of Belleville knew of the horribly filthy houses, with ragged, dirty women and children, which I have visited during the last few days, they would be appalled.

Houses where the noisome stench was so great that I had to speedily retire to escape being ill. Simply dens, worse than any dog kennel I ever saw, and some so very bad that a self-respecting pig would refuse to enter. Yet here were little children, unkempt and uncared for, and women whose dejected, woe-begone faces showed that they lived without any hope to inspire them. I know the Salvation Army is doing, and has done, good work. The Mission also has had for many years splendid results. The Children's Aid Society has been warmed again into life, and Mr. Checker and Mr. Knight are doing all they can do. But while the great Christian churches of Belleville are properly sending missionaries and large sums of money to save the souls of yellow, black and copper-colored people, in accordance with divine command, would it not be possible that these great agencies for good could use the clubs, the leagues and other instrumentalities to do a little missionary work in our city for the sake of the poor children who have white skins under their incrustation of filth, and who are our own town folk and of our own blood and breed. I never before fully realized what the ladies of the Women's Christian Society in their angelic work have had to endure. How they can enter these noisome pest houses and minister to the needy I cannot conceive. This city is not very large. Concerted action would change this terrible state of affairs very soon. Men have been deported; others will be deported shortly. I again ask, that names be furnished to me of all people who belong to the class described. I will visit every house that may be named, and will report to my committee, who will act.

It is from such homes as I have described that these young thieves graduate.

Sermons will not reach them, for they never hear them. Promises of reform are like pie-crust, made to be broken. Drunkenness is the chief cause of the misery. We aim to notify every hotel not to sell to the habitual drunkard, and thus render it more difficult for him to get liquor. We also hope to establish regular visits, so as to keep informed how the parties are conducting themselves, and wherever we find a determined and reckless disregard for wives and children we will bring the individual before the authorities to be dealt with. Moral suasion with a sober man may go far towards reforming him, but my experience is that it is almost entirely useless where the liquor thirst has the man in its grapples.

We do trust that the citizens will make this effort their own and help it along in every way they can.

I am, yours,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

Touring Teachers And Their Expenses.

Ottawa Citizen: The Toronto school inspector and about 45 teachers are touring Great Britain, meanwhile their salaries are going on and, in addition, their substitutes have to be paid while they are away. This will mean a cost to the public school ratepayers of Toronto of some $14,000. Now that the figures have been made known there is a decided tendency to protest, and a good many people are wondering in other places besides Toronto how such large expenditures came to be authorized, and what benefit Canadian school pupils will receive from these travels abroad.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

GUY BROS.' MINSTRELS.

A good house, rather top heavy, greeted the above attraction last night, which gave excellent satisfaction. The military first part was pleasing, the singing fair and the jokes about on a par with those of the average minstrel show. The olio showed that Guy Brothers are always on the look-out for novelties. Taken as a whole this old favorite troupe sustained its good reputation.

"A PAIR OF COUNTRY KIDS."

We have all enjoyed Uncle Josh and Si and all the other old and ancient crop of country characters who come to the city to get buncoed and incidentally to purchase a carpet sack full of hay from a gentleman in a large checkered suit and a fierce black mustache. These scenes and characters have become as familiar to us as "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Something new in the rural play line will happen on Friday, Oct. 2, when "A Pair of Country Kids" will give you more enjoyment for your money than any class of entertainment. Popular prices 15, 25, 35 and 50c. Plan opened this morning at Riggs' music store.

An error was made in Sinclair's adv. last night. It stated 15,000 yards of silks, and it should have been 1500 yards.

Archbishop Gauthier, in his address at the confirmation service at Gananoque on Sunday, referred to the time when he was parish priest there 38 years ago. He said that Gananoque was his first parish, and the first mass he ever said was in the old church that then stood on King street.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend of Toronto is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face, and consequently tone up an aged appearance Be sure and see them at Hotel Quinte Belleville, on Tuesday, Oct. 13.

SHEEP DOGS PERFORM.

Marvellous Assistants of Westmoreland Shepherds Show Abilities.

Three short, sharp whistles from the Westmoreland shepherd on the hilltop and the long-haired sheep dog at his heels raced away down the slope to round up three stupid, staring sheep and drive them through many obstacles to a pen a quarter of a mile away in six minutes.

It was at the agricultural show at Petworth, on the Sussex (Eng.) uplands, that this sheep dog trial took place. Six shepherds from the dales of Westmoreland had come to show their fellows on the South Downs how to drive sheep. They brought with them twelve dogs—dogs that can do everything but speak, and can do the work of two men in shepherding.

The twelve courses were run first through a confined gap with a line of hurdles, then along a narrow flag-marked track. This was the way the sheep had to be driven. Three sheep went to each dog, the shepherd being roped to a stake in the centre and controlling his dog by whistles of differing length and quick gestures of the arms.

The result was marvellous. The dogs understood the language of whistles as well as a human being comprehends words. They dashed backward and forward behind the sheep, steered them through the gap and then round the sweep of the course until the finishing pen was reached.

One graybeard of a shepherd interpreted his whistles thus:

Three whistles, drive on.

One long, one short, run outside to sheep.

A long whistle, lie down and stop.

Two short whistles, drive straight.

"One man," said this old shepherd, "with two good dogs can manage two thousand sheep. They are better shepherds than men. I have known one of our sheep dogs rescue a sheep from a bog where no man would venture. We train our dogs from puppies, and in sixteen months they are usually good at work. They are specially bred, and show an instinct for shepherding from the first. They are the best dogs in the world."

The fastest time for the quarter-mile course was 4 1-2 minutes, and the next fastest 5 1-4 minutes. No sound of any kind was made by the dogs when running their trials.

COCK OF THE OCEAN.

Indomitable Has Had Trophy Vane Made Commemorating Trip.

An appropriate symbol of the prowess of the record breaking Indomitable has been adopted. Every man aboard, from the captain to the domestic, is proud of the ship, though the run from Quebec necessitated an endurance far more severe than the ordinary conditions of naval life. A resplendent cock has been manufactured with a comb consisting of the Prince of Wales' feathers, and the trophy is mounted as a vane at the masthead to indicate that the Indomitable is the cock of the ocean. The King and Queen, accompanied by Prince Edward of Wales, Princess Victoria, with Princess Henry of Battenberg and her sons, went on board the Indomitable soon after her arrival to welcome the Prince of Wales. This was the King's first acquaintance with the ocean greyhound, which made so wonderful a run from Quebec. The Queen visited the ward room and the gun room, and, in fact, went all over the ship, and throughout the inspection she and Prince Edward were busy taking photographs. A number of distinctions were conferred, Capt. King Hall received the C.V.O., and the King presented Commander Fisher, Navigating Officer Webster, Engineer Commanding Ayers and Mr. Gracie, managing director of the Fairfield Shipbuilding Co., with the M.V.O. The King personally congratulated Capt. King Hall on the fine performance of the Indomitable across the Atlantic. The Prince of Wales was photographed at his own request with the entire ship's company, and the picture will constitute a happy memento of the fastest run a battleship has ever made.

$50,000 For Heroism.

Carrying a wounded officer on his back, across fields burning from the heat of a tropical sun, with only the thought of reaching medical aid before the gaping wound brought death to the sufferer, has finally brought its reward to Harry Dalley, of Waukesha, Wisconsin, formerly a soldier in the British army.

While serving in one of the colonies Dalley took part in many skirmishes until one day the commanding officer fell, shot down in a country familiar only to the enemy, where settlements were few. The officer's fall was noticed by Dalley in the heat of the fight and the wounded man rescued.

A month ago Dalley was called abroad by the news that this officer had willed him $50,000, one-third of his fortune, and he returned to Waukesha a short time afterward with the money.

Preferred Pavement.

Thackeray's crossing-sweeper who kept his carriage was not entirely a creation of his imagination. "I knew a man," says Dagonet, in The London Referee, "who took his stand daily outside a public-house, fetched cabs, and did odd jobs. His relations were very well off indeed, and a year or two ago they persuaded him to go and live with them. After leading a life of luxury for a couple of months he reappeared one day outside the public-house. I—knowing his circumstances—asked him why he had left comfort for the cold pavement. 'I had to,' he said. 'I stood it as long as I could, but when they wanted me to dress for diner every time they had company I chucked it.'"

Penny Postage to France.

The movement in favor of penny postage to France has received a check from the Postmaster-General of Great Britain. The proposal was forwarded by a number of business organizations, including the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, but Mr. Buxton has informed the supporters that no alteration can be made.

TIMELY TOPICS

IGNORANCE IS BLISS.

I should like to preserve my illusions,
I don't want you to open my eyes,
For the truth has some bitter infusions
And their taste I prefer to disguise.
If the lady is charmingly tinted,
Inquisition should have its restraints
And I'm not at all pleased when it's hinted
That she paints.

Though for some information I've panted,
From impertinent prying I'm free
And I'm willing to take all for granted
In the matter of form, that I see.
Though politeness might never compel me
To condone certain follies or fads,
Yet believe I don't want you to tell me
That she pads.

If her hair is abundant and gleaming
With a sort of auriferous sheen,
I'm content, quite content, with the seeming.
So don't talk about "rats" and "blondine."
I am blinded, I'm overconfiding,
Like the rest of my sex, I've no doubt,
But unless you have nothing in hiding
Cut it out.

Strange, isn't it, that the men who to-day excuse the Government's great expenditures were the ones who denounced as ruinous the $40,000,000 expenditure of their Conservative predecessors in office. Canada had better get back to first principles a little bit.

Aunt Hepzibah's Explanation.

Aunt Hepzibah was usually a careful housewife, and things seldom went wrong under her management, but one evening she left the lid off the big canister in which she kept her best oolong tea, and a half grown cat crept inside of it and slept on the fragrant contents.

Aunt Hepzibah's horror on discovering it the next morning was heightened by the fact that she was entertaining a friend who was particularly fond of tea and always used it for breakfast. The nearest grocery store was half a mile away, and nothing could be done to repair the mischief.

"I'm awfully sorry, Mrs. Wyckoff," she said to her guest at breakfast time, "but something happened to my oolong last night, and I've nothing to offer you to take its place but —cat-nap tea. You'd rather have coffee than that, I'm sure."

The guest preferred the coffee, and the story never leaked out until Aunt Hepzibah told it herself.

The Marvellous Lusitania.

The Cunard liner Lusitania has made a sensational run across the Atlantic.

The big turbiner not only lowered all records for the trans-Atlantic voyage by nearly four hours, but she also broke three other records.

She made the passage in four days and 15 hours. The best previous record, made by her on Nov. 8 last, was four days, 18 hours and 40 minutes.

On the whole trip of 2,781 miles the Lusitania made an average speed of 25.05 knots an hour, a new record, the previous one being 25.01, made by her on her record trip last November.

The third record broken is that for the greatest day's run—650 knots up to noon on the 17 of August, in which run she also set a new pace in steaming an average of 25.66 knots for the 24 hours.

French and English Tastes.

How far does the great "healthy British public" like to see exhibitions of the horrible? Certainly not like the French, for, although Paris has abolished the publicity of the morgue, a French company like the Grand Guignol can go on year after year, and French newspapers will publish pictures of the corpses and all that sort of thing as English newspapers would not dare to do. To call it "morbid" is begging the question. It is simply different from ourselves.

His Definition of Whisky.

The eminent British surgeon, Sir Victor Horsley, not only enjoys the reputation of being one of the leading pathologists, but he is also known for his wit. Entering his club, the Athenaeum, one day, a friend said to him: "Hello, Horsley! Can you tell me what whisky is yet?" "The most popular poison in the world, my dear sir," was the prompt retort.

Just a Slip of the Pen.

Summer Boarder—You wrote me that mosquitoes were nowhere in this neighborhood.

Farmer—I reck'n there's some mistake, pardner. I must o' writ that mosquitoes were now here in the neighborhood.

HUMAN SCARECROWS.

They Are Quite Common In the Villages of England.

Human beings as scarecrows? Why not? It may seem queer and brutal to a Canadian, but in England the human scarecrow is common.

As he stands out there in the middle of the flat Suffolk field there is little to show he is not the ordinary inanimate scarecrow. He stands motionless for five minutes at a time, and only when a bird is tempted by the fresh corn just appearing above the ground does he show any sign of life.

From the road outside the field he looks exactly like the conventional collection of old clothes propped upon a stick. Even the crows are contemptuous of the figure, and every now and then a number of them appear leisurely above the hedge and settle on the field.

But then it is that the scarecrow moves. He hits an old tin can with the rusty handle of a shovel and frightens the birds and makes them fly quickly out of sight.

So he spends his day, this old, bent man, and at the end he is paid 36 cents. He is the village scarecrow.

Whatever the weather may be, he is expected to be there. In rain he may shelter under the nearest hedge, but he must watch his fields, and if the birds take advantage of his absence he must go out into the open and scare them from the corn.

For this old man knows well that he is competing for his living against the clothes propped upon a stick or the dead crows scattered about the field, and it is necessary that he should take a certain pride in his profession.

Unless he can show the farmer that he is more effective than the conventional scarecrows he cannot make a living in the few months between the sowing of the seed and the appearance of the corn.

While the boys of the village are in school he can earn enough in these few months of the year to keep him from the workhouse. He is still capable of scaring birds.

His very clothes are a qualification. He looks exactly like a scarecrow, and he has the advantage of being able to hit an old tin can with the rusty handle of a shovel.

At 1 o'clock he has his dinner of bread and cheese by the side of the hedge, but every now and then he gets up and looks around to see that the fields are free from birds.

Sometimes when the day is colder than usual his granddaughter from the cottage a mile away brings him a hot dinner in a basin covered with a cloth, and while he eats she talks to him about her school and if a bird appears runs carefully on to the field and claps her hands and frightens it.

And then the old man—this shabby guardian of the fields—is left alone. The only suggestion of life is a collection of old clothes propped upon a stick in the field a mile away.

And when the old man looks at this silent competitor of his he is filled with new energy and strides off to the field, making a great noise with his old tin can.

His New Coat.

They had been chums for so long that when the one gave a chafing dish party to some of his more intimate feminine acquaintances the other made a point of returning early from the theatre in order to be present. Chum No. 2 had hardly made his appearance before chum No. 1, in his anxiety to chatter nonsense with the prettiest girl in the room, managed to upset a basin of beaten egg yolks down the front of his new tuxedo. Chum No. 1 was much distressed apparently, and chum No. 2 hastened to his assistance.

"Go into my room and take mine," he adjured his friend generously. "I've a brand new one; just came home to-day."

Chum No. 1 smiled queerly. "I know it, old boy," was what he said, grinning in a rather forced fashion. "Fact is—well, my own looked a little shabby this evening, and I've got yours on."

Mutual Dislike.

Brahms and Tschaikowsky, the famous musicians, met but twice. On the last occasion Brahms was sufficiently interested in Tschaikowsky's fifth symphony to travel expressly to Hamburg in order to make its acquaintance. After the performance the distinguished composers dined together, and the conscientious Brahms frankly admitted that he did not like the work at all, whereupon the usually meek Russian plucked up sufficient courage to inform his host that the dislike of each other's music was mutual. They parted on excellent terms nevertheless.

Following the Cat.

"I can write," said a little girl aged five to her aunt when she came in from school one day. "I'm delighted to hear it," replied the aunt. "And what can you write?" "I can write cat and mat and bat," said the child. The aunt gave her paper and pencil. "Write cat here for me," she said, "and let me see." The child wrote the word fairly, but put the letter C with its back to the A. "That is very good," said auntie, "only look, dear, you have made the C the wrong way." The child gazed at the word for a moment. "But the cat was going that way!" she exclaimed.

Saves Time.

An old millionaire refused point blank to lend £50 to a bosom friend. "Well, I did not expect that of you," said the would be borrower, rising and preparing to leave indignantly. "I will never forgive you for this refusal." "Of course you won't, my dear fellow," replied the old screw, with the utmost calmness, "but if I'd lent you the £50 you wouldn't have paid me, and we should have quarreled about that, so it's as well to get the row over at once. Good morning."

FISH SUPERSTITIONS.

Queer Old Time Notions, Some of Which Still Survive.

The one fish medicine of which modern science thoroughly approves is cod liver oil, and this, though in far less nauseous form than formerly, is swallowed in tons every year.

In old days a much wider use was made of fish as cures for various evils, and some of these practices have survived to the present day. Some little time ago a boy died of epilepsy in a north Wales parish. The doctor, called in too late, inquired if the deceased had been given any medicine. "Oh, yes," was the answer. "We caught a trout, drowned it in new milk and gave it to the boy."

Eels are supposed to possess all kinds of virtues. In the dark ages of medicine a powder made of eels' liver was considered an absolute specific for deafness and was also employed in cases of ague or fever. A decoction of eels' fat is still used by Dutch peasants as a remedy for falling hair.

But the most valuable part of the eel, according to popular superstition, is its skin. Many an old farmer wears a belt of eelskin as a preventive against rheumatism, and some believe that a garter made of the skin of this snakelike fish worn next to the human skin as a preventive not only against rheumatism, but also against sprains or similar injuries.

Another cure for rheumatism, which finds favor with salt water fishermen, is a red herring. The herring being the most plentiful of all the sea fish, a number of superstitions have attached themselves to it. For luck through the ensuing year one must be sure to eat a herring on New Year's day.

Fishermen believe that each shoal is headed by a king herring, which is more than double as large as any of its followers. They believe that when one of the "kings" comes up in the net it should be thrown overboard; otherwise the next day's fishing will be a failure.

THE HEADSMAN.

He Used the Sword and Not the Ax Prior to 1483.

I am inclined to think that prior to 1483 the sword and not the ax was usually employed as the weapon for judicial decapitation and that a block was dispensed with, the victims receiving their doom "meekly kneeling upon their knees," and in this opinion I am fortified by the concurrence of an eminent clerical historian. This learned writer agreed with me that the ax did not become the "regulation" lethal implement until after the rough and ready "heading" of Lord Hastings on the Tower green, when he was summarily dispatched by order of the protector, Gloucester.

In this instance, according to the chroniclers, the victim's neck was stretched upon a piece of timber then in use for the repair of the adjacent church of St. Peter ad Vincula, probably a "putlog," part of the scaffolding which, we read, "conveniently lay in the way." Contemporary accounts seem to indicate that the executioner straddled over the prone body, and from this position I infer that the decapitation was effected by the tool known as an adz, the cutting edge of which is at a right angle to and not in a plane with the haft.

I may add that the only contemporary reference I have come across of the use or proposed use of an ax and block for inflicting capital punishment prior to this tragedy is in one of the Paston series of letters describing the peril of an unfortunate captive of Jack Cade's rebels (A. D. 1450), a generation before Lord Hastings was so clumsily hacked to death.—London Notes and Queries.

The Hair.

A single hair, which can support a weight of two ounches, is so elastic that it may be stretched to one-third of its entire length and then regain its former size and condition. Dr. Pincus has measured the growth of hair by cutting off circles about one inch in diameter from the heads of healthy men and so comparing the growth of the patches with that of the rest of the hair. He found that the growth rate generally became slower after cutting; that in some cases the hair on the patches grew at the same rate as the rest, but that it never grew any faster.

The ordinary length of the hair on the head ranges between twenty-two inches and about forty-five inches, the latter being considered unusually long. —London Standard.

Beetles.

The Rev. Theodore Wood, a well known English authority on beetles, makes an interesting observation on a little beetle found frequently in the flowers of the primrose, but nowhere else, which is quite a mystery. It is small, brown and flat, and Mr. Wood remarks of it: "How its life is lived nobody knows. Where its eggs are laid, what the grubs feed upon, where the chrysalis be hidden, nobody knows. Nobody knows even why the perfect beetle gets into the primrose blossom."

An Easy Way.

"In order to succeed in life," said the experienced person, "you must not be afraid to make enemies."

"Then," answered the tractable youth, "you would probably advise me to put in some time as a baseball umpire."

When the Adamses Move.

Mrs K., while telling her children about Adam and Eve and the beauties of the garden of Eden, was interrupted by one of the tiny tots saying, "Oh, mamma, when those Adamses move away let us get that place to live in." —Delineator.

YOUR OWN FACE.

Do You Think You Would Recognize It on Another Person?

"How strange it is," said the philosopher, "that the person for whom you care most on earth, the one you see oftenest and who receives your most constant attention is the one whose countenance is least familiar to you."

"Who is that?" asked the visitor.

"Yourself," said the philosopher. "It is a fact that if people could be duplicated and could meet themselves in the street very few would recognize themselves. We look at ourselves many times during the 365 days of the year. We say our eyes are blue or whatever color they may be, our hair brown, our chin peaked, our forehead high. We know every lineament of our face from constant study and attention, yet when we turn away from the mirror we cannot conjure up a picture of ourselves. We know just how our friends and even acquaintances look. In fancy we can see them sitting so or standing so and their varying expression under different circumstances is clear to us, even though we have not seen them for years. But when it comes to ourselves we cannot even fill in the outline of the picture. We may laugh, we may cry, we may frown, but we do not know how we look while we are doing it. Photographs do not help us. We have never seen ourselves in the flesh. Mirrors and pictures are poor aids when we sit down and try to see ourselves with the mind's eye. That is why people are so deeply interested in anybody who is said to resemble them. Just say to a man, 'I know somebody who looks for all the world like you,' and he will never rest until he sees that person. Then if the likeness is really true he will own that up to that time he had no conception of how he really looked."

The visitor smiled wanly. "I wish you wouldn't talk like that," she said. "It makes me feel so uncanny. I am almost afraid of myself."

WHEN FIRE BREAKS OUT.

Keep Cool and Remember and Follow These Instructions.

In case of fire, if the burning articles are at once splashed and sprayed with a solution of salt and nitrate of ammonia an incombustible coating is formed. This is a preparation which can be made at home at a trifling cost and should be kept on hand. Dissolve twenty pounds of common salt and ten pounds of nitrate of ammonia in seven gallons of water. Pour this into quart bottles of thin glass and fire grenades are at hand ready for use. These bottles must be tightly corked and sealed to prevent evaporation, and in case of fire they must be thrown near the flames, so as to break and liberate the gas contained. At least two dozen of these bottles should be ready for an emergency.

In this connection it is well to remember that water on burning oil scatters the flames, but that flour will extinguish it. Salt thrown upon a fire if the chimney is burning will help to deaden the blaze. If a fire once gets under headway and prompt exit becomes a necessity, a silk handkerchief dipped in water and wrapped about the mouth and nostrils will prevent suffocation from smoke; failing this, a piece of wet flannel will answer.

Should smoke fill the room, recall your physics—remember that smoke goes first to the top of the room and last to the floor. Wrap a blanket or woolen garment about you, with the wet cloth over your face, drop on your hands and knees and crawl to the window. Bear in mind that there is no more danger in getting down from a three story window than from the first floor if you keep a firm hold of the rope or ladder. Do not slide, but go hand over hand.

Strictly Fresh Eggs.

There are summer resorts, remote from any agricultural communities, where fresh farm products are even harder to obtain than in the city. It was at such a place that the new boarder, who had eaten four or five breakfasts there, began to wonder why the eggs were invariably served fried.

"See here," he inquired one morning of the genial colored man who waited upon him, "why do you always fry eggs here? Don't you ever boil them?"

"Oh, oh, yes, sah!" responded the waiter pleasantly. "Of co'se yo' kin have 'em boiled if yo' wants 'em, but yo' know, sah, yo' takes de risk!"

The Plumber's Derby.

The compassionate citizen remarked to his plumber: "Gus, if I were a plumber and had to crawl into small nooks and corners, as you do, I'd wear a soft hat or cap. Why, your derby is full of dents." Gus replied: "I'd be a fool to wear a soft hat. This derby hat saved my head many a hard knock from pipes and beams. See, I have it packed with crumpled newspapers, which give me both inspiration and immunity."

A Haughty Reply.

A story about William Pitt I read or heard somewhere many years ago represented a noble mediocrity as assuring the great statesman with some condescension that he might fairly expect an earldom for his magnificent services.

"I an earl!" was the haughty reply. "I make dukes."—St. James' Gazette.

"In what respect?"

"His instrument is not 'a genuine Stradivarius.'"

What a Collision Means to the Man at the Throttle.

PLIGHT OF THE ENGINEER.

The Chances He Has to Take and His Fate Should He Become Crippled In a Smashup—There Are Some Things Worse Than Physical Pain.

"I just dropped in to tell you that the coroner's jury has exonerated you from all blame for the wreck. They are going to hold the block tower man."

The old engineer turned his pain drawn face toward me. A white capped nurse gently brushed back the wild hairs from his forehead.

"Thank you, miss," he said, "and you, too, sir, for the good news. I knew they couldn't blame it on me, because it was white at Mentor. Poor Denny, he'd tell you so, too, if he was alive. 'All white!' he shouted when we came round the curve, and I gave him the answer, 'All white!' and pulled her wide open. Then we struck the empties on the siding, and—well, you know the rest." He wiped a trembling hand across his eyes as if trying to blot out some horrible vision.

His eyes began to sparkle, and a bit of color flashed into his pale cheeks. "I suppose you fellows think I opened her up and went into those boxes just for fun." A smile flitted over his lips, and then he grew serious. "Say, did it ever come to your mind that an engineer might be as anxious about his own life as he is about the lives of those who are riding behind him? My wife and little one—don't you suppose my life counts for something with them?

"Did you ever stop to think what a collision like that at Mentor means to the engineer? Just try to figure yourself in his place. He rides in four square feet of cab room, surrounded by a mass of levers, rods and the like. Ahead of him is about three miles of boiler pipe, carrying 200 pounds of steam pressure and enough hot water to cook the meat off his bones in a jiffy. Clattering at his back is 6,000 gallons of water and 20,000 pounds of coal. Under him is 200,000 pounds of engine, and behind there is 600,000 pounds of train. Altogether he is running along ahead of 800,000 pounds of steel, hardwood and brass held to an eighty pound rail by three-quarters of an inch of wheel flange.

"Why, when one of those big Russian battleships fired a broadside at the Japanese the whole thing amounted only to 24,000 pounds, so the papers say. And that 24,000 pounds traveling eight miles a minute would strike a Japanese ship eight miles away with an impact only one-tenth of the force we hit the empties at Mentor.

"Of course I was the engineer and they depended on me. There is always a lot of fine talk about engineers having the lives of several hundred passengers in their hands. That's all very true, but you don't want to overlook the fact that the engineer's life is right there along with the others. We all take chances, the train crew as well as the passengers, only our chances are slimmer. I had one chance in 500 of being killed, or one in twenty-five of getting right where I am now, but a passenger on the train had one chance in about 3,000,000 of being killed and one in 130,000 of being hurt.

"I see that a lot of people were killed and a whole lot more hurt. I don't want to be a grumbler, but it appears to me that you fellows have kinder overlooked the fact that both of my legs are gone. Of course that might not mean much to you, but if you realized, as I do, that for the rest of my life it is going to be my job to hobble out into the middle of some country road and wave a white flag as every train goes by—if you could realize what that means to an engineer—to hear the mocking toot of the whistle as she comes up to the crossing and to see the sympathetic salute of the engineer and fireman as they go flying by—I tell you, my boy, there are some things worse than physical pain."

His eyes filled with tears. The nurse gently wiped them away and softly stroked back the hair.

"I wouldn't talk any more now," she said.

"All right, miss," he replied, putting out his hand to me. "I always obey orders."—B. R. Winslow in New York Tribune.

A Free Translation.

"And you say the idiot of a teacher told you that you had an extravagant fool of a father?"

"That's what he meant."

"But what did he say?"

"He said it was criminal folly to waste money on the education of such a chump as I am."

Nothing Left.

"Have you," asked the judge of a recently convicted man, "anything to offer the court before sentence is passed?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner; "my lawyer took my last farthing."—London Tit-Bits.

PRESCIENCE.

"The sting of it all," you said, as you stooped low over your roses,
"The worst of it is, when I think of death,
That spring by spring the earth shall still be beautiful,
And summer by summer be lovely again,
—And I shall be gone!"

"I would not care, perhaps," you said, watching your roses,
"If only 'twere dust and ruin and emptiness left behind!
But the thought that earth and April
Year by casual year,
Shall waken around the old ways,
soft and beautiful,
Year by year when I am away,
—This, this breaks my heart!"

MEANING OF "QUEBEC."

Many Conjectures Are Advanced as to Significance of Name.

Numerous explanations of the origin of Quebec's name have been given, especially since the recent tercentennial of the old city, and no one seems to be able to definitely settle the question. By many of the chroniclers of her historic past the name of Quebec has been associated with legend, and some of the derivations ventured by etymologists are as ingenious as they are fanciful. The word "Quebec" has been compared with the "Kepek" of the original occupants of the site, said to have been the expression of welcome used by them on the appearance at Stadacona of Jacques Cartier and his expeditionary forces, in view of their hesitation to meet them, and which the Frenchmen considered as equivalent to their own "debarquez." Others, again, have traced the origin of the name to the exclamation "Quel bec!" (what a cape), attributed to a Norman sailor at his first glimpse of the rocky promontory.

It is now all but universally conceded that the name is of Indian origin. It is first found in the writings of Champlain, who says, "We came to anchor at Quebec, which is a strait of the river Canada," and Abbe Faillon, commenting upon his statement, adds: "This name, which in the language of the Micmac Indians signifies 'straits' or 'narrowing' of a river, and Champlain's manner of speaking, in calling Quebec, not the town yet to be built, but the locality penned up from the river, show how utterly unfounded are the other interpretations imagined for the name of Quebec."

Charlevoix, speaking of Quebec, says in his "Journal" addressed to the Duchess of Lesdiguieres: "Above the island (of Orleans) the river narrows all at once to such an extent that in front of Quebec it is not more than a mile wide. It is this which has given to this place the name of Quebeio or Quebec, which in the Algonquin language signifies 'narrowing.' The Abenaquis, whose language is a dialect of the Algonquin, name it Quelibec, which signifies 'that which is closed,' because from the mouth of the Chaudiere, by which river these Indians come to Quebec from the vicinity of Acadia, the Point of Levis, which laps over the Isle of Orleans, entirely hides the South Channel. The Isle of Orleans hides the North Channel, so that the port of Quebec appears (from Chaudiere) to consist of a large bay."

CHARGE TOO MUCH HERE.

Canadian Authors' Works May Be Had More Cheaply Out of Country.

One of the big departmental stores of Toronto set aside for the exhibition week a special counter to display books by Canadian authors. It has been a considerable time coming, but the recognition of native literary merit is bound to follow in Canada, the very appreciative public of Britain and the States.

The retail booksellers complain that Canadian publishers injure their trade by refusing to issue the cheaper editions which are to be had in Britain and across the border. This is true of such authors as Sir Gilbert Parker and Ralph Connor, as well as those with more restricted circulation. It is an axiom in the book trade that the cheap editions sell the more expensive ones. This has been found to be the invariable rule in England, and the Canadian retailers complain that the publishers do not give them as good an opportunity as they might to popularize Canadian literary art.

Shot Dear Out of Mercy.

Just because he put a young deer out of misery, Mr. Box, of Calabogie, doesn't see why he should be hauled to court and fined.

Yet that is what happened. He says the deer came into his district with its jaw shot off and its leg broken. He finished the job of ending the cares of the animal instead of allowing it to die of slow agony.

But Capt. Alf. Hunter, game warden of Belleville, got after him, and he was summoned and fined $10 for killing a deer, while R. Lee, who helped to eat it, was also fined $10.

Built 5,000 Boats.

Andy Linton of Vancouver, B. C., has built up to date 5,000 boats, and, though he is referred to as the oldest boat-builder in Canada, he will likely add another thousand to his record before he makes his final cruise. He does not build ocean liners, but gold prospectors' boats and fishing smacks. He has built about one boat a day for the last twenty-five years. He has a little sawmill and a few workmen, but does himself a large share of the work of getting each craft ready for active service.

Clung to Rooster.

On Aug. 3 from the fire-swept Kootenay country there arrived in Fernie a grand signor from the banks of the Arno with the most forlorn, desolate, battered, and disgusted old Plymouth Rock rooster tucked under his arm that the wondering eye of man ever rested on. What he wanted this ungainly fowl for is a matter beyond even his own ken, but through all the crush and ruin he clung to that relic of the old box he used to call his home.

FISHING SUPERSTITIONS.

Various Queer Notions Exist All Over the World.

In British Columbia the Indians ceremoniously went to meet the first salmon and in flattering voices tried to win their favor by calling them all chiefs.

Every spring in California the Karaks used to dance for salmon. Meanwhile one of their number secluded himself in the mountains and fasted for ten days. Upon his return he solemnly approached the river, took the first salmon of the catch, ate some of it and with the remainder lighted a sacrificial fire. The same Indians laboriously climbed to the mountain top after the poles for the spearing booth, being convinced that if they were gathered where the salmon were watching no fish would be caught.

Very widespread, in fact, is this native belief of the necessity of caution whenever Adam is on fishing bent.

In Japan among the primitive race of the Ainos even the women left at home are not allowed to talk, lest the fish may hear and disapprove, while the first fish is always brought in through a window instead of a door so the other fish may not see.

The Eskimo women of Alaska never sew while the men are fishing, and should any mending be imperative they do it shut up in little tents out of sight of the sea.

Under no circumstance on the northeast coast of Scotland will a fisherman at sea mention certain objects on land, such as "minister," "kirk," "swine," "dog," etc., and the line will surely be lost if a pig is seen while baiting it. As on the land chickens must not be counted until they are hatched, so at sea fish must not be counted until they are caught. It is good luck to find mice nibbling among the nets. A horseshoe nailed to the mast will help, and a herring caught and salted down will produce wonders.

In the Shetland islands a cat must not be mentioned before a man baiting his line, and among the Magyars of Hungary a fisherman will turn back and wait over a tide if he meets a woman wearing a white apron.

Every year the natives of the Duke of York island decorate a canoe with flowers and fern, fill it with shell money and cast it adrift "to compensate the fish for their fellows caught and eaten."

It was always the custom of the Maoris, the primitive inhabitants of New Zealand, to put the first fish that they caught back into the sea "with a prayer that it might tempt other fish to come and be caught."

If the fish did not come soon enough in British Columbia the Indians used to employ a wizard, who made an image of a swimming fish and put it in the water to attract live fish to the bait.

Humor

HIS MAGIC FAILED.

The Result Was Physically Painful and a Blow to His Reputation.

"One of the funniest things that ever happened to me," said the old magician, who was in a reminiscent mood, "occurred a number of years ago while I was making a tour of the country. At that time my favorite card was the box trick, where I allowed myself to be put in a sack, after which I was locked in a box, which was tied up and put in the cabinet, from which I emerged a moment later, bowing and smiling. It always brought down the house and was a subject for discussion long after I had left.

"Well, I gave my performance one night at a small town, and after the show was over I went to the little hotel and retired for the night, the old man who kept the hotel showing me to my room with all the deference that he would give to a king. The bed in the room was a folding one, and no sooner was I in than it closed up like a jackknife. Fortunately for me, I realized what was happening in time to roll to one side, so that when the bed closed it left my head out. But otherwise I was powerless, and there was nothing to do but yell for help, which I did to the best of my ability. Finally I succeeded in making the landlord hear me, and he came to the door and wanted to know what the matter was.

"'This cussed bed has shut up and caught me in it!' I shouted.

"'Waal, why don't ye git out?' he drawled.

"'I can't!' I bawled.

"'Humph! A feller what kin git out of a sack after he has been put in a box and locked up ought ter be able ter git out of a bed,' he answered.

"It took fifteen minutes' steady argument on my part to convince the old man that my skill in getting out of difficult places did not include folding beds, and even then he seemed to think I had caused him a lot of unnecessary trouble.

AUTHOR--TRAMP--M.P.

BELLOC ONE OF CLEVEREST OF BRITISH LEGISLATORS.

His Literary Work Ranges From Delightful Nonsense Books to Deep Criticism and His Nimble Wit Is Bane of Liberal Government—He Is an Energetic and Whole-Souled Legislator.

Hilaire Joseph Peter Belloc is an all-round man with an all-round brain. He is broad enough to sit on the Liberal benches in the British House of Commons, and at the same time worry the Liberal Government.

His gift of speech got him out of a tight corner one day in a remote part of Italy. He was indulging in one of his beloved pastimes—tramping. He strode into the village, a knapsack on his back, a care-for-nobody look in his deep-set eyes, a beam of quiet pleasure on his Napoleonic-looking face. The untraveled Italian peasants crowded round him. They took him for a spy. They flashed their knives. They gave him the choice of being stabbed there and then, or, tied up and locked in. But he began to talk. He spoke Italian. They liked his voice. He smiled. He told them about Hilaire Belloc. They let him go.

Perhaps the broadest feature about him, next to his square compact frame, with its tight indications of physical strength, is his authorship. Hilaire Belloc has written a book about a saunter from Toulon to Rome, centre of his faith. He has written prose poems about Sussex, where he lives. He has written a book of English topography; a novel of irony, called "Emanuel Burden"; a volume of deep criticism on the poets of the French Renaissance; a quaint book on literary journalism; a work on Makers of the French Revolution, and several light books of fooling. Twelve years ago, when still very young, he wrote a lovely thing called "The Bad Child's Book of Beasts."

He has pored long over many books, burned much midnight oil. But he has kept his strong frame in tone and condition by the swinging delights of exercise in the open air. He has walked thousands of miles in English lanes, and along the by-paths of France and Italy. He has tautened his muscles and cleared his brain by working hard before the mast on the good salt sea.

In the House of Commons he has an extremely serious style of speaking. He feels strongly. When he gets the ear of the House on a subject close to his heart, he throws up vehemence with the energy of a volcano in action. He raises his eyebrows, he draws down the corner of his lips, he grips the top of his head with his strong hands, and tousles his hair with the gesticulatory accompaniments of his eloquence.

The House likes him. He is frank, traces are irksome to him. Now and then he kicks over them. Then the House of Commons sees him at his best.

When Mr. Belloc was returned for Salford he wrote to a friend, "I am now a member of Parliament. That is a fine thing for the British Empire, but rather bad for the little Bellocs." Mr. Belloc earns his living by writing books—two a year—and there are six or seven little Bellocs.

Like all men of deep convictions and great enthusiasm, Hilaire Belloc is capable of an occasional mistake. But, unlike most, he is not above admitting it.

"Withdraw!" came the cry of anger one night last session from a section of the House where the members of a group who thought themselves unjustly accused by Mr. Belloc were seated.

He rose immediately, and said quietly, "I withdraw." Mr. Belloc sat down.

"Apologize!" roared the crowd.

He stood up, said "I apologize," and sat down. The whole House cheered. The House of Commons likes a man.

Twentieth-Century Crusade.

A new crusade, intended to unite art, religion, and the country life, has been started at Hindhead, Surrey, England. The founder of the movement is Mr. Godfrey Blount, an artist and social reformer. He has been working on the project for eight years, and has now built his first church. He hopes to see others erected throughout the provinces. "The Country Church," as it is styled on a carved notice-board, is a small building standing in a meadow. Mr. Blount holds simple services in it every morning at a quarter to nine, and means to follow with evening services at an early date. Incense is burnt, but the liturgy is as simple and unpretentious as possible. The services are attended by young work-girls from the villages round about, where hand-weaving is practiced. The founder announces as the object of the movement the restoration of faith in God, the country life, and land-work.

Biblical Scholar In Welsh Police.

Ex-Inspector Henry Roberts, of Pentraeth, Wales, who has been a member of the Carnarvonshire police force for over thirty-four years, possesses an interesting record. In the course of his duties as police officer he has walked over 289,000 miles, and visited every town, village, church, shop, smithy, public-house, quarry, mill, and factory in the county. He has collected over 80,000 Welsh proverbs, over 1,000 trials, and has read the Bible six times over. He has also begun a Concordance of the Welsh Bible, and has got as far as the letter "O."

Unlucky "13."

J. Darlow, of Cambridge, Eng., the eastern counties' cyclist, was expected to carry off the chief prizes at the King's Lynn sports, but, riding under No. "13," he was thrown out of his three races by accidents. He was numbered "13" at a sports meeting a few days previously, and was similarly unfortunate.

A Story of Blackie.

Professor Blackie of Edinburgh, a martinet in the class room, was one day hearing a class with the individuals of which he was not acquainted. Presently a student rose to read a paragraph, his book held in his right hand.

"Sir," cried the professor in his autocratic way, "hold your book in your left hand!"

The student was about to speak, but the professor stopped him with a peremptory command:

"No words, sir; your left hand, I say!"

Then the student held up his left arm, which ended at the wrist.

"Sir," said he, "I hae nae left hand."

Before the professor could speak there came a perfect storm of hisses from the class, and when he did speak the hisses drowned what he said. Then he left his place and went down to the student whose feelings he had unintentionally hurt, threw his arm around him and drew him close.

"My boy," said the professor, speaking softly, yet being heard by every one in the room, "you'll forgive me that I was overwrought. I did not know! I did not know!"

Then he turned to the students, and, with a look and a tone that came straight from the heart, he said:

"And let me say to all of you that I am glad to be shown that I am teaching a class of gentlemen!"

Limitations of Practice.

In an Iowa town an action for ejectment was tried "by the court without a jury," the suit having been brought by a religious society to recover possession of a cemetery. The defendant, a physician in active practice, had bought the ground for the use of the society, but when afterward he severed his connection with the organization it was discovered that he had taken the title in his own name and evidently intended to hold on to it. After duly weighing the evidence the court ordered judgment for the plaintiff, stating briefly the reasons for the decision, whereupon defendant's counsel desired to be more fully enlightened in the premises.

"Certainly," said his honor. "In addition to what I have already said, there are but two other reasons. One is that the church seems to need a cemetery, and the other is that the doctor has failed to show that his practice is sufficiently large to necessitate his maintaining his own burying ground."

Art Comes High.

"A New York lady," said a Parisian, "once ventured to remonstrate with Paquin because he had charged her $700 for a ball dress.

"'The material,' she said, 'could be bought for $100, and surely the work would be well paid with $50 more.'

"'Madame,' said Paquin, with his grandest air, 'go to your American painter, Sargent, in his little Tite street studio and say to him: "Here is a yard of canvas, value 50 cents, and here are colors, value $1. Paint me a picture with these colors on this canvas, and I will pay you $1.75." What will the painter say? He will say, "Madame, those are no terms for an artist." I say more. I say, if you think my terms too high, pay me nothing and keep the robe. Art does not descend to the littleness of haggling.'"

The Best Way to Starve.

If one feels bound to undertake starvation for a period, it is best, a trained physician tells us, to make the process not quite complete by eating a little at the usual intervals of fasting absolutely for a comparatively long time. This makes freak treatment quite harmless. Physiologists find that as the body is starved fat and sugar disappear first, and then the minor organs are drawn upon to support the brain and heart, continuing until no more material can be spared. Exhaustion is then very near.

Did as He Was Told.

A well known Brooklyn clergyman in a talk to his Sunday school urged the children to speak to him whenever they met. The next day a dirty faced urchin accosted him in the street with, "How do, doc?"

The clergyman stopped and cordially inquired, "And who are you, sir?"

"I'm one of your little lambs," replied the boy affably. "Fine day!" And, tilting his hat to the back of his head, he swaggered off, leaving the worthy divine speechless with amazement.

Gazelle Hunting.

Gazelles in Nubia are hunted by a powerful breed of hounds in build somewhat heavier than a greyhound. In spite of being far swifter than the hound the gazelle falls a victim from the nervous habit of constantly stopping to look back to see if it is pursued. It also expends its strength by taking great bounds in an almost vertical direction, thereby not only losing time, but exhausting itself, so that it is overtaken without difficulty.

A Game of Chance.

"I suppose," said the stranger within the gates, "the lid is on all games of chance in this town."

"Don't you believe it, stranger," rejoined the native. "The marriage license office is still wide open."—Exchange.

Wisdom From a Babe.

"What would you do, my boy," asked a professional vocalist proudly, "if you could sing like me?"

Students, Attention!

It is a common occurrence at the beginning of a college term for students to be troubled not only with a variety of eye and headaches which indicate eye-strain, but also a sort of mental dullness and inability to accomplish satisfactory results in their studies. This condition is in nearly all cases also caused by a form of eye-strain, for the reason that the numerous muscles of the eyes have their power of action and receive the necessary energy from the nerve centres in the base of the brain; these centres comprise one-third of the whole "gray-matter" (or thinking part) of the brain, which generates the energy for all the vital organs of the body; it is thus evident that any eye-strain is a waste of this energy, and the brain being the principal sufferer is not able to think as clearly as it should. There is frequently great strain in cases where the vision is apparently normal; in such cases we give "Rest Glasses," which conserve and restore this energy, and not only is all strain removed, but the brain is free to do much more efficient work. Consultation free.

MISS M. CAMPBELL

Desperate Affray Near Glen Miller--A Murder Reported.

Two Men Shot and Two Others Stabbed--Italians, Bulgarians, Poles and Negroes in the Mix-up--One Man, Who Was Shot, Said to be Dead.

If you want to have some fun
Get a razor or a gun
And get your money's worth.

There must have been, in a house near Frankford, yesterday morning, some such an entertainment as the one suggested in the above couplet.

From information which has reached this city, pistols and knives were freely used, two men were shot and two others stabbed. Rumor says one of the chaps perforated has qualified for the undertaker. The names of the injured men are not obtainable, but as they were Italians, Poles and Bulgarians it makes little difference, anyhow. Perhaps it's better. Not knowing the names, we won't dislocate our jaws trying to pronounce them.

It appears that the row took place near Frankford, in a boarding-house in which lived a select lot of hand picked foreigners who were engaged in Trent Canal construction. Incidentally, they cost Canada $5 per head. Whether or not they are worth the money is a matter of opinion. But as to the trouble yesterday morning. It appears that the foreigners work on the canal between Frankford and Glen Ross, where Italians, Poles, Bulgarians and negroes form a happy family. Recently bad blood was stirred up among these gentle sons of Europe and Africa, and late on Tuesday night it culminated in a general row, in which men fought with fist, knife and pistol, and in which, it is said women also took a hand.

The scene of conflict was called a boarding-house; but, after the fracas it looked more like

A SLAUGHTER HOUSE

The story goes that the Italians, Poles and Bulgarians were the regular occupants of the house, but that, on Tuesday night, three negroes made an unofficial call. Then the trouble began.

HOW THE FIGHT BEGAN.

The Sons of Ham were requested to leave, but declined. Hostilities broke out in a little less than no time. There was a "rough house" for fair. Guns and knives were brought into play. When the smoke cleared away it was found that two Europeans, a Pole and an Italian, were stabbed, and two others, who hailed from the land where hand organs grow, were perforated with bullets. From the meagre information at hand it would appear that the colored troops fought nobly: at least they were victorious.

The affair was reported to the authorities here, and this afternoon High County Constable Duffin started for the battlefield. He had assistants with him, and will no doubt round up the warriors.

It is alleged that some of the parties involved in the affray yesterday made themselves scarce, but the wounded men, no doubt, are there yet.

The affair has caused considerable excitement, not only in the immediate vicinity where it occurred, but for miles around.

ROBBERY ALSO ALLEGED.

It is said that one of the wounded foreigners, carried, in a belt around his waist, a sum of money said to be $300. This is alleged to be missing. Some say the house was "jumped" for the purpose of robbery, but there is no proof of that.

Who Threw the Rock?

At a few minutes after the noon hour to-day a large plate glass window in front of Tickell & Sons' store, was broken. Inspector Morgan Will Hang Medals on Clever Children

Youthful Essayists to be Honored in Schools To-morrow.

At Queen Victoria, Grier street and Octavia street schools, to-morrow morning, an interesting event will take place.

Just previous to the Tercentenary celebration in Quebec, Mr. J. C. Morgan, Inspector of Schools, offered prizes for the best essays written by pupils, on the Battlefields of Quebec, viz., the Plains of Abraham. The essays were written, awards have been made and to-morrow morning the Inspector, with some members of the Board of Education, will visit these schools and present the prizes to the successful competitors.

In connection with this event Grier street school will be formally re-opened, all necessary improvements to the building having been made.

Bad Luck Follows The Old Resolute.

Steambarge Which Went Ashore Near Massassaga Was Once Wrecked Outside Toronto Harbor.

The steambarge John Ralph, formerly the Resolute, which went ashore near Massassaga on Monday afternoon, as noted in yesterday's paper, is an unlucky boat. The Resolute was the vessel wrecked outside the western channel of Toronto harbor three years ago, and several of the crew were drowned then. The vessel was raised by Haney & Miller, contractors, the present owners, who had the vessel rebuilt and placed in commission only a short time ago. The owners stated that there was no danger to the vessel, and that they expected she would be released safely.

These "Toy" Pistols Are Dangerous.

The police are busy and have already confiscated some toy pistols which small boys in this city were firing off. These weapons, although they look harmless, are nevertheless capable of ejecting a bullet from a small shell, which can cause severe injury should the bullet strike a person. It is certainly a dangerous weapon in the hands of those who are unaccustomed to the use of firearms. Parents should see that their boys leave them alone.

BIG GUNS AT CORNWALL.

Premier Opens Campaign There With Many Speakers.

Cornwall, Oct. 1.—The Liberals of the county opened their campaign here last night with heavy artillery.

The speakers were Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. G. P. Graham, Hon. Chas. Murphy, Col. R. Smith, the Liberal candidate in Stormont; John A. McMillan, ex-M.P.P., the Liberal standard bearer in Glengarry, and W. J. McCarthy. The latter acted as chairman.

The first two speakers were Col. R. Smith and J. A. McMillan.

Then came Mr. Murphy, the new Secretary of State, who said that Col. Smith's greatest claim on them was the record of the Liberal Government. He made light of the charges of scandal against the Government and ridiculed the Conservatives for talking of purity in elections.

Sir Wilfrid, who is a personal favorite in Cornwall, was introduced through the medium of an address from the Stormont Liberal Association.

Referring to Mr. Foster's charge of extravagance, he claimed that while Mr. Foster had a succession of deficits, his Government had one surplus after another, the last amounting to $19,000,000. He regretted that the financial depression in neighboring countries had prevented him from having his way in the matter of deepening the Welland Canal.

He expressed his appreciation of Hon. G. P. Graham and Mr. Murphy, the youngest member of his Cabinet, and took unto himself considerable credit for selecting good men, among them being the late Mr. Blair, the late Mr. Tarte and Mr. Fielding. He concluded with a few remarks in French.

Hon. Mr. Graham pointed to the quick work in fixing the break of the Cornwall Canal as an evidence of the business-like administration of the present Government.

LAURIER CONTESTS OTTAWA.

Premier Will Step Into Fight In the Place of Fraser.

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—Announcement was made yesterday by Senator Belcourt of Ottawa, that in order to unite all sections of the Liberal party in Ottawa, Messrs. Fraser and Chevrier, the Liberal candidates nominated at the recent convention, have decided to withdraw from the contest, and that the Premier will run.

Sir Wilfrid, upon being asked by a committee, informed the gentlemen who waited upon him that he would accept with pleasure the nomination at the hands of the party in Ottawa.

It is quite likely that Sir Wilfrid's running mate will be H. B. McGiverin, barrister, of Ottawa.

Thinks Thaw Dangerous Lunatic.

New York, Oct. 1.—Sheriff Lane of West Chester County, yesterday, at White Plains, declared he would refuse to deliver over Harry K. Thaw to Federal authorities of Pittsburg, even should they send for the prisoner with an order of a Pittsburg Federal judge.

"I will have the matter adjudicated in the state courts here," said the sheriff. "I will exhaust every possible recourse I have in the state courts before I will permit him to go to Pittsburg.

"I consider him a dangerous lunatic."

Fight to the Death.

Ottawa, Oct. 1.—As the result of a jealous quarrel, David D. Reardon, office manager for the Electric Transfer Co., is dead, and Thomas Fox, a mica expert, lies in the hospital probably fatally injured. The two men fought on the edge of the cliff known as Primrose Hill, in the western end of the city, and fell over the brink in a clinch. The woman in the case has not been located.

MEDICAL MEN DIFFER

Experts Cannot Agree on James Creighton's Responsibility.

Evidence Is All In In Owen Sound Murder Trial — Dr. Beemer Says Prisoner Is Quite Crazed But Dr. Bruce Smith and Others Maintain That He Was Quite Aware of What He Was Doing—Verdict To-day.

Owen Sound, Oct. 1.—The evidence for the crown at the Creighton murder trial yesterday led up to practically no new developments other than were given at the coroner's inquest and the preliminary hearing before the magistrate.

The empanelling of the jury occupied a much shorter time than was anticipated. For the crown only three were challenged, while for the defence 13 were rejected.

Several witnesses called for both sides gave evidence regarding the incidents leading up to and surrounding the crime and tending to show the prisoner's state of mind. Those called for the defence testified that he had frequently threatened suicide.

Dr. Beemer, medical superintendent of the Hospital for the Insane at Mimico, had found the prisoner insane, suffering from a morbid melancholy and narrated incidents which occurred while the prisoner was under observation and hallucinations, with which the prisoner was possessed. He did not think that the prisoner knew what he was doing when he committed the crime.

Cross-questioned by Justice Riddell, he admitted that Creighton had known that he was doing wrong.

Dr. McWilliams of Dundalk, Dr. Jamieson, M.P.P., of Durham, and Dr. Cotton of Toronto stated that they thought that the prisoner had been overcome by an irresistable impulse, and was not aware of what he was doing.

As additional evidence for the crown, Isaac Dixon, milkman, stated that he called at the house at 5.15 on the morning of the tragedy and saw accused in the backyard and there were no marks of blood about him. The prisoner spoke to him quite rational.

The crown called Drs. Allan Cameron, T. H. Middlebro; H. D. Comper of Owen Sound, and Dr. Charles Clark, superintendent of the Toronto Asylum, and Dr. J. Bruce Smith, inspector of asylums and prisons. The evidence of the Owen Sound medical men was that the prisoner was quite rational, while the Toronto experts both claimed that they had not the slightest doubt in their minds, but that the prisoner was perfectly aware of what he was doing when he killed his three victims.

Rigid cross-examination by A. G. Mackay, K.C., failed to shake this contention, and this concluded the evidence. The jury were then locked up for the night, and to-day counsel are delivering their addresses.

The intense interest in the trial was manifested by the hundreds who wished to gain admittance to the court room.

Ocean Mail Will Be Big.

London, Oct. 1.—The Postoffice Department is prepared to handle a largely increased mail from the United States, resulting from the introduction of penny postage.

It is expected that this week's mails will be particularly large.

The Philatelic Society has issued commemorative envelopes as souvenirs of the occasion. The decorations on the envelopes include the arms of the two countries, with the dates of important postal reforms.

Burned Bridge Caused Wreck.

Hamilton, Oct. 1.—It was shown at the inquest into the Mineral Springs disaster, in which Engineer McFadden, Fireman Brown and Yardmaster Maloney were killed on Sunday, that the bridge collapsed through the supports being burned during the night. The company proved conclusively that the bridge had burned during the night, and that it was impossible for it to have caught from the engine after it broke through. A verdict was rendered accordingly.

Son Cut Off In Will.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—The will of Leslie Carter, once a millionaire, was filed for probate yesterday, disposing of an estate of $75,000. The estate is divided between a sister and a brother, thus disinheriting a son. Of the son, the will says: "I leave nothing to my son, Leslie Dudley Carter, for the reason that he has left the home which I maintained for him without cause or justification. This, I believe, can result only to his personal injury, if not his ruin."

I.C.R. Arbitration Successful.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—The conciliation board appointed by the Dominion Government to hear the grievances of the station clerks and freight handlers on the Intercolonial Railway will send in a unanimous report.

The board secured an amicable arrangement regarding the organization of the work. The equally important matter of wages will be reported to the Government before the details are announced, but it is considered that the men made a strong case and that this feature will be adjusted. The scale of wages was very low, averaging less than $500 a year.

The arbitration of the grievances of the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen made against the C.P.R. will not be taken up until November.

Shoots Girl and Self.

Central City, Col., Oct. 1.—Christopher Crezise, treasurer of Gilpin County, early yesterday shot and mortally wounded Jeannie Hicks, the 18-year-old daughter of Mrs. Addie Hicks, at whose house he boarded, and then committed suicide.

Following the shooting Mrs. Hicks became hysterical, but it was gleaned from her incoherent statements that Crezise entered her home and the shooting followed refusal of a demand made by him.

CREIGHTON DIES DEC. 3

Jury Finds That Owen Sound Murderer Is Guilty.

After Two Hours' Deliberation Slayer of Wife and Step-daughters Is Adjudged Sane and Responsible For Deed—Justice Riddell Agrees With Verdict and Makes an Impressive Speech In Delivering Sentence.

Owen Sound, Oct. 2.—The result of the trial of James Farish Creighton, who was accused of having on the 26th of May last murdered his wife and two step-daughters, is that, unless he obtains a reprieve he will be executed on Thursday Dec. 3.

He was found guilty by the jury after two hours' deliberation and sentence was pronounced upon him at 8.30 last night.

Justice Riddell in passing sentence said that the accused had been guilty of one of the most atrocious crimes known to law. The prosecution had been fairly conducted and the defence brilliantly and skilfully conducted. No stone had been left unturned, no research had been too much, to bring forth anything which would assist the prisoner in his defence. But it was plain that no twelve honest men could have found a different verdict.

The prisoner's career in this world would probably be short. He could hold out no hopes of clemency. He would not, he ought not to say that there was any hope for him in this world. In the short time that was left to the prisoner he could adjure him to prepare for the next world. While there was no hope for mercy or pity here, there was no chance of mercy being refused if he sought it at the proper place.

The judge then put on the black cap and sentenced the prisoner to be executed on Thursday, Dec. 3.

The prisoner, on receiving sentence, broke down completely, and had to be practically carried out of the court by his guards.

ROBBER KEEPS DIARY.

Youth Caught at Hamilton Has Evidence Handy For Police.

Hamilton, Oct. 2.—Percy Bowerman, a 16-year-old boy who lives in the Dundas road, was arrested last night, on the charge of carrying unlawful weapons. When searched at No. 3 police station it was found that he was a veritable walking arsenal. He had a revolver, a bowie knife, a dagger, a club and several other weapons. Amongst his possessions was a diary in which the youth related all his deeds of prowess during the last few days. It sets forth in a graphic style how he and two companions robbed Operator Robinson at the Junction Cut on Wednesday night, and how he had stolen a couple of bicycles and thrown them into a pond. The wheels were found by the police yesterday. The diary will be used as evidence against the prisoner when he comes to trial.

Three young thieves went masked and got $20 from Robinson.

Put Poison In Well.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—Anthony Dacey, a well-to-do farmer of Cantley, has been placed under arrest, charged with attempting to poison Robert Brown, and other residents by putting Paris green in Brown's well.

The wife of the prisoner, who had been separated from him, was employed at Brown's, and this caused trouble.

Dacey will be tried at Hull.

Australia Invites Roosevelt.

Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 2.—Alfred Deakin, the Premier of Australia, sent a cablegram to President Roosevelt a fortnight ago thanking him for having made possible the visit of the American battleship fleet to Australian waters and urging him to visit Australia on his way to Africa.

Roosevelt has replied that he will be unable to accept the invitation.

Grocery Man Is Dead.

St. Catharines, Oct. 2.—Michael Kane, the contemplated sale of whose grocery to Bartholomew Dingle, Berlin, caused many libel suits against newspapers in Ontario this week, died yesterday morning at the age of 67 years. Deceased was one of the oldest merchants in St. Catharines, having been in the grocery business, continuously for almost forty years.

Constable Disappears.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—L. T. Bull, a North Bay barrister, acting for the C.P.R. strikers there, blames Magistrate Weegar for the alleged escape of R. D. Chapman, the special C.P.R. constable charged with assault. The latter declined to require bail of Chapman, who did not turn up for trial on Monday.

Six Thousand Delegates.

Paris, Oct. 2.—The second International Congress for popular education was opened in this city yesterday.

Minister of Commerce Cruppi, in addressing the 6,000 delegates, emphasized the necessity of extending industrial, commercial and technical schools.

Capt. Bernier Heard From.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—Hon. L. P. Brodeur was informed yesterday by Capt. Bernier that the Arctic had reached Etah on the Labrador coast Sept. 19, and had sailed for Lancaster the next day.

Explosion Victim Better.

Kingston, Oct. 2.—Alfred Smith, terribly injured in an explosion Wednesday, will likely recover, but will be blind. His right arm has been amputated.

Shot Himself.

Niverville, Man., Oct. 2.—M. Bronenghle, 32, single, a laborer, shot himself yesterday morning with a revolver in Niverville Hotel.

Diamond Mines In Full Swing.

London, Oct. 2.—As the result of a renewed demand for diamonds in America and England, the De Beers Mines, which have been working only five days weekly, will resume full opeations, beginning Oct. 3.

Farmer's Neck Broken.

Bradford, Oct. 2.—James Hughes, living a few miles north of Bradford, was found dead with a broken neck on the roadside near Mount Pleasant yesterday afternoon.

Farmer's Wife Burned.

Chatham, Oct. 2.—Mrs. George Jordan, aged 28, wife of a farmer in Harwich, was fatally burned by the explosion of a lamp. She leaves a four-year-old child.

Holds Four Meetings.

Mr. Borden Has Another Strenuous Day in Perth.

Talks in Stratford, Listowel, Hanover and Durham --Gets Fine Reception All Along His Route--Had Intended to Address Only One Gathering--Should Manage State-Owned Railways As In Australia.

Hanover, Oct. 2.—Though only one meeting was on the program for yesterday, Mr. Borden found it impossible to escape the task of addressing no less than four, in the ridings of North Perth and South Grey. He also was seen and acclaimed as he touched the fringe of North Wellington and South Bruce.

The day's work began immediately after breakfast at Stratford, where a meeting was held in the City Hall and later in the morning a rousing gathering was held at Listowel.

The afternoon meeting was in a stronghold of Liberalism, but in the way of interest and enthusiasm nothing was wanting.

At Listowel several hundred gathered at the depot at noon, although it was raining heavily. Mr. Borden was invited to address the meeting in the freight shed and this commodious building was crowded. Both Mr. Borden and Mr. Hanna spoke briefly. Benjamin Rothewell was chairman.

There was a short stop at Palmerston.

At Stratford, A. F. McLaren, the Conservative candidate, brought down to the depot at 8 o'clock in the morning the regimental band and several hundred people, and a procession was formed, Mr. Borden, Mr. Hanna and Col. Clark being escorted to the City Hall, J. J. Coughlin presided. Mr. Hanna made a strong protectionist speech. Col. Clark declared the Laurier Government was on the defensive. Mr. Borden declared that the Conservative platform, which had been characterized by Liberal papers, subsidized to the extent of six million dollars, as an insane policy, had been put to greater use than the Liberal platform of 1894. Why shouldn't the people of Canada manage their state-owned railways as they are managed in Australia and New Zealand? asked Mr. Borden, discussing the management of the Intercolonial.

At Hanover, in the riding of South Grey, Mr. Borden addressed a meeting, which was held during a drizzling rain in the agricultural hall. It was largely attended and enthusiastic and Mr. Borden was given a splendid reception.

Mr. Borden discussed the principle of protection, claiming that the fostering of home industries was bound to have a beneficial effect upon the development of the interests of the farming community. Passing from this to immigration, Mr. Borden mentioned Alfred Jury's characterization of the North Atlantic Trading Co.'s as "One of W. T. R. Preston's gold mines." This company was one of the "most gigantic and barefaced swindles" that had been uncovered up to the present.

Another meeting was held last night at Durham.

African Lion Escaped.

New Brunswick, N.J., Oct. 2.—A full-grown African lion escaped Wednesday night from the winter quarters of Leon Washburn's Circus, located between this city and Bound Brook, and after having been hunted by keepers and farmers all night was shot and killed by Edward Radel yesterday morning. Before his death the lion had killed two cows and a calf, eating a portion of the latter animal.

A Horrible Story.

New York, Oct. 2.—A horrible story of mistreatment after she had been spirited away from home in Jamaica was told by 16-year-old Leana Thorn when she was rescued early yesterday by a policeman from a filthy hovel in East New York, where she declares she had been held a prisoner for six weeks.

WON'T TALK SCANDAL.

Fielding Sticks to Finance — Aylesworth Attacks Foster.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Hon. W. S. Fielding reviewed the business policy of the Laurier administration in Massey Hall last night. The speakers generally repudiated the campaign of abuse and slander.

"You hear something about someone paying two cents a pound more for tobacco on an Arctic expedition, or something of that sort, but you hear nothing of the story of the splendid progress of Canada," said Mr. Fielding, referring to the speeches of the Conservative leaders.

"In the game of politics — a noble game as long as properly played—there is a rule laid down for guidance," remarked Mr. Fielding. "Find out what your opponents want you to do—and then don't do it."

"The Conservatives wanted them to discuss scandals and he proposed to stick to the achievements of the Laurier Government. No charge of corruption had yet been levied against any member of the Laurier administration," he repeated amid cheers. He repudiated the spoils system and lauded that "grand, clean Canadian, Sir Wilfrid," and took credit for the fact that men of different creeds and races came together and lived in peace and harmony in Canada. The east had formerly cared for the west, and now he thought the farmers of the west should consider the manufacturers of the east. The French and other treaties and the preferential tariff were shown by statistics to have contributed to the welfare of trade, and the tariff was asserted to be 2 per cent. lower than in 1896.

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth's address was rather well padded out after Mr. Fielding's able address to hold the audience, which slowly melted away. He had a good reception, however, and spoke without any evidence of ill-health. He was the only speaker to indulge in personalities and his assault on Hon. Mr. Foster was only of a general character.

STRIKE-BREAKERS DEPORTED.

Ten on Their Way to Winnipeg Sent Back at Boundary.

Emerson, Man., Oct. 2.—There were lively times yesterday morning at Noyes, just across the line from here. Upon the arrival of the Soo train Officers Agnew and Connell of the immigration department of the Canadian Government, boarded the train and had it held while they searched cars for strike-breakers being taken to Winnipeg, under contract with the Canadian Pacific to work in the shops.

Search revealed about a dozen men who were about to enter Canada in violation of the Alien Labor Act and of the regulations governing the immigration of aliens. The men were placed in custody of the police and all but two admitted they were about to enter Canada in contravention of law, and were thereupon shipped back to the places from whence they came.

Blind Pigs Raided.

Cobalt, Oct. 2.—Provincial License Inspector George E. Morrison, together with Chief Calbeck and assistants and Inspector Blackwell, made a thorough round of the highways here Wednesday afternoon, and the result is 27 "blind pigs" in the toils. About a dozen keepers and frequenters spent the night in the cells. Eleven cases have so far been dealt with. Fines of $75 to $100 and costs for each offence were imposed.

Sir James Whitney's estimate of Mr. R. L. Borden, Conservative Leader :—"There is not a cleaner, abler or brighter man in public life in Canada than Mr Borden." A vote for Mr. Porter will help to defeat Laurier and the extravagant, discredited and exhausted administration.

TIMELY TOPICS

Query: If Mr. Jesse Funnell, Liberal candidate in West Hastings, expects to be beaten by 1500, as he admitted to Mr. Porter, what is he running for? Exercise or fresh air?

Our new story "The Mystery," starts to-morrow. It has nothing to do with the Laurier Government's unpopularity. The cause of that is no mystery.

A Yankee paper accuses Bryan of fighting Roosevelt with confetti. That style of warfare does not exactly remind one of the scrap between Premier Roblin and the Globe, does it?

"Refuse me the Ottawa nomination because of a timber limit!" says Mr. Fraser. "Well, ain't that the limit?"

Toronto's population now totals 287,201. Safe to bet that the odd man is a Grit.

A pessimist prophecies snow, in the case of which, like Laurier, we'll all have a little work to finish.

Another false alarm for the firemen. They ran upstreet and turned around and ran right back again. There's nothing like plenty of exercise, but perhaps the fire fighters don't appreciate it.

Time to tenderly brush the mothballs off your overcoat. Last night's temperature told us plainly that short sermon time is surely over.

Negaunee, Mich., has a mayor worth while. He shot and killed a bear which had been driven into town by the forest fires. Let us consider. How would Ald. Panter act up in a case of that kind.

After last night's frost there should be no more straw hats seen on the streets. Unless, of course, they are worn on a bet.

J. Pierpont Morgan had to wait half an hour for a shave in a village barber shop. Democracy could do no more for him.

A woman in Springfield, O., who is 91 years old, attributes her longevity to hard work. Quite right; there's nothing like hard work to help one to grow old.

As to the campaign cigar now, why is it that, in the case of many candidates, high-grade politics and low grade cigars go together. This is a national question, brethren.

A milk war is on in Toronto, but as a general thing it is another kind of fluid that causes hostilities in the Queen City.

A pamphlet issued by the Ontario Government, relating to criminal statistics in this province, has this illuminating paragraph: The ratio of prisoners committed to the jails of Ontario to the estimated population is as follows: Native born, 1 in 273, foreign born, 1 in 90, or 36 per cent. in ten thousand against 111 per cent. This makes interesting reading in connection with that row at Frankford.

There is work to do in opposition. Give Laurier a term at that.

Premier Roblin having lost his voice the saucy Toronto Telegram suggests that there is now nothing for him to do but make faces at the editor of the Globe.

PILES Dr. Chase's Ointment is a certain and guaranteed cure for each and every form of itching, bleeding and protruding piles. See testimonials in the press and ask your neighbors about it. You can use it and get your money back if not satisfied. 60c, at all dealers or EDMANSON, BATES & CO., Toronto.

WHAT ABOUT LAURIER?
(Ottawa Citizen.)

If it was wrong for Mr. Fraser to cinch timber limits for $1650 and sell them for $100,000, what about the government, and particularly the head of the department, who connived at the selling of the country's resources at less than 2 per cent. of their value?

The voters' lists to be used in the coming Dominion elections will be the same as those used in the last Provincial election. The election Act provides that when a Federal election comes within a year after a Provincial election, the voters' list prepared for the latter shall be used in the former.

A Trifling Blaze.

The Fire Brigade were called out yesterday afternoon to Mr. Bentley's house on Emily street, where a small blaze was caused by boys playing with matches. The fire was fortunately extinguished by a few pails of water. the services of the brigade not being required.

Hill-Davis.

At All Saint's Church, London, Ont, on Sept. 10th, a very pretty wedding took place, performed by the Canon of St. Paul's, when two well known residents of this city were united in marriage. The groom was Mr. John Hill, of the G.T.R., and the bride Miss Minnie M. Davis, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Job Davis, of Belleville. After the ceremony the young couple left for Toronto and other points for a short stay, when they returned to the city to take up their residence. A handsome array of beautiful presents attested the popularity of the young couple.

Jones-Hagarty.

Mr. B. Morton Jones, of Lethbridge, barrister, was married on Wednesday in Toronto to Miss Mary Hagarty, granddaughter of the late Chief Justice. Congratulations to Mr. Jones, who is well known in Belleville as a vocalist and frequent visitor, and is a son of an old and honored citizen, Rev. Septimus Jones, M.A., the first Rector of Christ Church. The Bridegroom is a grandson of the first warden of the County of Hastings, the late Wm. Hutton, Esq.

Died in Cleveland.

The death occurred at Cleveland, Ohio, on September 27th, of Miss Elizabeth A. Gould, who passed away at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Jeminy. The deceased lady and her sister formerly resided in this city, where they kept a private school on Dundas st., at the foot of William st., being well-known and highly esteemed. The cause of Miss Gould's death was pneumonia.

With most men the beard is strongest on the right side.

Qualifications of School Inspectors.

The Education Department has announced its policy respecting the qualifications of Public School Inspectors. While the academic standing is not being raised, the professional examinations are being made to suit the case. In future the Public School Inspector must possess a permanent first-class Public School certificate, and pass a separate examination on subjects pertaining to the work of the Inspectorship. The course for the university degree is to include a two years' attendance at the university. This change in the Inspector's qualifications follows the appointment of a Chief Inspector a month ago, and presages the Government's intention to modify and improve the inspectoral system for Public Schools.

Napanee Sentences.

Napanee, Oct. 1.—Charles Gonyea of Kaladar was tried before Judge Madden this forenoon on a charge of burning barns in Kaladar and found guilty and sentenced to five years in the Kingston Penitentiary.

Stanley Peterson on a similar charge and also seduction of a girl under sixteen years of age, was found guilty and sentenced to ten years with hard labor in the penitentiary and two years for seduction.

Died at Point Ann.

Mr. James McDonald, a well-known resident of Point Ann, passed away last evening. Deceased, who was in his 72nd year, had lived at the Point for many years. He was esteemed by all who knew him. Mr. McDonald was a member of the Methodist church. An aged widow and a family of one son and four daughters survive. The son is John R., of Tyendinaga, and the daughters are Mrs. H. Stokes, and Mrs. J. McGonigal, of Rochester, N. Y.; Mrs. E. M. Wright and Mrs T. E. Caluan, of Fairport, N.Y.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

The cup which will be first prize in the road race on Thanksgiving day has arrived in the city, and is now on exhibition in the store of W. H. Adams, the shoeman.

New York Nationals won and lost yesterday, while Chicago won. This leaves New York two points ahead in percentage. It is likely that the Giants will be awarded the disputed game with Chicago, to which they are clearly entitled. At any rate, it now looks like New York for the pennant. In the American, Detroit still leads Cleveland by four points.

Owen Moran, of England, beat Eddie Hanlon, the California has-been, hitting him at will and outpointing him 3 to 1.

Harry Bethune, one-time champion sprinter, who had a mark of 9 4-5 for the hundred, has been sent to jail at Montreal for stealing. He made a barrel of money, but is now a vag.

At the Tweed fair yesterday, which was largely attended, Major Hamburg was first in the free-for-all, and Harry K., owned in this city, got second money in the .30 class. Mr. J. B. Brintnell's fine mare, Lottie, was third in the lady drivers, and second in the best gentleman's turnout with lady accompanying.

The Canadian Olympic lacrosse team sailed to-day for Liverpool.

Deaths.

McDONALD — Died at Point Ann, Oct. 1st, 1908, James McDonald, aged 71 years, 4 months.

The Independent Vote.

There is in all countries, where free institutions exist, a class of voters who are not what are usually considered "hide-bound" in their allegiance to party. It is on this class of our community that the safety of the country depends. They may have been allied for years to a particular party; their alliance may be the result of principle or of an avowed policy of a party in power, or of a party seeking power.

It is owing to this class of the electorate that changes in a great measure take place in the governing powers of a country. Canada, of late, has had striking illustrations of this fact.

In 1874 the Mackenzie Government was sustained, on an appeal to the people by a large majority, overthrowing the then Conservative rule under Sir John A. Macdonald, on account of what was at the time considered improper transactions in connection with the Canadian Pacific Railway policy. In less than five years the people repented and in, 1878 reversed that decision and returned the Conservative party to power, which they retained until 1896, when, through dissentions in their own party, and disapproval by many of their school policy, they were by a large majority of the people rejected and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and followers substituted as rulers.

What their record for the past twelve years has been, need not be repeated here; it is well known, and it now remains to be seen how far the thinking portion of the electors will resent it at the coming election. The Laurier party realizes the position in which they now find themselves. They also realize the stunning fact that in their own party there is an honest element, which will not follow them through all their desertion of principles, professed when out of power, and maladministration of the affairs of the country, now that they are in power.

At a meeting of the Reform Association, lately held in Toronto, it was stated by one of the delegates "that at least 25,000 Liberals voted for Sir James Whitney's Government at the last election." One delegate expressed astonishment, declaring "he could not understand it." This was one of the "hide-bounds," whose adhesion to party, regardless of honesty or proper administration of affairs, could see nothing wrong in the timber frauds of the Ross Government, or in the villanies perpetrated at the different elections, but the honest electors of both parties appreciated and resented them, the result being an overwhelming victory for honest Government under an honest Premier.

Is not the same result to follow the coming election? If not, it will be evidence of a political demoralization in the country, much to be regretted.

The 25,000 Liberals, who it is alleged voted for the supporters of the Whitney Government in Ontario at the last provincial election, should be doubled in the present contest. If it is not the country will suffer, and a constant and tenfold repetition of the disgraceful acts which have characterized the present Government may be looked for.

Stanfield's Underwear

(Chapter 4)

Spinning the Yarn

The Stanfield mills are monuments to the value of good machinery. The wonderful spinning machines do an incredible amount of work, and do it better than even the best spinning wheels can do.

As the Maritime farmers send their best wool to the Stanfield mills, it is washed—carefully sorted—and shrunk. It then goes to the combing machines, which comb out all short lengths, weak strands, and leave only the toughest, springiest wool.

This goes to the Spinning Machines, where 18 machines do the work of 16,546 women with spinning wheels.

It is by using such improvements that Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear can be so good and yet cost so little.

The pure Nova Scotia wool—the best in the world for Underwear—insures warmth, comfort and wear. The Stanfield process of taking the shrink out of the wool, before the garments are woven, makes absolutely unshrinkable underwear.

The Stanfield way of combing, knitting, cutting and sewing (which will be described later) insures the completed garments being satisfactory in every way.

Stanfield's Underwear is made right here in Canada. There is no duty to pay on it. It is made by Canadians, who know what Canadians need in the way of protection for Canadian winters.

It is made in all sizes for men and women—from 22 to 70 inches.

RED label means light weight—BLUE label means medium weight—BLACK label means heavy weight. Your dealer has all sizes and weights, or can easily get them for you.

STANFIELDS LIMITED - TRURO, N. S.

HOW WE ARE TAXED.

According to the Public Accounts for the Dominion which have just been issued the taxes collected from the people of Canada during the nine months ended March 31st, 1907, amounted to $51,565,000. This means that for the full year of twelve months the burden of taxation is $68,753,000. It is important to contrast this huge demand upon the earnings of the people with the state of affairs which formerly prevailed. This can best be done by citing from the official records the figures of taxation in other years. The story told by the Public Accounts is as follows:

1894-1895	$ 25,446,000
1895-1896	27,759,000
1896-1897	28,646,000
1897-1898	29,576,000
1898-1899	34,958,000
1899-1900	38,242,000
1900-1901	28,743,000
1901-1902	43,389,000
1902-1903	49,015,000
1903-1904	53,661,000
1904-1905	54,020,000
1905-1906	60,074,000
1906-1907—9 months	51,565,000
Or for 12 months	68,750,000

It will be observed that the taxes have been laid on with increasing severity year by year, until there was collected during nine months in 1906-1907 just twice as much as was taken from the people in the twelve months of 1894-1895.

Riding a Camel In the Desert.

Dr. Nachtigal, the celebrated African explorer, was the guest of a rich Hamburg merchant. The merchant's son, a young man of a somewhat sentimental temperament, said among other things that his dearest wish was to ride across the desert on the back of a camel. He thought such a ride must be very poetical indeed.

"My dear young friend," replied the explorer, "I can tell you how you can get a partial idea of what riding a camel on the deserts of Africa is like. Take an office stool, screw it up as high as possible and put it in a wagon without any springs. Then seat yourself on the stool and have it driven over rocky and uneven ground during the hottest weather of July or August and after you have not had anything to eat or drink for twenty-four hours, and then you will get a faint idea of how delightfully poetic it is to ride on a camel in the wilds of Africa."

He Gave Her a Present.

When I was a young man Lady Jersey was one of the leaders of fashion, and her house was the resort of politicians and others. With her lived her daughter, Lady Clementine Villiers, a handsome and clever girl. The custom had been established that all friends should give the latter a present on her birthday, and these presents were set out in an antechamber. Among these friends was Lord Brougham, then an old man. He called on a birthday, but had forgotten what the occasion was, and had brought no present. Seeing a mass of presents laid out, he seized one of them and took it in as his present, rightly counting that the young lady would not remember that it was one that already had been given to her. And very proud he was of his presence of mind. But, then, he was an ex-lord chancellor.—London Truth.

Many Languages of Mexico.

During the fiesta of Christmas or the week of All Souls and All Saints, when the Indians swarm down from the mountains with their holiday wares for sale, visitors in the City of Mexico may notice the strange language that the venders use in addressing each other. Even when they turn to serve the purchaser their Spanish is neither Castilian nor Mexican, but is frequently broken by peculiar syllables and accents. This is merely an illustration of the fact that the Indian languages of old Mexico have not been entirely submerged by the conquering Spanish, and in some of the most remote districts of the republic various and distinct languages handed down from the pre-Columbian era are still spoken in their pristine purity by many tribe members.—Mexican Herald.

Easy House Moving.

House moving is an easy task among the Lakas, a tribe living near the Lagone river, in the French Kongo, Africa. This tribe, which is one of the most superb examples of the savage black race, lives in conical shaped huts constructed of plaits of tough straw. When a change in location is desired, both the women and the men put their shoulders to the task and carry the roofs of their homes to the new site, sometimes many miles distant. The circular walls of the huts are rebuilt.

Who Whips?

The clergyman's little son was telling the small son of a parishioner of the dreadful fights which he and his sister indulged in.

"You don't mean to say that ministers' children fight?" replied the horrified little layman.

"Oh, yes."

"Who whips?"

"Mamma."—Exchange.

A Sure Test.

The schoolmaster put to his class the question: "Two jars of gas, one containing nitrogen and one carbon dioxide, are given. How may the gases be discriminated?"

One eager little pupil said: "Get a man, and let him take a deep breath of both. When he gets the carbon dioxide he'll die. That's the way to tell."

The Mutual Life Assurance Co. OF CANADA

Our Greatest Year

In spite of industrial storms and financial depression, this Company has steadily marched forward.

Instead of losing ground, or even standing still, The Mutual Life of Canada wrote MORE business last year than in any other one year in the Company's history.

The total new insurance amounted to $7,081,402—a gain of $1,577,855 over 1906. And all but $78,000 of this was written right here in Canada.

The Mutual Life of Canada is the people's Company—conducted in the interests of its policy-holders who get all the profits.

is a revelation to housekeepers. Nothing like it has ever been made before.

It means less work, because it does not get dull or brown. The hottest fire can't burn it off.

It means less work, too, because just a few rubs bring a bright, brilliant polish that always looks fresh and clean.

It is cheapest, because you get a bigger can for the money.

SINGING IN GOD'S ACRE.

Eugene Field.

Out yonder in the moonlight, wherein God's acre lies,
Go angels walking to and fro, singing their lullabies,
Their radiant wings are folded, and their eyes are bended low,
As they sing among the beds wherein the flowers delight to grow—
"Sleep, O sleep!
The Shepherd guardeth His sheep,
Fast speedeth the night away,
Soon cometh the glorious day;
Sleep, weary ones, while ye may—
Sleep, O sleep!"

The flowers within God's acre see that fair and wondrous sight,
And hear the angels singing to the sleepers through the night,
And lo! throughout the hours of day those gentle flowers prolong
The music of the angels in that tender slumber song—
"Sleep, O sleep!
The Shepherd loveth His sheep;
He that guardeth His flock the best
Hath folded them to His loving breast—
So sleep ye, now, and take your rest—
Sleep, O sleep!"

From angels and from flowers the years have learned that soothing song,
And with its heavenly music speed the days and nights along,
So through all time, whose flight the Shepherd's vigils glorify,
God's acre slumbereth in the grace of that sweet lullaby—
"Sleep, O sleep!
The Shepherd loveth His sheep,
Fast speedeth the night away,
Soon cometh the glorious day;
Sleep, weary ones, while ye may—
Sleep, O sleep!"

A Paris wife wants a divorce because her husband's hair doesn't match her parlor furniture. Divorce is surely an extreme remedy. If she doesn't care to part with her furniture, why doesn't she pull out his hair?

Photographing the Stomach.

An improved apparatus has been made by Dr. Fritz Lang of Munich by which the inside of the stomach can be clearly photographed. The camera is actually swallowed by the patient, and when it reaches the stomach the walls thereof can be illuminated by a small electric lamp attached to the apparatus. At the bottom of the camera is wound a photographic film twenty inches long and a quarter of an inch wide. All the surgeon has to do is to pull a cord and thus run the film past the lens. The electric light is then turned on, and after the sensitive film has been impressed with the image the current is turned off and another section of the film is brought into play until the requisite number of pictures has been obtained.

Court Clerk's Big Fees.

The Chicago Bar association has declared war on the fee system of paying clerks in the supreme and appellate courts. So large have the emoluments of these offices become, reports say, that it is not unusual for some of the clerks to receive in a year from two to four times as much as the salary of a judge. The Record-Herald shows that the clerk of the supreme court nets from $25,000 to $50,000 a year, while in the appellate court the fees run up to $30,000. The Bar association demands that the offices be placed on a salary basis and suggests that $6,000 a year is quite enough to tempt good men to take the places.

The Man's Turn to Laugh.

A man in Berlin who paid $1.75 for a ticket to hear Mlle. Labia, the Italian countess prima donna, sing in "Carmen" tried to get the managers to refund his money when the prima donna failed to appear in the role, as advertised. The managers laughed at the man and pointed to a conspicuous placard hung in the lobby announcing that the star was ill and would not appear that evening. Appeal to the highest courts was made, and now the theater managers have been ordered to refund the price of the ticket and pay the costs of the suit.

To Banish Insomnia.

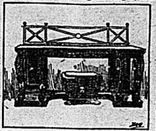
Chloral, morphia and the poppy must look to their laurels as aids to "nature's sweet restorer," for, according to a French contemporary, a recent invention will banish insomnia. The invention is a musical bed. The sleepless and tired man goes to bed and with his foot releases a spring which sets a musical box in motion. The apparatus begins to grind out lullabies and melodies, and in a short time the patient is snoring peacefully.—New York Tribune.

ENGLISH SIDEBOARDS.

Lovers of Old Furniture Searching For Sheraton Designs.

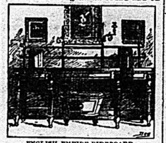
There is a great fancy just now among lovers of old furniture for English sideboards of eighteenth century designs.

The main tendency of the sideboard in the late eighteenth century is toward greater storage room. Sheraton adopted the form of Hepplewhite's sideboard, but introduced many small innovations. For instance, he seldom introduced the perfectly straight, unbroken front, as Hepplewhite frequently did. The front was more frequently serpentine or oval. He was also the originator of the hollow fronted sideboard, which he recommended for artistic reasons, as taking off the appearance of great length, and for practical reasons, as "if the sideboard be near the entering door the hollow front will sometimes secure the butler from the jostles of the other servants." The butler could also reach across the sideboard more easily. The long, slender, tapering legs, like his chair legs, were often set into a rosette at the top. The bare appearance of the sideboard top, without any decoration or finish, did not please him, and he elaborated the device, probably borrowed from Robert Adam's designs, of adding a rail with fine brass scroll work, often with candelabra attached, from which fluted silk or other curtains could be suspended, thus giving a touch of color and light to the whole. This rail, Sheraton writes, was used to "set large dishes against and to support a couple of candle or lamp branches in the middle, which when lighted gave a very brilliant effect to the silverware." One of the illustrations shows the rail with its two graceful candle branches and with a wine cooler below.



EIGHTEENTH CENTURY SIDEBOARD WITH WINE CELLAR BELOW.

The cellaret sideboard and the sideboard plentifully supplied with drawers, which were novelties in Hepplewhite's time, became highly elaborate under Sheraton. The cellaret sideboard was provided with a partitioned place for bottles of wine. In large circular sideboards he tells us the left hand drawer has sometimes been fitted up as a plate warmer, having a rack in the middle to stick the plates in, and lined with strong tin all round and on the underside of the sideboard top to prevent the heat from injuring it.



ENGLISH EMPIRE SIDEBOARD.

In "spacious" dining rooms the sideboards are often without drawers of any sort, but with an ornamental brass rail, and pedestals with vases at each end, which produce, in his favorite phrase, a "grand effect." Sideboards for humbler apartments were sometimes made without either drawers or pedestals, but had generally a wine cooler hooped with brass to stand under them, and they were nearly always without the rail at the back. These wine coolers were often in the form of a sarcophagus, "an imitation of the figure of ancient stone coffins. Some of them have covers; some are without." Sheraton gives one design supported by dolphins, whose heads form the foot, while the tails curve upward. Another is supported by lions' paws and is ornamented with lions' heads. He advises rings at each end so the servants may easily lift them about.

Kitchen Libraries.

"Have a little library in your kitchen," advises an Englishwoman. "I always encourage my servants to read as much as possible in their leisure moments, for I have always found that a little light literature brings a pleasant sense of relief to the mind after the daily worries inseparable from looking after a house. A supply of entertaining books of fiction in every kitchen would do much to counteract the tendency to mental infirmities of those engaged in household work consequent upon the inevitable monotony of their duties." An American woman who has had much trouble with incompetent servants retorted on hearing of the Briton's plans, "If I started such a library in my kitchen the first volume would be 'How to Cook.'"

Boss of Her Own Kitchen.

Mrs. James S. Sherman is noted for her thrifty ways and for the excellence of her preserves and jellies. Her bread is famous, and many a novice in domestic mysteries has obtained her method of mixing from the wife of the vice presidential candidate. Mrs. Sherman owns to having the health food hobby. She is an expert in detecting adulteration. The storekeeper of Utica or Washington is brave indeed if he attempts to work doctored food on the wife of the Honorable Jim.

Postpones Vacation After Working Day and Night For a Week.

I remember the morning when we first met and he told me about it.

His step was light and springy. His color was good. His eye was bright.

"Yes," he said in answer to my inquiry, "we are getting ready to go on our vacation."

"Have you arranged"—

"I'm just doing that now; have given up the day to it."

Later I met him again.

"Not off yet?" I asked.

"Not yet. It takes a little time to adjust things. There's quite a lot to do. But," he continued brightly, "if all goes well we shall be started by the first of the week, Tuesday at the very latest."

The next day I ran across him in the bank. He apologized for running into me.

"Somewhat of a rush," he said; "have had to fix up a lot of odds and ends—get my book balanced and lay out certain schedules"—

"That's all right," I said sympathetically. "I understand. You are"—

"Getting along nicely," he muttered, with a slightly tired voice, as he rushed away.

Two days passed. Suddenly I ran across him in the postoffice. He carried a bundle of mail. He dragged one foot feebly after the other.

"Still at it?" I asked. "Still getting ready for that vacation?"

"Yes," he whispered. "Say, maybe I haven't been working like a slave!" He glanced at his watch. "Must hurry to meet my wife. She wants me to help her pick out some clothes. And me up to my ears!"

"Haven't got things fixed yet?"

"No, no! But I hope to by Monday. Been working every night for a week. But maybe we won't have a good time when we get off! The thought of it is all that keeps me alive."

He shuffled away. Could this decrepit creature be the sprightly one of a week ago? Days passed. A week later I met him again. He looked better. He was walking slow.

"Hello!" I cried. "I thought you were going on that vacation."

"I was, but"—

"You don't mean to say that you gave it up?"

He nodded.

"I had to," he replied. "The doctor said that in my condition it wasn't safe to get far away from home."—Tom Masson in Puck.

Tourists Take Warning.

The summer residents of Weymouth, Mass., were greatly amused by the pranks of some young humorists who were in the habit of changing letters on signs so as to make them read in new and startling ways. The latest escapade had to do with the sign of an estimable old man who advertised on a big board that he would carry a trunk to any part of the town for 25 cents. Imagine the surprise of the incoming tourists as they saw for the first time the bold sign, "Drunks Carried to Any Part of Weymouth—25c."—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Somnambulist.

A man addicted to walking in his sleep went to bed all right one night, but when he awoke he found himself on the street in the grasp of a policeman. "Hold on!" he cried. "You must not arrest me. I'm a somnambulist." To which the policeman replied: "I don't care what your religion is. Yer can't walk the streets in yer nightshirt."

Making Enemies.

"In order to succeed in life," said the experienced person, "you must not be afraid to make enemies."

"Then," answered the tractable youth, "you would probably advise me to put in some time as a baseball umpire."—Washington Star.

The Limit.

"There's nothing that makes a would be society woman madder than to find her name left out of the report of some swell function she attended."

"Unless it's to find besides that her rival's name is in."—Catholic Standard and Times.

AN UPHOLSTERY HINT.

Embroidered Grass Linen Loops For the Summer Curtain.

It is an art to make curtain loops now. Where half a dozen kinds of different draperies are used on one floor, it gives a unity to the effect to have all the loops, at least, alike.

The latest is a curtain loop made of quaintly embroidered grass linen, that lustrous material which stands any number of tubbings without losing its beauty.

Such loops may be wide or narrow. It is possible to buy straight strips of the narrower bands ready embroidered, and they are far from costly. Shaped loops are made to order or they may be worked at home. The design should be something in keeping with the material, and the embroidery looks best if done in white cotton on a colored ground or in a cotton to match the linen. Small flowers placed close together, apple or cherry blossoms or wistaria, are always suggestive of the orient.

When cretonne, cotton, flowered taffeta or any of the colored materials sold in the shops for summer curtains are used, then the same may be made into loops, if one is carrying out the correct scheme of decoration. Draped curtains are not always preferred to straight hanging ones, especially in the city, but for summer rooms in the country nothing could be more pleasing to those who like to see that they are getting as much fresh air as possible. Looped back curtains give a room a cozier and less formal appearance than straight hanging ones, which is another reason why this style is adapted to the country houses.

Antique supports for curtain loops are being revived and are much liked for cretonne draperies. Perhaps they are not quite so large as were the huge gilded metal rosettes upon which the long trailing curtains of days gone by were draped, but in every other detail they are identical. Some even are of colored glass or crystal, in perfect imitation of the old time ones that are so highly valued.

A GOOD LETTER.

Ease the Most Conspicuous Literary Quality of a Social Letter.

Ease carried even to the point of unconventionality should be the most conspicuous literary quality of a social letter.

Elliptical expressions are proper enough in familiar correspondence, but they have no place in notes of ceremony.

Naked egotism is as much out of place in a familiar letter as in the drawing room or at the dinner table.

Extreme precision, whether of phrase, construction or punctuation, is to be avoided. It may be taken for granted that the polished letters of famous men and women have been edited, and it is a pity that we cannot have such letters just as they were written.

Letter writing is a form of social contract, and the first essential of such contact is courtesy.

One might almost as well open a note in response to a social invitation with the phrase, "Yours of even date received and contents noted," as pepper our private correspondence with the slang of the market place, the law courts or the baseball field.

We should leave out of our familiar letters that stupid legal phrase, "in evidence," because it is technical, and it does not serve as well as something truly universal.

An unconventional form that is better excluded from any but the most familiar correspondence is that in which the pronoun "I" as the subject of a sentence is omitted.

It is a pleasant surprise to read a letter that opens with a sentence directly from the heart of the writer, yet most of us are such slaves of convention that we fear to shock our correspondents by any departure from established usage.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Bernard Shaw's wife is a suffragist and marched the other day in London. Her husband told her that he would get into the procession, too, if she would push a bath chair in which he would sit. He said that the funniest thing he saw in the procession was a man with a baby, marching next to a woman carrying a poodle dog. "Only one baby, and that carried by a man," he said. "Only one dog, and that carried by a woman."

There is one sudden death among women to eight among men.

One in each 1,000 couples lives to celebrate the golden wedding.

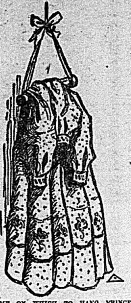
A clubwoman who is considered an authority on archaeology is Mrs. Morton Worthan Sloan of West Virginia. Mrs. Sloan is a native of Richmond, Va., but at present lives in Huntington, W. Va., where she has been president of a club for ten years. She is also president of the West Virginia State federation.

One hears of many funny devices invented by "bachelor" women as a means of protection against an inroad by the long looked for burglar. One ingenious flat owner stretches a piece of wool across the doorway when she goes out, which would, of course, be broken by an unlawful intruder. Another hangs up two men's hats in her passage to make him believe she has adequate male defenders, while a third—much more valiant—always sleeps with the pepper pot beside her bed to throw in the face of any unfortunate thief who ventures near her. The simplest way of dealing with a burglar is to bury one's head in the bedclothes and pretend to be sound asleep until he chooses to go.

A NEW INVENTION.

An Attractive Frame For Hanging Up Princess Gowns.

To make an attractive frame for hanging up princess growns without mussing them take a pasteboard mailing tube about twelve inches long by two inches in diameter and cover with a piece of Dresden ribbon two inches longer than the tube and wide enough to let the edges meet down the length. Sew the edges together, turn in one inch at each end and paste inside the edge of the tube with library paste. This leaves the ends open so that a yard of ribbon one inch wide may be passed through the tube and the ends tied together in a bow. Put the gown through the ribbon until the waist line is over the tube, the waist hanging on one side and the skirt on the other. This hanger may be used for a gown where tapes at the waist are impracticable.—Good Housekeeping.



FRAME ON WHICH TO HANG PRINCESS FROCKS.

A CURE FOR FRECKLES.

Formula For a Lotion and Cream to Remove Them.

The woman who freckles easily and dreads the summer time is to be pitied.

Tan and sunburn are unsightly and painful, but after awhile they disappear. But not so with freckles. They will remain through the winter months unless something is done to remove them. This, as all know from experience, is much easier said than done. They are as stubborn to remove as a willful child when it is necessary to make him obey.

The following formula is said to be one of the best to remove them: Lactic acid, four ounces; glycerin, two ounces; rosewater, one ounce.

Apply this lotion to the face several times during the day. Put a small portion in a dish and dip a soft linen rag into it and apply.

All skins will not stand the same treatment, and while some may use this lotion or other face lotions with no ill effect, others may suffer from a burning sensation of the skin.

To prevent this burning it will be better to massage the face after using the lotion with this elder flower cream: Almond oil, three ounces; white wax, five drams; spermaceti, five drams; lanolin, one ounce; witch hazel, one ounce; elder flower water, three ounces; oil of bitter almonds, one dram.

Massage the skin with this every night and one will be well repaid for the little trouble. The skin will become soft and supple and a dainty white. If the skin is inclined to be rough and dry, it will be beneficial.

This cream is not only good to use after the freckle lotion, but on any dry, ugly skin. It will take away the roughness and give the skin a delicate appearance.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

The outside of a trunk is not the only part that gets battered and unsightly, although there are no "interior" baggage smashers. When the hinges and lining become torn and soiled they may be replaced at home. Strong tape, securely fastened with tacks, makes excellent inside hinges. Body and lid may be lined with moire wall paper, the edges neatly finished with passe partout binding. The paper should be put on with good wall paper paste and allowed to dry before the trunk is used.

The one kind of polish is not always satisfactory with different kinds of woods, and for dark woods, especially rosewood and mahogany, a special preparation should be tried. Melt together gradually in a double saucepan two ounces of yellow wax, one ounce of alkanet root and half a pint of boiled linseed oil. Strain and when cool mix with it a gill of turpentine and one of vinegar.

Tansy is an effective old fashioned whitener for clothes. Place the green leaves in a thin bag and steep for a time in boiling water to which chopped soap has been added. Remove the tansy from the boiler before adding the clothes. Place the clothes in the boiling water, cover and leave to steam, but not boil, for a full half hour. Wash in a second suds, rinse thoroughly and hang while rather wet.

The lingerie blouses when they have served their original purpose can be cut down to form corset covers, their embroidery or lace trimmings making them more than usually decorative.

PROGRESS

Nothing Gained Without Effort

No effort—no gain. Yet that does not mean that the greatest gain comes with the greatest effort.

For instance, it requires very little effort to insist on having "Progress Brand" Clothing, and the gain is proportionately great. If, on the other hand, a man is satisfied to accept the first suit or overcoat that is handed down, and will make no effort to secure a reliable make like "Progress Brand"—he can't expect to have other than shabby clothes and be a walking advertisement of his own indifference.

"Progress Brand"
Suits and Overcoats

Look what you gain by buying 'Progress Brand':
—stylish, perfect fitting garments
—made of dependable goods
—by expert tailors —and sold with an unconditional guarantee that they must give satisfaction or your money back. The man who looks for the "Progress Brand" dealer and the "Progress Brand" label gains a great deal with very little effort. The gain is not merely one of dollars and cents (always an important consideration) but is the greater gain of commanding attention and respect by being always well dressed. 18

SWEET LAVENDER.

Old-Fashioned Perfume Now Popular Thanks to Queen Victoria.

"Oh, will you buy my sweet-scented lavender," sings the vendors in the quiet London squares, leaving one of the most charming impressions on the mind of the visitor who ever afterward has a tendency to swell the demand for the old-fashioned herb. "The most beautiful and romantic harvest reaped during August," says The London Sphere, "is that of lavender, the very name of which suggests memories of old world gardens and prim loveliness. Lavender is extensively cultivated in the neighborhood of Mitcham and Merton and the country around Croydon and Carshalton. Some of the fields devoted to the cultivation of this fragrant plant are very large, and one grower has upwards of sixty acres covered with its purple blossom this season. It is grown mainly for the purpose of converting the blooms into that delightful old-fashioned scent which was so indispensable to our grandmothers, sweet lavender water.

"Lavender-growing as an industry to-day owes its prosperity to the patronage which Queen Victoria lavished upon it. Twenty years ago the trade in English lavender water was practically killed by German competition, and scents obtained from different chemicals. Only a few old ladies who resided in Mitcham and Merton continued to grow the plants and distill the scent as their mothers used to do.

One of these ladies, Miss Sprules by name, conceived the idea of presenting her late Majesty with a bottle of the home-made scent. Queen Victoria was charmed with her present and sent the donor one of those characteristically gracious letters for which she was famed and directed that in future Mitcham lavender water should always be used in the royal palaces. A demand for this old-fashioned perfume consequently arose, and lavender-growing has since been carried on on a large scale.

"The plant is three years old before it is ready to cut, and when in flower the stalks are nearly as high as wheat. It is reaped with an ordinary sickle, and great dexterity is required to cut a whole bush in one sweep without in any way loosening the roots. After the lavender is cut it is tied into bunches, loaded on wagons and taken to the distilleries, where the essential oil is extracted by boiling and distillation. The harvest lasts about a fortnight."

IRISH PHANTOM CITY.

Beautiful Mirage Off Coast of "Green Isle" Lasts Three Hours.

A strange story of a mirage, which reminds one of "The Spectre Island" or "The Phantom City," comes from Ballyconneely, a town on the wild Connemara coast, some miles beyond Clifden.

A small town well studded with houses was observed one evening on the sea about six or seven miles westward. The beautiful spectre showed lovely and dim, being first seen by some young persons.

Soon hundreds gathered to witness the enchanting spectacle, which they state was composed of different sizes and varying styles of architecture. Here and there was a dismantled dwelling, as if even this strange land of sunshine had been visited by the crowbar brigade.

The phantom city was visible from 3 p.m. until 6 p.m., when it gradually vanished from view, leaving dismayed spectators, many of whom had begun to believe that it was a small town that had come to stay.

It disappeared slowly and mystically. The golden clouds curtained the deep where it lay, and the phantom city was seen no more. The peasants wondered if their eyes had not betrayed them, but they had all seen the vision in broad daylight only a few miles from the shore, and they now regard the legend of O'Brazil as no longer an imaginative story from the region of fable.

Reflections of shipwrecks have hitherto been witnessed among the clouds in clear, warm weather, and no doubt this phenomenon is the reflection in the water of some city far away.

London's Strange Religions.

The new Mormon "temple" at South Tottenham, which has just been dedicated, is the latest addition to the abundant facilities which Greater London provides for the exercise of what perhaps we may call strange religions. In the East End there are at least two Chinese joss-houses, where the wearer of the pig-tail can burn his incense-stick; the Malays can worship in their temple near St. George's Street East; the Parsees bow down to the sun in an upper room in Bloomsbury; and the Mohammedan has a choice of mosques in different parts of London. Among the 300 sects in London, all professing Christianity, are such little-known bodies as the Sandemanians, a sect sprung from the Glassites; the Cokelers, whose founder was a Walworth shoemaker; the Seventh Day Baptists, whose Sabbath is Saturday; the Peculiar People, who have a rooted objection to doctors; the followers of Joanna Southcott, domestic servant and prophetess; and the Shakers, whose numbers are now pathetically small.

Rich Coal Discovery.

A remarkably rich seam of coal has been discovered at Coombs Wood, North Worcestershire, England. The seam lies at a depth of 300 yards from the surface, and is no less than 10 yards thick, while it covers an area of 400 acres. Other valuable seams are said to exist both above and below it. It is estimated that in this one mine there is sufficient coal to supply the manufacturing needs of the district for half a century.

Cow's Strange Meal.

A farmer named Michael Penston, who took some grazing land at Arklow county, Wicklow, Ireland, found that the manes and tails of his horses had been cut, and informed the police. A strict watch was kept, with the result that a cow was discovered in the act of eating what remained of one of the horse's tails.

Penurious English Employer Gets Application and Lecture.

It is remarkable what some people want for their money. There was an advertisement in The Manchester Guardian recently for a clerk in an insurance office, "with some experience in fire and employer's liability business; salary £30."

Some wag, who knew the conditions, answered the advertisement, and in offering his services said: "My experience of employer's liability dates from the beginning. I have made a study of insurance law in all its branches. In addition to my vast knowledge of insurance law I converse fluently in many languages, among which I may mention French, Greek, Latin, Gum Arabic, Boer, Germano, Sausago, Italiano, Dutch (Gorgonzola), Billingsgate, Deansgate, Basque, Hindu, and Doodo, and most of the dead languages, in the resuscitation of which I have played no little part. I write shorthand (200 words), long-hand, left-hand, right-hand, and can write with both hands at once, thus getting through a vast amount of work in my working day of twenty-three hours."

This was pretty telling, but more remained. This sarcastic applicant went on:

"My ordinary handwriting speaks for itself. I can supply my own typewriter, if necessary, and may mention that I can type half an hour in ten minutes without straining myself. I am willing to devote my whole time to your service, and give my life, if necessary, if you still adhere to your generous offer of £30 per annum. I am only twenty-seven years of age, but feel quite capable of taking the position offered. I would be willing also to let you have the services of my large family of boys, and if agreeable to you my wife would be pleased to clean your office regularly without extra charge. My references are irreproachable, and if you consider my application favorably I would forward them to you per goods train. The cost of postage for your answer to me can be deducted from my salary."

SIEVIER'S CAREER.

Famous London Publisher and Editor Is a Born Gambler.

Someone has said that the very salt of sport lies in having "a bit on your fancy," whether it be a horse or a jumping beetle. And doubtless Mr. Robert Sievier, who emerged so successfully from the recent sensational trial, readily agrees with the assertion.

"If there was nothing more important going on, I am afraid I should be tempted to bet on a match between two tame white mice," he has said.

It is not, therefore, surprising to hear that he had a bet on his trial, and that he took £4,000 to £1,000 that the jury would find him not guilty. Mr. Sievier went on the stage in his early days as a general utility man at 35s. per week, and, speaking of his experiences on the stage, he says:

"There is a great majority who imagine that they are possessed of histrionic ability, but the principal part they play on the world's stage is the fool. We have yet to learn that talent is hereditary, though the fool usually begets his like."

Mr. Sievier's marriage was quite in keeping with his romantic career. His wife was sister to the late Marquess of Ailesbury, and was engaged to a Mr. Crosbie. Indeed, the date of the wedding was fixed and the guests actually invited, when the lady broke off the match and was married quietly one morning to Mr. Sievier at St. James's, Piccadilly, the late marquess giving away the bride.

CLEVER FISHING.

Australian Aborigines Work Wonders With Single Spear.

The aboriginals of the Australian coastal regions, like most of the native South Sea Islanders, are extremely clever fishermen. In the case of the Australian native, tackle is often confined to a slender hard-wood spear, grotesquely carved. Armed with such a weapon, the "black fellow" will take a perch upon some convenient rock and gaze steadily into the wonderfully transparent blue water. Intuition and long observation seem to supply an almost uncanny knowledge as to the habits and haunts of different fish at stated times, and it is no uncommon feat for this type of fisherman to rise suddenly to his feet and send his rude spear hurtling through thirty feet of space before it enters the water to piece clean through the body of a big schnapper, a fine mullet, or a jew-fish, almost as long as the fisherman is tall. Then the native leaps into the water, and wades or swims ashore, dragging his prize after him by the gills.

Village Lock-Ups.

Several villages in the English Midlands possess in more or less ruined state their old parish lock-ups, commonly known as round-houses. Breedon, a Leicestershire village, close to the South Derbyshire border, possesses its "lock-up," a quaint stone building 18 feet high and 8 feet 5 inches in diameter inside. The walls are 15 inches thick. The door is of stout oak, studded with many large iron nails. The lock is very strong, and the keyhole is covered with an iron plate, which itself has to be unlocked by a spanner before the door-key can be inserted. Ventilation is afforded by small holes punched in an iron plate, 6 inches by 7 inches, fixed in the centre of the door. There is no window.

"No Last Words."

Hon. Sydney Holland, who has written over eighteen miles of letters on behalf of the London Hospital appeal, tells a good story of someone who was sent for hurriedly to see his father, who was in extremis in the London Hospital. When he arrived he was met at the door of the institution by his sister, who told him that the patient had just passed away. Very much distressed, he asked, "What were father's last words?" "He had no last words," was the answer. "Mother was with him to the end."

DIFFERENT VIEWS.

May be entertained about the abilities of opticians, and eye-sight specialists, but the proof of "the pudding" is in the experience of those most interested. It does not take long to find out whether the glasses we sell our patrons are the most excellent for the sight and eye-strain or otherwise. Our many customers, in this district and all over Canada are the best proof of our ability, after many of them had failed to get relief from some of the most prominent specialists in Toronto. The reason is "This one thing we do" In this age you cannot do many things and do them all well. That is why we have succeeded, where even prominent oculists have failed, because the refraction of the eye is only one of the many specialties they have in hand.

Invasion of City By the Pedagogues of Prince Edward.

Visitors Entertained and Shown the Sights--Prizes Presented to Clever Essayists--A Red Letter Day in Belleville's Educational History.

To-day the city was invaded by between 60 and 70 Public School teachers of Prince Edward County, who came here for the purpose of visiting the Deaf and Dumb Institution and also to visit the city schools to see the mode of teaching. The visitors were the guests of the Board of Education.

The Institution was visited this morning, the pedagogues being shown through the various class rooms; also the industrial departments. At noon they were entertained at luncheon by the Principal, Dr. Coughlin.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the visitors assembled at the City Hall, where they were formally welcomed, after which, in groups, with some members of the Board, they visited Queen Victoria, Grier Street and Octavia Street Schools, and were heartily received.

An interesting programme was carried out this morning in three of the public schools.

At 9.30 Grier Street School, was formally opened, in the presence of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Mr. George A. Bennett, Chairman of the Board, and other members. Prizes were also distributed to the winners of the best essays on the Quebec Battlefields. These prizes consisted of handsome books, being donated by School Inspector Morgan, and were presented by Sir Mackenzie Bowell. The successful essayists in the various schools were as follows:

QUEEN VICTORIA.

Willie Farrow, Fourth Book, 1st prize.

Lillian Solmes, Fourth book; 2nd prize.

John Johnson, Third book; 1st prize.

Estella Barragar, Third book; 2nd prize.

OCTAVIA STREET.

Albert Harris, Fourth book; 2nd prize.

Sabra Bonisteel, Third book; 2nd prize.

GRIER STREET.

Martha Harris, Fourth book; 1st prize.

In addition to the presentation of the above prizes, the Governor-General's medal was presented by Sir Mackenzie Bowell to Frances Blackburn, who, being under 13 years of age, secured the largest number of marks at the entrance examinations in June last. The recipient was a pupil of Miss Urquhart, of Queen Victoria School.

A full report of the proceedings will appear in to-morrow's issue.

Fell From Scaffold Broke His Neck.

Tragic Death of William Young, a Prominent Orangeman of Carlow, Hastings County.

Wm. Young, of Carlow, Hastings County, met his death in a tragic manner. He was engaged in painting the spire of the Presbyterian Church at Boulter, when the scaffold on which he was standing gave way, and he fell thirty feet to the ground. His neck was broken by the fall, and death was instantaneous. He had just gone up on the building in company with Mr. Telford, the Presbyterian student, and the latter advised him to put another nail in the scaffold, which did not look very strong. Young remarked that it was perfectly safe and stepped onto it, with the above result. The deceased was unmarried, and a prominent Orangeman. The funeral was under the auspices of that order, and was one of the largest ever seen in this part of the country.

A Heavy Docket at Coming Assizes.

At the fall assizes, which open here on Tuesday next, before Mr. Justice Teetzel, the docket promises to be a rather lengthy one.

There are three criminal cases on the docket, namely, Thos. Smart, charged with murder; Mrs. Wm. Day and Earle Fox, charged with assault and shooting with intent, and Richard Simpson, accused of rape.

In all probability the Smart case will not be proceeded with, as it is understood an application will be made to have it traversed to the spring assizes, owing to the offence having been so recently committed, there being insufficient time to prepare the case.

There are already twelve jury civil cases and some non-jury cases.

School Inspector And County Council Are at Loggerheads.

Interesting State of Affairs In Prince Edward County--Minister of Education Will Decide Matter.

Picton, Oct. 1.— Just how far its jurisdiction extends over Public School Inspector Platt, whose appointment it controls, and whose salary it in part pays, is what the County Council wish to determine. Since last March Councillor Cleminson, Wellington, has been on the warpath, declaring that Mr. Platt, who has been Public School Inspector of the county for forty years, is not giving an efficient inspection of the schools. Mr. Platt has maintained that the council has no right to dictate to him or ask him questions. Wednesday morning Mr. Cleminson brought into the council a motion asking the Inspector several pertinent questions, Why less than fifty per cent. passed the 1908 entrance examinations? What steps had been taken toward a more efficient inspection than in the past, and among other things, requesting the names of all the teachers to whom the Inspector has refused renewals of their certificates to teach, but to whom he afterwards issued renewals on undue influence having been brought to bear on him by their friends in the County Council.

In support of his motion Mr. Cleminson said, emphatically, that he had no personal issue with Mr. Platt, who arose to remark that he would not mind furnishing the desired information if it was asked for in the nature of a request, but he would give the council to understand that they could not compel him.

The matter grew warmer still when it was charged that Mr. Platt had said that Principal Tice, of the Public School, Picton, was conspiring with Mr. Cleminson to get Mr. Platt out of office, that he (Tice) might get the job. This was flatly denied in a letter from Mr. Tice to the council, and in defence of the remark Mr. Platt stated that the report had come to him through a third party. Councillor Williamson, Picton, called Mr. Platt to task for accepting hearsay evidence in such a regrettable misunderstanding.

It was decided to leave over the motion of Mr. Cleminson till the advice of the Minister of Education could be obtained on the point as to whether or not the council can compel Mr. Platt, as Inspector, to answer the questions of the council. The climax to a matter that is of much interest throughout the whole of Prince Edward will be awaited with interest.

Bad Fire at Bradford.

Bradford, Ont., Oct. 2.—About 3 o'clock yesterday morning fire broke out in the John Hill Carriage Works and spread rapidly, so that the buildings and contents are a total loss. Adjoining dwellings, owned by W. B. Scott, R. McKintry and Harry Parler, with all outbuildings, were also destroyed. The total loss is $10,500, with partial insurance. It is not known how the fire originated.

British Cruiser Refloated.

Portsmouth, Oct. 2.—The British cruiser Gladiator, on which salvagers have been at work ever since she was sunk April 25 off the Isle of Wight by the liner St. Paul, was refloated yesterday afternoon. The cruiser will be docked here. The work of salvaging her has cost between $250,000 and $300,000. Many experts are of the opinion that the vessel can never be used again.

Engineer Killed.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 2.—Charles Livingstone, an engineer on the National Transcontinental Railway, was instantly killed and 13 persons had a narrow escape through an engine running off the track about fifty miles east of Winnipeg Wednesday afternoon.

Died In the "Bread Line."

New York, Oct. 2.—Standing in the "bread line" and clutching in his hand a ticket which within a few moments would have given him the food he so sorely needed, a man of 45 early yesterday suddenly crumpled up, pitched to the ground and died.

Doctors Will Investigate.

Whitby, Oct. 2.—The post-mortem in the Lorne Campbell inquest failed to discover cause of death and an adjournment of two weeks was made to enable the contents of the stomach to be analyzed. He was found dead in bed.

London, Oct. 2.—For the first time in the history of the British Pharmaceutical Society, the Pereira medal, the blue ribbon prize in pharmacy, has been won by a woman. The successful candidate is Gertrude H. Wren.

Engineer Found Dead.

Galt, Oct. 2.—Tobias Andrich of Paris, aged 56, the engineer at the G.V.R. power-house, about eleven miles from Galt, was found dead at his post about 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

The deceased was lying on the floor of the power-house within a few feet of the engine.

A Champion's Descent.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—Harry Bethune, at one time short distance champion runner of the world, and the man who set the hundred yard mark at .94-5, and time and again repeated the feat, was sent to jail here yesterday for one month on a charge of having stolen a scarf pin.

No Promises.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—M. Martin, Liberal candidate in St. Mary's Division, Montreal, interviewed Sir Thomas Shaughnessy with regard to a speedy settlement of the C.P.R. mechanics' strike. Sir Thomas received him courteously, but promised nothing.

Ancient Chains.

[illegible] authorities," says an English writer, "give the Britons credit for originating the cable chain because Julius Caesar is recorded as having been unable to cut the cables of the Gaul's vessels, 'as they were made of iron.' This may have been a chain in the present acceptation of the term, but it is doubtful, because the first patent for chainmaking was obtained in England in 1634 by a blacksmith named Philip White. The patent was for fourteen years, and in consideration of it White had to pay £5 in lawful money yearly 'at the exchequer, Westminster, att the Feast of the Blessed Virgyn and Saint Michell the Archangell by even and eual process.'

"His patent is described as follows: 'A way for the wearing of shipps with iron chaynes by finding out the true heating (pre)pareing and tempering of Iyron for that (pur)pose and that he hath nowe attayned to the true vse of the said chaynes and that the same wilbe for the great saveing of cordage and safety of shippers and will redound to good of our Comon Wealth.'"

EXPRESS IS WRECKED

C. P. R. Train Plunges Into a Freight on Siding.

Engineer Is Killed and Two Others Injured In Disaster at Mimico—Green Operator Blamed For Leaving Switch Open Has Disappeared —Doctor Heroically Gives Anaesthetic to Imprisoned Sufferer.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Through the neglect, supposedly, of an oprator, Nicholas Taggart, or McTaggart, the C.P.R. express, Hamilton bound, dashed into an open switch at Mimico last evening and crashd into a G.T.R. shunting engine.

Th collision brought instant death to the C.P.R. engineer, Wm. Quinn, of West Toronto, while his fireman, Willis Jarvis, also of the suburb city, is now in the Western Hospital in a serious condition with a broken and scalded legs.

G.T.R. Engineer John Smith of this city sustained a broken leg.

Jarvis was held in the wreckage for some time. He was suffering the excruciating pain, and to relieve the suffering Dr. Godfrey, M.P.P., pluckily crawled twice into the debris and administer an anaesthetic.

The operator could not be found after the accident. One report has it that last night was his first on the job, but this an official denies, and says he has been on that duty for a fortnight. He came from Teeswater.

It is claimed that Taggart (or McTaggart) acting as a sort of combination switchman, operator and yardman, and stationed some 200 yards from the scene of the wreck, left the switch open and the express took to the siding on which G.T.R. engine 931 happened to be. The impact sent the latter engine 250 yards along the track while the shock threw Quinn from his cab a distance of some 20 feet. His skull was fractured and he died instantly.

Willis Jarvis, the fireman, was jammed with his right leg against the fire-box of the engine, the front wheels of which were derailed.

The fireman, though suffering intensely, displayed signal heroism. Between his cries of pain, he directed those without how to release him. Every effort was made to break into the collapsed cab, and finally the wreckage was pulled away.

The screams of the fireman were agonizing and Dr. Forbes Godfrey crawled in through the narrowed window of the engine cab and gave a hyperdermic injection to the fireman's leg, which lay roasting against the firebox. The screams continued and again the doctor made the dangerous trip in through the clouds of escaping steam to the suffering man and administered an anaesthetic.

Lashes For Brute.

Berlin, Oct. 2.—Milton McCulloch of North Dumfries was yesterday sentenced to 2 1-2 years in Kingston Penitentiary and to receive 14 lashes for an assault committed on a 12-year-old girl on Sept. 6 last.

Justice Boyd commented strongly on the crime, which, he was told was altogether too common in ths country, and he hoped the sentence passed would be a strong deterrent to others.

The prisoner was deeply affected and completely broke down, crying aloud as he was led from the court room.

Hopeful of Settlement.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—The labor leaders who have been in the city for the past few days in connection with the C.P.R. mechanics' strike appear today to be so hopeful of a settlement that they are planning to leave town on Monday. They state that high influences are being brought to bear to end the difficulty.

At C.P.R. headquarters yesterday it was announced that no advances had yet been made to the company looking towards a meeting between the railroad officials and the union representatives.

Ordered Strikers Out.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 2.—At McAdam Junction, a divisional point on the C.P.R., practically all the railway employes reside in houses owned by the company. Wednesday all the men now on strike were ordered to vacate the premises immediately, and the houses will be occupied by strike-breakers.

Schooner Broke Her Back.

St. Stephen, Oct. 2.—In the harbor this summer the schooner E. Waterman, belonging to James Murchie, Sons & Co., and loaded with coal, while trying to take her place at the wharf for discharging, got caught on the gridiron with her stern unsupported, and broke in two when the tide left her.

Three Die In Wreck.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Oct. 2.—Three laborers were killed and seven injured in a collision between a work train and a freight train on the Central New England, near Clinton Corners, 15 miles east of this city.

The trains met on a curve.

Posting Letters In London.

London, Oct. 2.—A number of persons posted letters at last midnight, determined to be at least among the first to take advantage of the cheaper rate. Their letters, however, will not leave until Saturday, for the first penny mail will be taken out by the steamship Lusitania.

Big Round-House Burned.

Montreal, Oct. 2.—The loss will be nearly $100,000 as the result of the destruction of the C.P.R. round-house at Outremont yesterday morning. Three locomotives were damaged.

Explosion Kills Ten.

Charlotte, N.C., Oct. 2.—A powder-house at Spencer, 55 miles north of Charlotte, blew up last night, killing ten persons and injuring 20. Many buildings were wrecked.

GIRL BLAMES REARDON.

Ellena Williams' Story of Ottawa Fight Fatality.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—A warrant was issued by the police yesterday for the arrest of Thomas Fox on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the tragedy of Wednesday night, whereby David Reardon, assistant manager of the Electric Transfer Co. of Ottawa, lost his life. Further details of the quarrel between the two men show that, according to the story told by Ellena Williams, the girl in the case, Reardon approached her and Fox while they were sitting near the edge of the cliff behind the convent on Primrose avenue, and told Fox he was a private detective and the latter had better move on and do his courting in a less public place. Fox moved away, and Reardon, it is said, insulted the girl. Fox then came back and attacked Reardon. In the fight which followed both men fell over the cliff, which at this point is forty feet high. Reardon was almost instantly killed, but Fox, who is 33 years of age, and an employe of the Laurentide Mica Co., escaped with a compound fracture of the right arm and a few bruises. He is now in the hospital. The girl is an English immigrant, and is being held by the police as a witness.

RAVISHED AFTER DEATH.

Post-Mortem Is Held Over Body of Mrs. Peak.

Stratford, Oct. 2.—The post-mortem in the case of Mrs. William Peak who was murdered on Wednesday, revealed that the victim had been ravished after she had been done to death. There was no evidence of death from strangulation, death being rather due to shock.

The theory that the negro, Roghmond, her alleged assailant, is partially insane is discredited at the jail, where during twenty days' imprisonment, he gave evidence of being a remarkably shrewd chap and chatted intelligently.

He carried on a running conversation in French occasionally. He claims to have hailed from Three Rivers, Que.

Feeling against the prisoner, who is now locked up at the county jail, is running high.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Rain put out the forest fires in New Brunswick.

Brantford's population is 20,663, an increase of 700.

Cobourg will have a local option vote in January. Eleven licenses are effected.

Cholera record at St. Petersburg yesterday was: New cases, 225; deaths, 23.

Fire at the Lambton Golf Club, originating from the chimney, caused $500 damage yesterday.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., has commenced his labors in the Hartford Carpet Corporation factory.

J. W. Ferguson of Alton, Lennox County, Scotland, has contributed £10 towards the prizes for Clydesdale horses at next year's exhibition.

The northwest corner of Church and Richmond streets, Toronto, has been sold to the McLaughlin Carriage Co. of Oshawa for $30,000, and a big garage will be erected.

The sitting of the tenth division court lasted exactly one hour yesterday morning. There were sixty cases on the list, which makes the exact count one case a minute.

Fred McGraw, for many years passenger yardmaster for the Grand Trunk in the Toronto terminals, has been appointed assistant claims agent, with headquarters there. He will be succeeded by Mr. Leonard Evey.

Mrs. Agnes Ditchkum Burton receives the estate of her late husband, William Stalker Burton. His will has been filed for probate. The estate totals $4,764.35, and includes an equity of $4,700 in a house on Roxborough avenue, Toronto.

New Zealand's Subsidy.

Wellington, N.Z., Oct. 2.—The bill increasing the naval subsidy to £100,000 annually was read a third time. Some members advocated compulsory service. Sir Joseph Ward stated that, great as had been the enthusiasm over the visit of the American fleet, he had no hesitation in saying the welcome which would be given a British fleet if it came would be incomparably more cordial.

Jilted Girl Wants $20,000.

West Toronto, Oct. 2.—Miss Wilhelmina Cummings of 25 South Union street has issued a writ for $20,000 against Roland M. Boswell of Elora, for breach of promise. June 30 was the date fixed for the ceremony, but Boswell left prior to the hour fixed for event and has since been touring the British Isles and Europe. Miss Cummings has retained A. J. Anderson.

Six Boys Killed.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 2.—Six boys are reported killed at Sugar Ridge when a freight train on the Toledo & Ohio Central Railroad crashed into a heavy laden excursion train returning from the Fair at Bowling Green. It is said that every person in the rear coach of the excursion train was killed.

Hamilton's Population.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—The official returns were given out by Assessment Commissioner McLeod last evening. They show that the population of Hamilton is now 66,967, or an increase of 2,900 over last year.

One Was Shot.

Trenton, Oct. 2.—In a row between negro and Italian laborers at Frankford, in which the Italians claim they were set upon to be robbed, one negro sustained a slight bullet wound and another was cut.

Cuba Wants Canadian Potatoes.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 2.—A Cuban merchant, Bartole Quig, of Havana, is in New Brunswick looking for potatoes, and will likely visit Prince Edward Island.

Burglars at Grand Valley.

ngeville, Oct. 3.—Burglars broke the postoffice at Grand Valley, a large number of letters, and ring the contents on the floor. arge registered box was also stolen, addressed to Mrs. W. J. Taylor.

The jewelry store of J. Gilders was visited, presumably by the same gang, and a case containing some 25 customers' gold and silver watches was stolen. They are valued at about $600.

The burglars effected entry by prying open the doors of both places.

A New York Enquiry.

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 3.—An investigation into the Finance Department of New York city is to be made by the state civil service commission, according to an announcement made by the commission last night.

The proposed investigation is the result of complaints made against Comptroller Metz's department by the Civil Service Reform Association, alleging violations of the administrations of the civil service laws and rules.

Three Firemen Killed.

Youngstown, Ohio, Oct. 3.—Five firemen are in the hospital and three more are in the ruins of S. H. Knox & Co.'s store, which burned Thursday night.

The missing are: Fire Chief Thos. Reilly, Capt. Charles Vaughan and Fireman Edward Sweeney. Fatally injured: Chief of Police William Slater. The firemen were fighting the flames from the roof when the whole interior of the building gave way.

A Heartless Crime.

London, Oct. 3.—(C. A. P.)—Upon discovering that Ernest Gray, who went to Canada three weeks ago, with the aid of money she lent him, was also engaged to another woman, Ethel Bowbrick, a housemaid, suicided.

It was stated that three other women were also making enquiries about him, and a juryman said that Gray was a heartless scoundrel.

The Leader Visits Simcoe.

Mr. R. L. Borden Addresses Big Crowd in the Rink.

Forty-Five Hundred Join in Giving Him a Big Reception—Candidate McCall Favors Public Ownership—Laurier Has Thrown Away Opportunities in Matter of Imperial Preference, Says Mr. Borden.

Simcoe, Oct. 3.—The largest meeting outside of Toronto of the tour of the Conservative leader was held here last night.

Mr. Borden came to town at noon from Durham and spent the afternoon in company with the party of stalwarts viewing the points of interest. Last night the new rink, which has accommodation for [illegible] persons, was three-quarters filled. Special trains brought in several hundred people. With the Tillsonburg band three hundred came from Delhi and Courtland, 150 from Port Rowan and equal number from Port Dover.

H. Harding, president of the Norfolk Conservative Association, was in the chair. He had on the platform with him, beside the visiting speakers, Hon. David Tisdale, the late member, Alex. McCall, the candidate in this contest; Hugh P. Innes and A. C. Pratt, the members-elect of the Legislature.

Mr. McCall, the candidate, made a straight cut declaration in favor of public ownership. He said he was squarely behind Mr. Borden, who was the first leader of a political party to come out in favor of reforms the country had been waiting for for years.

"We must," he said, "commence to apply public ownership to the people's services. It is only protection people have against extortion."

The Conservative leader was given a splendid reception.

Passing to a consideration of public questions, Mr. Borden discussed the preference, charging Sir Wilfrid Laurier with having thrown away the chance of securing concessions in the British market. This mutual preference would, in his opinion, make the products of every Norfolk County farm worth at least 25 per cent. more. The action of Sir Wilfrid Laurier was a distinct violation of a distinct engagement made with the people of this country, "and I venture to think," he said, "that the mutual preference will one day be accomplished."

No One to Blame.

Brantford, Oct. 3.—No one is blamed for the explosion disaster. After sitting all night the coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict in connection with the recent explosion which wrecked Colborne street buildings and caused two deaths. The verdict was that the explosion was due to natural gas, which had been ignited by either Holstock or Blayborough, one of whom lighted a match while the two were sitting on the steps in front of the theatorium. Further it was held that gas had leaked into the theatorium cellar through a lead end pipe which had been connected with the new main by mistake.

The jury did not refer to the responsibility or place the blame.

Teachers Visit Birmingham.

London, Oct. 3.—(C.A.P.) A large party of Canadian teachers, under the leadership of J. L. Hughes, visited Birmingham, and at a meeting Sir Oliver Lodge expressed the hope that the Canadian teachers would derive satisfaction from their visit to Birmingham.

In acknowledging the welcome, Mr. Hughes congratulated the English teachers on the development of their system, and especially on the fact that they were freeing themselves from the control of a department which was in danger of becoming tyrannical.

Brakeman Badly Hurt.

Selkirk, Man., Oct. 3.—Yesterday morning a rear-end collision of two C.P.R. freight trains occurred at East Selkirk. Four cars of coal took fire and several of the train hands were slightly injured and George Bailey, a brakeman, being removed to the Winnipeg General Hospital. He is in a critical condition. He is 23 years of age and is a Kenora man.

Hamilton Conservatives Choose.

Hamilton, Oct. 3.—The Conservatives of West and East Hamilton last night selected their candidates for the Commons. Mayor Stewart was the unanimous choice in the west and Samuel Barker, M.P., for the east. No other names were mentioned in either case, and both candidates were given a very hearty reception.

Boer Director Sails.

London, Oct. 3.—(C.A.P.)—Hon. F. M. Smith, director of agriculture for the Transvaal, sailed yesterday for Canada and the United States on a mission in connection with agricultural development of the Transvaal. Boer students for Canada are also sailing.

Firebugs Sent to Kingston.

Napanee, Oct. 3.—Charles Gonyea was sent to Kingston Penitentiary for five years for arson, and on a similar charge Stanley Peterson, aged 16, got ten years. Peterson also got two years for seducing a girl under 16 years of age.

Hurricane In Bahamas.

Nassau, New Providence, Bahamas, Oct. 3.—A hurricane swept over New Providence Thursday. There was no serious damage ashore, but several vessels were blown out to sea and it is estimated that six lives were lost.

Caught In Shafting.

Kingston, Oct. 3.—John Lillon, aged 65, was terribly injured at the locomotive works and may not recover. He was caught while oiling machinery in the shafting. He has four ribs broken, as well as other injuries.

Don't Want Election Jobs.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—From the new provinces of the northwest the Secretary of State is daily in receipt of refusals to act as enumerators and deputy returning officers.

The scale of fees prescribed in the Election Act is totally inadequate to compensate officials in the west who have long distances to travel in sections remote from the railway line.

C.P.R. Superintendent Leaves.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 3.—Superintendent Arundel of the Pacific division, Canadian Pacific Railway, left here yesterday to take the position at Winnipeg of general superintendent, succeeding R. R. Jamieson.

Winnipeg, Oct. 3.—It is said that Jamieson is resigning to accept a position in a private enterprise at Calgary.

Bylaws Carry Unanimously.

Milton, Oct. 3.—The two bylaws voted on at Milton yesterday were carried by a majority of 232 for the Pleberston Manufacturing Co., and the Wilmott Farm Implement Manufacturing Co., not one vote having been polled against them.

Oakville Fair Opens.

Oakville, Oct. 3.—Lieutenant-Governor J. M. Gibson performed his first public act yesterday since being sworn into office, by declaring open the annual fair at Oakville. He came out from Toronto accompanied by Mrs. Gibson.

Sir James Whitney's estimate of Mr. R. L. Borden, Conservative Leader :—"There is not a cleaner, abler or brighter man in public life in Canada than Mr Borden." A vote for Mr. Porter will help to defeat Laurier and the extravagant, discredited and exhausted administration.

TIMELY TOPICS

A correspondent complains of the location of some of the polling booths for the election on October 26th. Well, don't blame us, please; WE didn't pick 'em out.

Annual meeting of W.C.A. on Tuesday afternoon next. Citizens who have the time should attend and show their appreciation of the work of that noble and self-sacrificing band of ladies.

Despatch from Bancroft says wolves and bears are very numerous in North Hastings. Serious state of affairs. We rise to remark, however, that wolves are numerous all over the Dominion. They walk on two legs, are called Grit heelers, and are after timber limits, etc. Some of 'em masquerade in sheep's clothing, like the editor of the Globe. And there are others.

The glorious sunsets these evenings remind one of the smiles of the coal men since the cool weather came on.

A hundred and twenty-five miles of timber burned in the Mackenzie River basin. Think of that: when Sifton's brother-in-law might have had it all.

Pity Roblin couldn't finish his work of finishing the Globe.

A college authority in Yankeeland says 60 per cent. of the footballers say their prayers every night. They'd need to, playing a harmless game like that.

A team of horses behind which Laurier was riding ran away when they heard the bagpipes and came near wiping out the chief asset of the Liberal party. Laurier has no business with the bagpipes. Tin horns are nearer his size.

Some stores have already started their furnaces. Others will continue to save coal till the clerks develop enough chilblains to last them till next summer.

A Chicago cab driver has agreed to put $1 a week into his first born son's savings bank until the latter is 21. How many people will the generous father overcharge during those 21 years?

One thing that makes us feel almost certain the Conservative party will win in the next election is the fact that a certain large paper in Montreal and another in Toronto are "on the fence" this time. The party led by Mr. Borden has been hoodooed by those papers for years, but there seems to be hope at last.

A Yankee philosopher says the married men of America are the most independent class on earth. He probably means when their wives are out of town.

President Roosevelt's son has a job at $6 per week. In a carpet factory, too. Doesn't that beat all?

An English walker has cut the 100-mile record to eighteen hours, four minutes, 10 1-5 seconds. The Port Hope-Toronto trip should be pie for him.

Already the Ontario Curling Association has drafted its schedule. Hoot, mon! Are we that close to winter?

A farmer in New York state committed suicide because he could not get help to harvest his crops. And this, too, in a country which is said to be full of unemployed men.

PILES Dr. Chase's Ointment is a certain and guaranteed cure for each and every form of itching, bleeding and protruding piles. See testimonials in the press and ask your neighbors about it. You can use it and get your money back if not satisfied. 60c, at all dealers or EDMANSON, BATES & CO., Toronto.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

No reasonable offer should be refused for your summer suit now.

Toronto News: The issues in this contest are very like those which divided the parties in Ontario in 1905, and, generally speaking, so far as can be ascertained, the bulk of Liberals who supported Sir James Whitney a few months ago will support Mr. Borden on October 26. The failure of the Government to put up candidates in Toronto is a confession of weakness to the whole country and conclusive evidence that the Liberal managers feel that Sir Wilfrid Laurier cannot do much better in Ontario than did Mr. MacKay and the Provincial Opposition. In short, for the time Ontario repudiates the official Liberal party, and there is reason to think that this feeling grows in the other English-speaking provinces and that in Quebec the Conservative party is again united and aggressive, and finding a response in the constituencies such as it has not had since Sir Wilfrid Laurier's accession to office twelve years ago.

Rubber Goods That Are Alive

At this season a good Hot Water Bottle is a necessity in every home. Wolves And Bears.

Annoying the Farmers in Wilder Parts of North Hastings.

Bancroft, Oct. 2.—Farmers in this neighborhood and all through the wilder parts of North Hastings, report that wolves and bears are becoming numerous and very bold. Sheep are being killed and cattle molested. Mr. Mark Mawson, of Greenbush, Limerick township, went out one morning to find one of his calves with a large portion of the flesh eaten completely off its hind leg, leaving the bone bare, evidently the work of either wolves or bears. He had to kill it to end its sufferings.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

The Rev. J. Connolly Dixon, Rector of Roslin, is in town to-day on business.

Rev. Dr. Cairns, of Carlisle, Ill., is in the city visiting Mrs. Neil McLean, Rear st.

Miss Edith Phelps, trained nurse in New Haven, Conn., is home for a month on her holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Miller, who have been visiting in the city, have returned to their home in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Harry Lane, a popular young man of this city, is said to be so seriously ill that his friends have no hopes of his recovery.

Mr. W. H. Scholes, who has been under the doctor's care for the last few weeks, was removed to the hospital for treatment yesterday.

The Rev. G. R. Beamish, Rector of Belleville, has returned from the session of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada, which closed yesterday after a ten days meeting.

At the Quinte: G. Howell, Aurora, Ill.; A. W. Howell and wife, Ameliasburg; D. Finlayson, Dundas; G. H. Drew, A. H. Fule, Chicago; R. Gray, St. Thomas; Misses Steacy, Ottawa; Miss Steacy, London; W. Armstrong, Newcastle; W. Miller, Frankford, R. C. Poyser, Manchester, Eng.; A. C. Shaw, D. Lawson, G. T. Simpson, R. F. Rapley, W. Greig, Montreal; D. Ross, J. F. Weston, E. J. Hartnell, H. D. Paterson, Toronto; Miss B. J. Buchanan, Picton; Miss Mabel Ackerill, Belleville.

No arrests have yet been made in the Frankford shooting and stabbing case. It looks as though the guilty parties have skipped the country.

Wm. Rightcliffe Did Wrong Thing—Skidooed From Jail.

Sentenced to Year in Central, He Took French Leave This Morning, and Has Not Yet Been Caught.

On Saturday last Wm. Rightcliffe, a young Englishman, was sentenced to the Central Prison for one year for stealing a sum of money from Mr. Geo. Wilson, of Sidney, where he was employed. This morning Rightcliffe made his "getaway" from the jail, and, up to the time of writing, had not been recaptured.

It appears that, with another prisoner, he was brought upstairs at a few minutes after 9 o'clock, and, during the temporary absence of the jailer, in the Sheriff's office, Rightcliffe made good his escape. He evidently went out of the north door of the jail building, which leads into the yard facing Patterson street. He was at the time attired in prison clothes. Rightcliffe is about 18 years of age, rather tall and slim, and had not long been a resident of this country. Although his disappearance was known within five minutes, no trace of him could be found.

Walked Out Thro' The Plate Window.

A rather unusual thing happened in the store of Tickell & Sons yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock. A farmer named James Vancott was in the store, where he purchased a chair. Picking his purchase up in his arms, Mr. Vancott started out of the store. Instead of leaving by the door, as most people do, Mr. Vancott absentmindedly stepped up on the foot-high platform, carrying the chair in front of him, and cheerfully walked right through the big plate glass window, smashing the lower portion of it completely and scattering broken glass all over the Front St. pavement. Mr. Vancott was a very much astonished man when he saw what he had done. His head was slightly cut by coming in contact with the upper edge of the broken window. The crash was heard for some considerable distance on Front St. The window was valued at $75, and this is the second one that the Messrs. Tickell have had broken in two days. They think the habit must be growing on people to break their windows.

The Ward System.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—A letter appeared in your paper Thursday evening last, inviting electors to sign a petition to the Council to bring about a return to the Ward system.

It has been said one can get a petition signed to hang even an honest man.

Does any sensible man really believe it requires 21 men to run the affairs of the city? or even 10 men? Is it not the trend of opinion among our ratepayers that it would be better if the number could be still further reduced. Some have suggested a commission of three to be elected every two years. Do the Marsh & Henthorn works, the Bock works, the Rolling Mills, the Cement works, the Corby distillery require 10 men to run their respective concerns? And yet any of these have a larger business than the city and their business extends all over Canada. Are we sure of getting bigger men in the Council by increasing the number. Isn't it a move to get in smaller men? Do we need any smaller men than we have? The Ward system, with 21 Aldermen, may give some fellows a chance to go around with Aldermen to their names who never could do so under the present system. This is, however, of no particular advantage to the taxpayer. Let us reduce rather than increase the number in the Council.

Seized Gill Nets.

Capt. Hunter, of this city, who is the local Fish and Game Inspector, last night made a great haul of gill nets. Of late it had been reported that such nets were being used contrary to law in the bay, and at 9 o'clock last night the Inspector, with assistance, found a large number of nets. They were deposited in the bay above and below the bay bridge. It was nearly three o'clock this morning when all had been raised, and it was estimated there was upwards of two miles of nets. There were some fish netted and these were taken and given to the poor in this city. The Inspector has no idea as to who owned the nets.

Daily Intelligencer.

The Ottawa Shuffle—Fraser Turned Down.

What does the shuffle in Ottawa prove?

That the grafting manipulators in timber limits and Northwest lands are not relished by honest people.

A. W. Fraser, the Ottawa Liberal candidate, has been compelled to retire from the contest, though he managed to secure the nomination at the party convention a few weeks ago.

Why?

The exposures which have been made of his timber land speculations, etc., have had such an effect upon the public mind that even in Ottawa the chances of his election were so uncertain that he has been compelled to throw up the sponge. But this he would not do, unless his running French companion submitted to the same humiliation. So they go, and a Mr. McGiverin is to take Fraser's place and Sir Wilfrid is to be his French companion in the race.

If Mr. Fraser was unfit to contest the city as a Government candidate, what about Burrows and the other shining lights in the West, who have become millionaires through the same means that enabled Fraser to secure from the Laurier Government a limit for $1650 and sell it immediately after for $100,000.

Again, why should Fraser be set aside on account of his land deals, and the head of the Government which gave him the limits for a small sum be selected to take his place?

Which is the most culpable? Is not the giver as guilty, and more so, than the receiver? Honest people will think so.

This shuffle is one of the most transparent pieces of charlatanism that has characterized even the Laurierite combination for some time.

The duty of all honest men in Ottawa will be to reject both Laurier and his young friend, who has been drawn into the breach to try and save the sinking ship.

How It's Done!

Read the glowing description of the Laurier receptions in different parts of Ontario that appear daily in the Grit press, and then ask, "How is this done?" That's easy. Here is a description of how these magnificent receptions are effected:

"A great deal of wonderment was caused here by the extraordinary suddenness with which the bunting, decorations and banners which adorned the town on the occasion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's visit disappeared. The decorations came, no one knew whence, sprung up in a night, and the procession back from the scene of the speechmaking had scarcely disbanded before gangs of men were busily engaged pulling them down. Long before sundown they had disappeared, and scarcely a flag remained to tell of the gay display of the early day. The reason for this is that the decorations are the property of the central committee, and are really the stage properties of the tour which the Premier was making. They are in charge of a committee, and are rushed from place to place, so as to get ahead of the Premier, and naturally they cannot remain in any place long after the necessity to inform the people of "Laurier and Victory," and the other devices for banners has gone. The party managers have duplicate sets of these gayeties, so that in case of mishap there will be no lack of decorations at any place visited."

Examine the next Auditor-General's report, and it will be found that the expense of these demonstrations is charged to the country. That's what was done in the Tarte reception.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

PROFIT $715,644--DRUMMOND COUNTY DEAL.

This deal, by which the grafters put $715,644 profit into their pockets, may not be of recent date, but is an illustration of the manner in which the country was robbed in the purchasing of the Drummond Railway in 1898. The Drummond Railway was built by a private company. The company received the following subsidies:

From the Dominion Government	$ 287,936
From the Quebec Government	347,420
From municipalities	15,000
Total	$ 650,356

The actual cost of the road, as given by the Chief Engineer at Ottawa, was $1,535,000. Deduct the cash subsidies from the actual cost, and the conclusion reached is that the private capital invested was $884,644, and that the Government bought the road and paid the company the sum of $1,600,000 for it. This money the politicians who controlled the undertaking received. These men who put into the scheme $884,644 of private capital, not necessarily their own, pulled out, through the sale of the line to the Government, no less than $1,600,000. Their account stands thus:

Paid to them by the Government	$ 1,600,000
Amount of private capital invested	884,644
Profit for politicians	$ 715,356

In a word, these men had all their money returned to them, and the subsidies were paid twice over. On the first occasion, the subsidies went into the road. On the second, they went into the pockets of certain of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's friends, and had it not been for the action of the Senate the country would have been mulcted of over an additional $1,000,000. Such is Grit financing.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

SACRED CONCERT AT JOHN ST. CHURCH.

One of the most pleasing entertainments of the kind ever given in this city was the sacred concert in John St. Church last night. There was not a weak number on the programme, and the large audience was delighted with many of the features. With one exception the talent was all local. The exception was Mr. David Ross, baritone, of Toronto, who proved himself an artist of rare ability, with no florid effects, fine method and reverent sympathy. The other ladies and gentlemen sang and played quite up to their usual form—some of them beyond it. Following was the programme:

Organ solo ......
Mrs. (Col.) Campbell.
Song—"The Good Shepherd" ...... Barri
Mr. Ross.
Song—"Rejoice Greatly," from Messiah ...... Handel
Mrs. Grant.
Song—"It is Enough," from Elijah ...... Mendelssohn
Mr. Jas. S. Dyer.
Duet—"What Have I to do with Thee," from Elijah ... Mendelssohn
Mrs. Grant and Mr. Ross.
Song—"Why art Thou Cast Down, O My Soul?" ...... Spicker
Miss Maysel Stork.
Song—"How Great, O Lord," from St. Peter ...... Benedict
Mr. David Ross.
Song—"The Lord is My Light" ...... Allitsen
Miss Hattie Gowsell.
Song—Pro Peccatis, from Stabat Mater ...... Rossini
Mr. Dan A. Cameron.
Song—"Honor and Arms," from Samson ...... Handel
Mr. Ross.
Song—Ave Maria ...... Buck
Mrs. Chas. Wilmot.
Organ—Torchlight March ...... Flagler
Miss Laura D. LaVoie.

Miss Laura D. LaVoie, organist of John St. Church, played the beautiful accompaniments in a way which left no room for criticism.

"A PAIR OF COUNTRY KIDS."

The above attraction held the boards at the opera house last night. The audience was small, but bigger than the show deserved. The "Country Kids" should have stayed in the country. If they come here again they had better carry accident insurance.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

"The Tyranny of Tears," first presented in London by Sir Charles Wyndham and in New York by John Drew, is to be produced at the Carman opera house on Thursday, Oct. 8. The play is one of the most popular of modern English society plays, a comedy of emotions, a triumph in realistic presentation of everyday domestic life. It is subtly interesting, compelling the attention, while a sly humor runs through it like a warm colored thread.

Prices 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1. Plan opens Wednesday morning.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OPTIMISM.

I'm quite devoid of money,
As everybody knows;
But the summer sky is sunny,
And there's perfume to the rose.
For gold that's bright and yellow
The golden-rod will do.
I'm as rich as any fellow,
Or that's my point of view.

The song the breezes utter,
The twittering of birds;
The leaves that lisp and flutter,
My true love's tender words.
The lakes that dance and dimple,
The scent of fir and pine—
I own them in fee simple—
Hence, all the world is mine!

I have no broad green acres
Of which I'm over lord,
But joy's for any takers,
And job's my only board;
And while my comrades name me
Companion in their mirth,
I shall myself proclaim me
The richest man on earth!"

FORCED DRAFT IS A FAILURE.

(By Rev. W. G. Lane, Wesley Church, Yarmouth, N.S.)

Eccl vi., 11.— Seeing there be many things that increase vanity, what is man the better?

This preacher had been living on the forced draft principle. He had not taken the precaution to protect things, hence the grate-bars burned out, and the boiler tubes started to leak, bringing the machinery to a standstill. It is not the perfect engine or sound hull which ensure swift and safe passages, but the care exercised to get the best possible out of both without pushing to the point of danger. This is clearly demonstrated in the ship's log written by Captain Ecclesiasticus, who, at the end of it, is not satisfied with the results either to himself or the owner. He was certainly a man who believed in doing things. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," is an utterance which proves him to be a man of full measure, and his comment distinctly declares that a forced draft does not give good results always.

In case of failure, strong natures are apt to go to extremes, to be discouraged, to rush into a despairing mood, just as Moses lost heart before he had been six months on the way to the promised land, as David said in moments of depression, "My heart and my flesh faileth," as Elijah fled desertward, apparently intent on suicide, but not having the courage to do it, prayed God to take his life there and then, and end it; Job poured out his soul with such a touch of agony in it that we pity him, but, if you really want to find the supreme example of pessimism, you will pass by the Lamentations of Jeremiah, which deluge life with groans and tears, and pause before this misguided preacher, who has somehow missed his calling, and, in haggard countenance and lustreless eyes, see one who has gone the full length of his tether, only to find disappointment and disgust as the result of it.

Such action is sure to be followed by reaction; force stocks up, and somebody is ruined; yes, and by forcing them down; boom a town, and hard times follow; force a plant, and it blooms itself to death. Natural growth is the best growth. Wise man that he is, he parades some things for our benefit. He says, "Lo, I am come to great estate!" He was the envy of his neighbors; he knew much, although some of his knowledge was dearly bought. He accumulated gold and silver, and precious stones, till his wealth makes us wonder; he built palaces, with marble corridors and gold cornices, and walls inlaid with gold on jasper, unequalled by the artisans of the present age; from the windows he looked out on vineyards and gardens, where rich vines and rare exotics were watered by fountains, which tossed up spray rich with perfume, only to fall into marble basins, making the pools ripple into coolness under the mid-day sun. He had more stock than he could appreciate, both useful, ornamental and amusing; peacocks strutted across the lawns, lions growled

The Facts in the Case

For Constipation, or tightness of the bowels, the simplest—safest—most agreeable remedy to cure the trouble—no griping or after effects—is unquestionably in their cages, apes chattered among the trees, companions capable of the highest good or the [illegible] vices were at his beck and call. He sums up his tremendous possibilities by saying, "Whatsoever mine eyes desire, I kept not from them. I withheld not my heart from any joy." You see, there was no restraint, no wise control; the result was that he tired of it all, he was surfeited with good things and with bad; to find pleasure he added more fuel to the fire, by starting a vaudeville stage in the ivory palace; men and women sang and danced till even that palled on him; then he added more fuel still by turning to wine, and laying on folly, and, after thus forcing the draft, said, "I said of laughter, it is mad, and of mirth, what doeth it?" "This also is vanity." From one extreme to another he goes, starting with great ideals of a life of pleasure, then growing resentful over a wasted life, with wrong views of it all, an object to be pitied, not envied, a false teacher not worthy of being followed, till new light shone upon him from the courts of heaven.

The merry laughter of an honest soul is health to a man. Mirth and pleasures are nature's recreative forces, whether it be on the athletic field, or a picnic among the pines, near waters which run as a brook or lie still as lakes, along which the young folk thrust the canoe or bathe in the cool waters. Or it may be within doors where folk at the festive board enjoy the cook's best art—that is, when the heart knows when to stop and the mind to apply the truth of things, and the soul does not lose sight of its higher good.

According to the preacher, this is all wasted, and we are fools to pursue it. He says, "Wisdom is better than mirth," just as if we cannot have both. He looks sadly now on all diversion on the ground "that the same event happeneth to all." Death at last closes the door on everything, forgetting that death cannot close the door to life when rightly lived, and the future is brightened with the eternity of it.

There is no sense nor reason in it. It is true he tries to help us out of a difficulty by suggesting that we should always do the right thing at the right time—as if that were at all times possible. He misses the main principle of love to God as the inspiring motive and the mainspring of all true action. He is, in fact, annoyed with God most unreasonably. On what plea? Simply this, that God gives man more wealth than he can use, so that he is worried to whom he shall leave it. He gives so much food and such variety that he has not the power to eat it. He has received so many richly embroidered robes that he cannot wear them, and there they moulder away or are destroyed by moths instead of gracing the palace functions. And all this, too, makes other folk spiteful and envious. Therefore, "there is no profit under the sun." "Man cometh in with vanity and departeth with darkness." Sorrow is better than laughter." It is better to go to the house of mourning than the house of feasting. So he drones along his mournful tale till there is not a church committee will invite him to be their pastor for the next term, or a congregation that will accept his verdict of life. Except perhaps on one point, that things may be overdone and overdrawn. But not that life is of necessity a failure, and that man goeth through it with little of enjoyment or nothing which yields content.

A man dismissed by his employer, asked the reason why. "A man is not satisfactory to me," was the reply, "who occupies his thoughts from Saturday to Wednesday with the last baseball match he saw, and from Wednesday to Saturday with the one he is going to see. He has no thought of business, and I have no room for him." He was not condemning recreation as such, but the forced draft which made the business tubes leak and the engine come to a standstill.

The true art is to keep things normal. The true balance of life is hard to maintain, it is true, and few there are who do not tip one way or the other. But practice makes perfect, and a wise head will keep its poise. We find disappointment everywhere, but not necessarily. We find it in the salons of the rich, in the mansions of society, as surely as in the casual ward, the poor house or the night shelter. Young as well as old express it; even Kipling, with his merry rhyming, could not steer clear of it. He wrote:

We have done with hope and honor:
we are lost to love and truth,
We are dropping down the ladder
rung by rung;
And the measure of our torment is the measure of our youth,
God help us! for we knew the worst too young.

I have no sympathy for that; is it true that we are dropping down the ladder, rung by rung"? Never. God has ordained that man should go up—up— into knowledge, peace, light and glory, taking the best out of life, using things as not abusing them, and laying the foundation of an eternal hope, which is as an anchor to the souls, both sure and steadfast. Yet much of this false doctrine creeps into our lives, into our religion—some of our hymns are full of it. Some of them ought seldom be sung, if ever. Fancy asking you to sing any bright, sunny Sabbath, and you full of life and vigor, "O Paradise — O Paradise, 'tis weary waiting here?" You know it is not true. Imagine bright, happy children, singing, "Earth is a desert drear, Heaven is my home," —a sad mixture of truth and falsity; or the line, "This world's a wilderness of woe." That sort of thing takes the heart out of all living. I confess to liking the martial ring of "Onward Christian Soldiers." Heaven can stand on its own merits without belittling earth to exalt it — we need to see the bright light that is in the clouds and reach out for life's mastery, so that the future shall yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them that are exercised thereby; no cry of complaint will come out of our toil as we go forward, knowing the truth of the inspired word, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee."

Ecclesiasticus is really out of date with his pessimism, although the lesson remains by which we may verily profit, that to keep life right, we must love God.

The fact is, we are living in Heaven here if we only realized it; the mind may become a kingdom, rich beyond the dreams of avarice, the walls of imagination may be hung with pictures of surpassing fancy, the chambers of the brain, may be peopled by the pure and lofty of every age, and, by an effort of the will, aided by grace Divine, we may surround ourselves with unseen, holy forces, which will stir hope, and send us forth as ministering spirits to them who shall be heirs of salvation, and flood the soul with heavenly joy.

One trouble is that while we live in things we lose the consciousness of things. You and I are in Heaven now if we could see it—not in fullness, to be sure, but we are in it. Do the fish understand the sea, in which they swim? Somebody with a poetic touch has said:

"O where is the sea?" the fishes cried,
As they swam its crystal clearness through
"We have heard of old of an ocean
tide,
But who has looked on its waters
blue?
The wise ones speak of an infinite sea,
But who can tell us if such things be?"

In it all the time, and not seeing what we see of the blue and the grey, and the sweep of wave and rush of surf on the shore; so it often is with us, in it and not realizing it, expressing doubts and fears and worries, thinking this earth a hell, and not a heaven—not seeing it as God sees it, losing the joy of it on that account; amid the light, yet seeing only shadows—whereas we ought to

Smile to see God's greatness,
Flow round our incompleteness,
Round our restlessness His rest.

Let us mount up higher, taking each step in life with supreme confidence, knowing that ere long the soul, with its larger hopes, will say —as it reaches the heights.

High on the mountain here with Thee,
Here in an ampler, purer air,
Above the stir of toil and care.

Stubborn Indigestion.

One Who Had Suffered for Years Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The symptoms of stomach trouble vary. Some victims have a ravenous appetite, while others loathe the sight of food. Often there is a feeling as of weight on the chest, a full feeling in the throat. With others there is an intense pain and feeling of nausea after eating. Sometimes gas presses on the heart, and leads the sufferer to think he has heart disease. Sick headache is another frequent and distressing symptom.

Mr. Alex. MacKay, McLellan's Mountain, N. S., says:—"For years I was a great sufferer from indigestion, which was gradually growing worse and worse, and it would be impossible for me to tell how much suffering I endured. At different times I had treatment from three good doctors but it did not help me in the least. Then I began trying all sorts of advertised medicines and took ten packages of one medicine specially intended for dyspepsia, but with no better results. I had practically come to regard myself as incurable, and to feel that I would be a continuous sufferer, when one day I read in a newspaper of the cure of indigestion through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I made up my mind to give them a trial. I had used nearly five boxes before they began to help me, but I do not wonder at this as my case was so bad. I used in all a dozen boxes of the pills, and they cured me completely. I can now eat anything we raise on the farm for man to eat and have no longer the pains and discomfort I had endured for years. It is several years now since I was cured, and I have never felt a symptom of indigestion since. I am well known in this locality and you are quite at liberty to use what I say in the hope that it will benefit some other sufferer."

All medicine dealers sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE MYSTERY

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE
And SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

COPYRIGHT. 1907. BY McCLURE. PHILLIPS & CO.

To the worth of this story there re two substantial tributes—first, that it was run as a serial y the London Sphere, a publiation noted for its discriminaion in the selection of serials nd which rarely uses an Amercan story; second, that "The Mystery" was one of the "good ellers" of 1907. This is a tory of mystery and adventure n new lines. The style is as raphic and forceful as the copy" of a skillful reporter of n important news event. The part of the hero unfolds gradully until he stands revealed as he rarest combination of whimical humor and cool courage ver presented, perhaps, in fiction. The narrative, which coneys the impression of reality, ot fiction, is swift and alluring, olding the interest o) the reader s with hooks of steel.

CHAPTER I.

THE late afternoon sky flaunted its splendor of blue and gold like a banner over the Pacific, across whose depths the trade ind droned in measured cadence. On e ocean's wide expanse a hulk walwed sluggishly, the forgotten relict a once brave and sightly ship, posbly the sphinx of some untold ocean agedy, she lay black and forbidding the ordered procession of waves. alf a mile to the east of the derelict overed a ship's cutter, the turn of her ew's heads speaking expectancy. As r again beyond, the United States ruiser Wolverine outlined her severe d trim silhouette against the horin. In all the spread of wave and y no other thing was visible. For is was one of the desert parts of the acific, 300 miles north of the steamip route from Yokohama to Honolu, 500 miles from the nearest land, ardner island, and more than 700 orthwest of the Hawaiian group.

On the cruiser's quarter deck the ofers lined the starboard rail. Their terest was focused on the derelict.

"Looks like a heavy job," said Ives, e of the junior lieutenants. "These aters that lie with deck almost vash will stand more hammering an a mud fort."

"Wish they'd let us put some six ch shells into her," said Billy Edards, the ensign, a wistful expreson on his big, round, cheerful face. 'd like to see what they would do."

"Nothing but waste a few hundred llars of your Uncle Sam's money," served Carter, the officer of the deck. t takes placed charges inside and t for that kind of work."

"Barnett is the man for her then," d Ives. "He's no economist when comes to getting results. There she es!"

Without any particular haste, as it emed to the watchers, the hulk was ouldered out of the water as by me hidden leviathan. Its outlines elted into a black, outshowering ist, and from that mist leaped a ant. Up, up, he towered, tossed hirling arms a hundred feet abranch, ivered and dissolved into a wideread cataract. The water below s lashed into fury, in the midst of hich a mighty death agony beat back e troubled waves of the trade wind. ly then did the muffled double boom the explosion reach the ears of the ectators, presently to be followed by whispering, swift skimming wavelet at swept irresistibly across the bigr surges and lapped the ship's side, for a message that the work was ne.

Here and there in the sea a glint of ver, a patch of purple or dull red or glistening apparition of black show where the unintended victims of explosion, the gay hued open sea of the warm waters, had sucmbed to the force of the shock. Of intended victim there was no sign e a few fragments of wood bobbing a swirl of water.

When Barnett, the ordnance officer charge of the destruction, returned the ship Carter complimented him.

"Good clean job, Barnett. She was ough customer too."

"What was she?" asked Ives.

"The Caroline Lemp, three masted ooner. Any one know about her?"

ves turned to the ship's surgeon, ndon, a grizzled and brief spoken eran, who had at his fingers' tips the lore of all the waters under the n of the moon.

"What does the information bureau the seven seas know about it?"

"Lost three years ago—spring of 1901 ot into ice field off the tip of the utians. Some of the crew froze. ers got ashore. Part of survivors ounted for. Others not. Say y've turned native. Don't know self."

"The Aleutians!" exclaimed Billy Edds. "Great cats! What a drift! w many thousand miles would that

"Not as far as many another derelict has wandered in her time, son," said Barnett.

The talk washed back and forth across the hulks of classic sea mysteries, new and old; of the City of Boston, which went down with all hands, leaving for record only a melancholy scrawl on a bit of board to meet the wondering eyes of a fisherman on the far Cornish coast; of the Great Queensland, which set out with 569 souls aboard, bound by a route unknown to a tragic end; of the Naronic, with her silent and empty lifeboats alone left, drifting about the open sea, to hint at the story of her fate: of the Huronian, which ten years later, on the same day and date and hailing from the same port as the Naronic, went out into the void, leaving no trace; of Newfoundland captains who sailed, roaring with drink, under the arches of cathedral bergs, only to be prisoned, buried and embalmed in the one icy embrace; of craft assailed by the terrible one stroke lightning clouds of the Indian ocean, found days after, stone blind, with their crews madly hauling at useless sheets, while the officers clawed the compass and shrieked; of burnings and piracies, of pest ships and slave ships and ships mad for want of water, of whelming earthquake waves and mysterious suctions, drawing irresistibly against wind and steam power upon unknown currents; of stout hulks deserted in panic, although sound and seaworthy, and of others so swiftly dragged down that there was no time for any to save himself, and of a hundred other strange, stirring and pitiful ventures such as make up the inevitable peril and incorrigible romance of the ocean. In a pause Billy Edwards said musingly:

"Well, there was the Laughing Lass."

"How did you happen to hit on her?" asked Barnett quickly.

"Why not, sir? It naturally came into my head. She was last seen somewhere about this part of the world, wasn't she?" After a moment's hesitation he added, "From something I heard ashore I judge we've a commission to keep a watch out for her as well as to destroy derelicts."

"What about the Laughing Lass?" asked McGuire, the paymaster, a New Englander, who had been in the service but a short time.

"Good Lord, don't you remember the Laughing Lass mystery and the disappearance of Dr. Schermerhorn?"

"Karl Augustus Schermerhorn, the man whose experiments to identify telepathy with the Marconi wireless waves made such a furore in the papers?"

"Oh, that was only a byproduct of his mind! He was an original investigator in every line of physics and chemistry, besides most of the natural sciences," said Barnett. "The government is particularly interested in him because of his contributions to aerial photography."

"And he was lost with the Laughing Lass?"

"Nobody knows," said Edwards. "He left San Francisco two years ago on a hundred foot schooner with an assistant, a big brass-bound chest and a ragamuffin crew. A newspaper man named Slade, who dropped out of the world about the same time, is supposed to have gone along too. Their schooner was last sighted about 450 miles northeast of Oahu in good shape and bound westward. That's all the record of her that there is."

"Was that Ralph Slade?" asked Barnett.

"Yes. He was a free lance writer and artist."

"I knew him well," said Barnett. "He was in our mess in the Philippine campaign on the North Dakota. War correspondent then. It's strange that I never identified him before with the Slade of the Laughing Lass."

"What was the object of the voyage?" asked Ives.

"They were supposed to be after buried treasure," said Barnett.

"I've always thought it more likely that Dr. Schermerhorn was on a scientific expedition," said Edwards. "I knew the old boy, and he wasn't the sort to care for treasure, buried or unburied."

"Every time a ship sets out from San Francisco without publishing to all the world just what her business is all the world thinks it's one of those wild goose hunts," observed Ives.

"Yes," agreed Barnett. "Flora and fauna of some unknown island would be much more in the Schermerhorn line of traffic. Not unlikely that some of the festive natives collected the unfortunate professor."

Various theories were advanced, withdrawn, refuted, defended, and the discussion carried them through the swift twilight into the darkness which had been hastened by a high spreading canopy of storm clouds. Abruptly from the crow's nest came startling news for those desolate seas: "Light, ho! Two points on the port bow!"

The lookout had given extra voice to it. It was plainly heard throughout the ship.

The group of officers stared in the direction indicated, but could see nothing. Presently Ives and Edwards, who were the keenest sighted, made out a faint, suffused radiance. At the same time came a second hail from the crow's nest.

"On deck, sir."

"Hello," responded Carter, the officer of the deck.

"There's a light here I can't make anything out of, sir."

"What's it like?"

"Sort of a queer general glow."

"General glow, indeed!" muttered Forsythe, among the group aft. "That fellow's got an imagination."

"Can't you describe it better than that?" called Carter.

"Don't make it out at all, sir. 'Tain't any regular and proper light. Looks like a lamp in a fog."

Among themselves the officers discussed it interestedly as it began to grow plainer.

"Not unlike the electric glow above a city seen from a distance," said Barnett as it grew plainer.

"Yes, but the nearest electric lighted city is some 800 miles away," objected Ives.

"Mirage, maybe," suggested Edwards.

"Pretty hard working mirage to cover that distance," said Ives. "Though I've seen 'em"—

"Great heavens! Look at that!" shouted Edwards.

A great shaft of pale brilliance shot up toward the zenith. Under it whirled a maelstrom of varied radiance, pale with distance, but marvelously beautiful. Forsythe passed them with a troubled face on his way below to report, as his relief went up.

"The quartermaster reports the compass behaving queerly," he said.

Three minutes later the captain was on the bridge. The great ship had swung, and they were speeding direct for the phenomenon. But within a few minutes the light had died out.

WORK THAT WEAKENS.

BOOTH'S KIDNEY PILLS HAVE DONE GREAT SERVICE FOR PEOPLE WHO WORK IN BELLEVILLE.

Many Belleville people work every day in some strained unnatural position, bending constantly over a desk, riding on jolting wagons or cars, bending over heavy house work, lifting, reaching, pulling, all these strains tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they fall behind in their work of filtering the poisons from the blood. Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, put new strength in bad backs, Belleville cures prove it.

George Kelley, of John st. N., Belleville, Ont., says: "Frequently I would take cold and it would settle in my back. Sharp pains would shoot through me in the lumbar region. I would be unable to stoop or lift anything without much suffering and it would take many seconds for me to straighten up. I had tried plasters and different remedies but found little relief until I tried Booth's Kidney Pills procured at McKeown's Pharmacy. They quickly strengthened my back and the pains left it. There had been no return since and I feel grateful to Booth's Kidney Pills for the speedy and lasting relief given me." Sold by Dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth, Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., Sole Canadian Agents.

A Three Cents a Mile.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—The standard passenger tariff of the Brantford & Hamilton Electric Railway has been approved by the railway commissioners on a maximum basis of three cents a mile.

The Hudson Bay and Pacific Railway Co. will apply to Parliament next session for an act extending the time for the commencement of operations.

Inauguration of a President.

Panama, Oct. 3.—The most remarkable political demonstration ever witnessed here marked the inauguration to the presidency of Don Jose Domingo de Obaldia.

Thousands of Panamans thronged the streets, cheering the new President, and his popularity was further reflected in the warmth of the reception when, on entering the auditorium to take the oath of office, the entire audience arose and cheered him vociferously.

A Land Office Record.

Moosejaw, Oct. 3.—A record-breaking business was done by the land office here during September, 2,999 preemptions being granted, 751 homesteads, 103 purchased homesteads, and, besides these, some 2,000 entries, which the staff, though working night and day, have been unable to get through the books. This represents about fifteen hundred square miles.

Case of Leprosy Cured.

Wellington, N.Z., Oct. 3.—A Maori patient has been discharged from the leper station with a clean bill of health, after a stay of eleven months.

The chief health officer declares that the patient was cured by injections of cultures of the leprosy bacilus.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE
The Original Remedy That Kills the Dandruff Germ

"Travelling as I do continuously, I have been troubled a great deal with dandruff and falling hair and until I tried Herpicide I never found a remedy that was satisfactory.

Herpicide is a delightful preparation that fulfills the claims made for it and no lady's toilet is complete without it. I highly recommend it to my friends."

(Signed) ANNIE OAKLEY.

It is certainly significant that Miss Oakley, the celebrated rifle shot and theatrical star, who has travelled so extensively abroad, should choose Newbro's Herpicide as the most efficacious toilet remedy for the scalp. No one will doubt her opportunity to choose the best and those who have seen the natty and winsome Miss Oakley will not doubt her power of discrimination in matters of this sort.

Newbro's Herpicide is a scientific germicide and prophylactic for the hair and scalp, it destroys the germ or microbe that causes dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair, after which the hair will grow as nature intended, except in cases of incurable baldness. Extraordinary results sometimes follow the continued use of Newbro's Herpicide.

If your hair is dull, brittle or lustreless, don't wait until it begins to fall, but save and beautify it with Newbro's Herpicide. In addition to its wonderful medicinal qualities, Newbro's Herpicide is the daintiest and most delightfully refreshing hair dressing available. The first application proves its goodness. Try it.

Herpicide Contains No Grease. It will not stain or dye.

STOPS ITCHING OF THE SCALP INSTANTLY.

Two sizes, 50c and $1.00 At Drug Stores. Send 10 cents in stamps to The Herpicide Co., Dept. N, Detroit, Mich., for a sample. Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, Serial No. 915.

To Cure That Pain in the Back

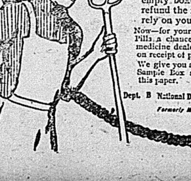
Be warned in time. Don't neglect that biting backache—those sudden twinges of pain in the back—dizzy spells—and trouble with the bladder and urine. They all tell their own story—of weak, irritated or diseased kidneys. Surely you know the danger of neglecting the kidneys.

Diabetes, Dropsy and Bright's Disease usually follow neglected kidney trouble. That pain in the back proves that your kidneys are affected. Now—right now—is the time to take Gin Pills.

34 John St., Hamilton, May 4th.

Being a sufferer from my kidneys and subject to fits of dizziness in my head for some time, I did not seem able to get anything that would do me any good. I saw in the paper something relating to Gin Pills so I got a sample box and they benefited me so much that I bought some and am taking them regularly. They have worked wonders in my case and I can conscientiously recommend them to any sufferer from kidney trouble. Yours truly,

Sgd. GEO. A. BROWN.



Remember there is no trick in buying Gin Pills. If, after taking one box you do not feel that you have gotten your money's worth in better health, or if after taking 6 boxes you are not completely cured, take the empty boxes to your dealer and he will promptly refund the money. No affidavit is required. We will rely on your honesty and take your word for it.

Now—for your own peace and comfort, won't you give Gin Pills a chance to cure you? Sold by all druggists and medicine dealers at 50c. a box—6 for $2.50 or sent direct on receipt of price.

We give you a chance to test Gin Pills at our expense Sample Box sent, free of charge, if you mention this paper.

DIFFERENT VIEWS.

May be entertained about the abilities of opticians, and eye-sight specialists, but the proof of "the pudding" is in the experience of those most interested. It does not take long to find out whether the glasses we sell our patrons are the most excellent for the sight and eye-strain or otherwise. Our many customers, in this district and all over Canada are the best proof of our ability, after many of them had failed to get relief from some of the most prominent specialists in Toronto. The reason is "This one thing we do" In this age you cannot do many things and do them all well. That is why we have succeeded where even prominent oculists have failed, because the refraction of the eye is only one of the many specialties they have in hand.

MISS M. CAMPBELL

Red Letter Day for Many Educationists.

Prince Edward Pedagogues Cordially Received and Entertained--The Occasion a Profitable One, Not Soon to be Forgotten.

To use a well known expression, yesterday was a red letter day in this city, in so far as educational matters were concerned. The visit of upwards of 90 teachers of the Prince Edward County public schools to this city was not only an enjoyable, but a profitable occasion. The teachers in question were most hospitably received and entertained, and were loud in their praise at the cordiality of their reception.

As detailed in yesterday's issue the morning was occupied in distributing prizes to the successful scholars of Queen Victoria, Grier street and Octavia street schools, the same being for essays on the Battlefield of Quebec. In addition to this, Grier street school, which has been materially improved was formally opened at 9.30. The scholars at this school were grouped in the assembly room, which is commodious and well fitted for such a gathering. Those present were Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Mr. G. A. Bennett, chairman of the Board of Education; Mr. Wm. Johnson and Rev. A. L. Geen, members of the Board, and Mr. H. Walker, an ex-member and ex-chairman of the Board.

Mr. Johnson was chairman of the gathering and gave an address, as did also the other gentlemen present. Rev. A. L. Geen offered up an appropriate prayer for the occasion.

The following address was read to Mr. Bennett, chairman of the Board, by Master Ray Matthews:

AN APPRECIATIVE ADDRESS.

To the Chairman and Members of Belleville School Board, Mr. Morgan and friends.

Gentlemen — The pupils of Grier St. School always look forward with pleasure to the visit of our trustees, and Inspector but never was our pleasure as great as on this occasion. We feel that we could not let this opportunity pass without expressing to you our appreciation of the very great changes recently made in our school. For some time we have been looking forward to better conditins, but we hardly anticipated so great an improvement. We are indeed delighted for what you have done for us, and we want to thank you most heartily. We feel we have the finest rooms in the city, and we want to assure you that we will endeavor by our conduct and application to make you as proud of the pupils of Grier St. School as we are of the building.

Signed on behalf of Grier street school.

George Cook.
Nellie McMeehan.
Ernest Taylor.

Frances Wilder.

SOME INTERESTING FEATURES.

To this Mr. Bennett replied most appropriately, saying he was proud that the necessary improvements had been made to the school. He was proud of the school and the scholars.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell was then called upon to present the prizes to the scholars whose essays on the Quebec Battlefield had been selected as the best.

Mr. H. Walker then presented to the following scholars their certificates of success in the entrance examinations: Kathleen Johns, Kathleen Wilder, Ethel Slater, Martha Harris, C. Bateman, Howard Asselstine, Albert Moore, Harry Scantlebury, Willie Wonnacott and C. Wilson.

AT OCTAVIA ST.

The gentlemen then proceeded to Octavia street school, where the visit was brief. Mr. Bennett and Sir Mackenzie Bowell were the speakers and the latter made the presentation of prizes.

AT QUEEN VICTORIA.

Queen Victoria School was next visited and the most interesting event was the presentation of the Governor-General's medal to Frances Blackburn, the young daughter of Ald. Blackburn. Sir Mackenzie Bowell in making the presentation said the medal given to the young lady was evidence that she was studious and talented, and it was a privilege for him to present it to her. He referred to the visit of Governor-General Aberdeen to this city a few years ago and the pleasure it afforded His Excellency to visit this city. Sir Mackenzie urged upon all the pupils the necessity of studious application so that they might grow up women and men who would be a credit to themselves, to those who taught them, and to Canada. Other speakers were Col. Ponton, Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., and Mr. G. A. Bennett.

Ald. Blackburn also spoke briefly, expressing his pleasure at being present, and eulogized Miss Urquhart who had prepared his daughter for the entrance examination.

After cheers had been given for the King, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and the successful scholars, the singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

THE AFTERNOON PROCEEDINGS.

At 2 o'clock the visiting teachers arrived at the City Hall from the D. and D. Institution. They were conducted to the Council Chamber, where they were formally welcomed.

Mr. Wm. Johnson was chairman, and with him on the platform were Mayor McFee, Mr. G. A. Bennett, J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., and Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Members of the Council and other members of the School Board were also present.

The chairman, in opening the proceedings, said the teachers from Prince Edward County were a thousands times welcome to the city, and all were pleased to see them.

Mayor McFee, as Chief Magistrate of the city, extended to them a hearty welcome. He said that, in the struggle now going on between the two great political parties, both were claiming to be nation builders, but he (the speaker) thought the honor belonged to the teaching profession. They were certainly nation builders in the true sense of the word. He hoped the visitors would enjoy themselves while here and that their visit would be profitable.

Mr. G. A. Bennett extended to the visitors, on behalf of the Board of Education, a hearty welcome to the city.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., in a few well chosen words extended to the visitors a fraternal welcome. It was a pleasure to have them visit our beautiful city, and he hoped they would come again. The charms of Prince Edward ladies were proverbial —he knew, for he had married one himself.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, on rising to speak, was heartily received. In his opening remarks he said he concurred with the other speakers in extending to the visitors a hearty welcome to the city, and said that 46 years ago he was in Prince Edward County stumping that County in an election campaign. "We elected our man," said the speaker amid much laughter. Sir Mackenzie, in closing, paid a tribute to the teaching profession which was in every respect an honorable and worthy avocation, and on which the future of Canada rested.

Mr. Dobson, Principal of the Picton High School, and Mr. Tice, Vice-President of the Teachers Association of Prince Edward County, replied to the welcome and greeting in a most appropriate manner.

The visitors were then driven to the various schools of the city, where for an hour they viewed the mode of teaching in the different class-rooms.

At 4 o'clock the visitors again assembled at the City Hall, where a dainty lunch was served to them. Just before leaving a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the local Mayor and corporation and the Board of Education for the hearty welcome and hospitality extended to the Prince Edward visitors.

After the singing of the National anthem the pedagogues were driven to their boat and embarked for home.

THE DOCTORS SAID "THERE MUST BE AN OPERATION"

"Fruit-a-tives" Saved Mrs. McCready Untold Suffering and Almost Certain Death.

"Publish this for humanity's sake," writes Mr. C. McCready, of Putnam, Ont., in his letter to the owners of "Fruit-a-tives." Physicians said that only an operation could save his wife's life. But again "Fruit-a-tives" proved its wonderful powers. The doctors were wrong—Mrs. McCready is to-day well and strong—and "Fruit-a-tives" have made friends of every one for miles around Putnam.

"Dear Sirs,—My wife suffered for over a year from Indigestion and Bowel trouble. Several doctors treated her for this trouble and advised her that only an operation would save her life, as they stated it was a tumor that was causing the trouble. The operation was to cost $200.00 and, while she was debating in her own mind about being operated on, she was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives," which I procured for her from our local merchant. From the first box she improved, and after having taken four boxes she is completely cured and is now as well as ever.

I decided then that "Fruit-a-tives" was the most wonderful remedy in the world and it certainly saved my wife's life. She still takes one tablet every night, we also give them to the children with excellent results, and they have to thank "Fruit-a-tives" for the fact that their mother is now with them, they fully expected she would be in her grave. Publish this for humanity's sake."

(Sgd.) C. McCready.

For Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Constipation and Billiousness—for all troubles due to defective action of Bowels, Kidneys and Skin, "Fruit-a-tives" is a certain cure. These tablets are made of fruit juices and tonics, are pleasant to take and quick to act. Trial size, 25c—regular size, 50c a box or 6 for $2.50.

At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

TO FIGHT SOMEBODY.

Bulgaria Is Busy Getting Ready For War.

London, Oct. 3.—A news agency despatch from Sofia says it is officially announced there that M. Malinoff, president of the council, has telegraphed Prince Ferdinand, who is making a tour of Europe, requesting him to return to Sofia. The message is said to intimate the urgency of the situation. It is stated that Prince Ferdinand received the telegram, and that his immediate return is expected.

All the factories capable of supplying war material, the despatch adds, are working day and night, and preparations for mobilization are being openly pushed forward.

Berlin, Oct. 3.—The Lokal Anzeiger's Constantinople correspondent has had an interview with Tewfik Pasha, the Turkish Minister, on the subject of the controversy between Bulgaria and Turkey, which is regarded as having taken a serious turn in consequence of Russia's note demanding the giving up of that portion of the Oriental Railway that Bulgaria recently seized.

In the course of the interview, the Foreign Minister said: "Russia has taken energetic steps against Sofia in regard to the matter. In fact, so much foreign capital is invested in the Oriental Railway, its seizure was really robbery, but the restoration of former conditions will prove a hard task for the powers. I do not, however, expect complications for Turkey.

"Regarding the independence of Bulgaria, there is no hurry. Turkey will take up this subject from a legal standpoint, which the powers also recognize."

SYNOD PROROGUES.

Anglicans Will Probably Meet In Vancouver Next Time.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—The Anglican Synor was prorogued last night, the bishops assembling with the lower house and being dismissed by the primate.

The upper house refused to take part in the memorial to the Bishop of Canterbury, asking that Canadian bishops be given permanent licenses to preach in England.

The assessors of the church supreme court of appeal were appointed as follows: Dr. J. A. Worrell, Toronto; Dr. H. L. Davidson, Montreal; Judge McDonald, Brockville, ad Chancellor McRae, Winnipeg.

The house decided that the next meeting of the general synod should be held at Vancouver, providing suitable railway rates can be secured.

Is She Chatham Woman?

New York, Oct. 3.—A young and pretty woman registered at Koch's Hotel, Newark, as "Mrs. P. B. James, Chatham, Ontario," Thursday night.

A man visited her, sending up a card "Dr. Andrew N. Thompson, New York." Soon afterward the man was arrested on a charge of trying to perform an operation forbidden by law.

The woman was sent to the City Hospital. Dr. Thompson was locked up at police headquarters. His real name is Dr. D. L. Flanary, who, until last June, was a resident physician in a most reputable hospital here. Yesterday the physician confessed and was held to the grand jury.

The woman, it is believed, gave a false name.

Dies In Jail.

Toronto Oct. 3.—Frank W. Smythe came to his death in Torotno jail from hemorrhage of the brain, as the result of an accidental fall. This was the verdict of Chief Coroner Johnson's inquest into the death of Smythe, who died yesterday morning in the jail, where he was held to answer a charge of purse-snatching.

The man was suffering from alcholic excesses when arrested. He was epileptic and while standing with the other prisoners in line at the jail Wednesday afternoon suffered a seizure. He struck his head in falling and died early yesterday.

Club Has Branches.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—At trial of those connected with the Mange de Ligne Club, an organization which has been carrying on unnatural customs, pleaded guilty and was remanded for enquete. Two or three were sentenced to a fine of $50 or three months in jail. Four other men pleaded guilty and were held for trial.

It was stated the club had branches in Winnipeg, Quebec and Boston.

Ninety Thousand More Letters.

New York, Oct. 3.—Working overtime the staff of the foreign branch of the postoffice managed Thursday to get off the first day of the reduced rate of postage. About 90,000 more letters than usual were despatched to Europe by the Amerika, Baltic and the Provence.

Of these a large proportion had been saved up by business houses to take advantage of the two-cent rate.

Doctor's Name Erased.

Halifax, Oct. 3.—Justice Drysdale in the Supreme Court yesterday gave judgment confirming the action of the Provincial Medical Board in erasing from medical registration the name of Dr. J. E. Dyas of Amherst on the ground that registration was obtained on incorrect certificates from the Tufts Medical College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Asked to Continue.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—W. W. Scott, son of Hon. R. W. Scott, is still acting as local master.

His resignation was to have taken effect Thursday, but he has been asked by the Ontario Government to continue his work until a successor is appointed.

Premature.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—Reports emanating from Renfrew, that Aaron A. Wright, M.P., to the effect that he has been appointed postmaster, are officially declared as premature.

Montreal Next.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 3.—Montreal was yesterday selected as the convention city of the League of American Municipalities for 1909.

DENOUNCE JAP TREATY.

Australian Authorities Want to Break Agreement.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—The treaty of commerce and navigation between Japan and Queensland terminates on July 31 of this year.

Queensland participated in the Anglo-Japanese treaty in July, 1898, to which Canada has recently become a party. But when the Commonwealth of Australia was organized and a construction was formulated, the validity of Queensland's participation in the Anglo-Japanese treaty was then questioned, but its validity was confirmed.

The federal authorities in Australia, however, consider it undesirable to be bound by the Anglo-Japanese treaty in the matter of the customs tariff and other economic considerations, and on account of this reason the decision to seek the abrogation of the treaty is ascribed.

BEER SEIZED.

Scott Act Officials Confiscated Truck Load at Fredericton.

Fredericton, N.B., Oct. 3.—A large seizure of liquor took place here yesterday, when several casks of ale, shipped from Montreal to local firms, were confiscated by the police and Scott Act detectives. The liquor was the property of druggists. The beer was taken to the police station on a truck wagon.

It is not known who will be proceeded against, but it is said it may be the C.P.R. Boats and trains are watched each day, and have been for some time, so that a line has been kept on shipments, and more seizures are likely to take place at any time.

No action has yet been taken against hotels from which seizures were made on Wednesday.

SASKATOON SEIZED.

Financier Attaches City Property For Debt, But Loses It Again.

Saskatoon, Oct. 3.—Some time ago a financier sold half a million worth of town bonds in London, for which he sent in a bill for $5,000.

The council being dilatory in paying, he garnisheed the town account. In the absence of the city solicitor, he obtained judgment by default for the amount, and the sheriff seized all movable city property, including the fire engines, etc.

But this is where the Gilbertian side of the affair comes in. James Flanagan, a prominent local hotel man, was owed some $5,000 by the financier, and promptly garnisheed his seizure to cover this debt, so he is now no better off than before.

Fielding at Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, Oct. 3.—The Liberal campaign in the riding of North Grey opened here last night when a largely attended mass meeting was addressed by Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, W. P. Telford, Liberal candidate for the riding, and Hon. A. G. MacKay, M.P.P.

The meeting was presided over by W. H. Wright, president of the Liberal Association.

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells, with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention.

In such cases the one sure remedy which speedily removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. J. A. Laliberte, of 34 Artillerie Street, Quebec, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For six years I have been doctoring for female weakness, heart and nerves, liver and kidney trouble, but in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I can safely say I have found a cure.

"I was continually bothered with the most distressing backaches, headaches, and bearing down pains, and I kept growing more and more nervous.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of all these distressing symptoms and made me a well woman. I would advise all suffering women, young or old, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

AGENT STILL MISSING

Warrant Is Out For Man Blamed For Mimico Wreck.

Fear Is Expressed That Lorne McTaggart Has Committed Suicide Because of Disaster—Is an Orphan and New at the Work—Uncle Is Looking For Him — Engineer's Heroism Saved Passengers.

Toronto, Oct. 3.—A warrant has been sworn out for the arrest of young McTaggart, the operator who neglected to close the switch at Mimico, which let the C.P.R. express crash into a Grand Trunk transfer engine on a siding night before last, resulting in the death of Engineer Quinn and injury to two other men.

McTaggart, who is only 19, has not been heard of in the city since the accident. His uncle, W. O. McTaggort, real estate and insurance broker, spent yesterday telephoning and telegraphing to all points where the young man might be likely to go, but to no avail.

While half believing that his nephew, who was last seen Thursday night making toward the lake, may have made away with himself in the stress of emotion consequent upon the accident. Mr. McTaggart is nourishing a hope that he will yet turn up among relatives in Western Ontario.

The fugitive is an orphan, and his uncle thinks that probably on this account he fears to brave an investigation, thinking that nobody would concern himself in his behalf. But his uncle is very anxious that the boy should be found, and declaring that he will personally stand by him through the difficulty.

The lad has been a qualified telegraph operator only since Aug. 19. He passed the Grand Trunk telegraphers' examination the last week in June, and went on as a relief night operator at South Parkdale about the middle of July. Then he was sent to Bronte as a full-fledged operator, from where he was removed to Mimico the night before the tragedy to fill a vacancy occasioned by the illness of the regular day operator and station agent.

According to Fireman Jarvis, who was seen in Western Hospital yesterday, it was only due to the heroism and presence of mind of the dead engineer that a great many passengers were not, probably killed or maimed. After the express had plunged into the open switch, and while he might have taken a chance and jumped before his engine collided with the Grand Trunk engine, he remained to throw on the emergency brakes, and, as a consequence, the train stopped without a single car leaving the rails.

Runaway Fatality.

Hamilton, Oct. 3.— James Hourigan, a Freelton hotelkeeper, was almost instantly killed in a runaway accident on King street in the block west of James street yesterday morning. He was driving a spirited team of horses in a wagon. The tongue broke, and the horses ran away, colliding with a street car. The horses were knocked down, and Hourigan, who was clinging to the reins, was shot out on to the pavement, alighting on his head. His skull was fractured. He was about 50 years of age. An inquest will be held.

Laurier In Quebec.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will remain in Ottawa until Sunday afternoon, when he will leave for Quebec to be present at the demonstration in his honor Monday night. The whole of next week will be devoted to Quebec district, and the following week will be spent in Montreal district, the present plans including rural and city demonstrations.

The Premier will address a public meeting in Ottawa before election day.

Exports Decrease.

Windsor, Oct. 3.—Exports from Windsor to the United States for the quarter ending Sept. 30, show a deficit of $159,240, as compared with the same quarter of 1907.

Whisky alone of the luxuries shows a decrease of about $70,000, but this is due to the fact that the United States Government has tabooed some of the stuff because of improper labels. The total for the quarter just closed was $685,128.

Vito Spino Didn't.

Lindsay Oct. 3.—Vito Spino, an Italian, who was charged with stabbing a fellow-countryman, Patzi Marcoretle, at Fenelon Falls some weeks ago, was discharged by Judge Parding yesterday after a lengthy trial.

It was proven that Spino was not the man who did the stabbing.

Typhoid at Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—To-day this city has little less than an epidemic of typhoid fever. There are now one hundred and sixty cases reported to the health authorities, and more are being added to the list daily. The water supplied the citizens is put down as the cause.

Colonial Chamber of Commerce.

London, Oct. 3.—C. A. P.)—A scheme is being actively promoted in London for the opening of a colonial chamber of commerce and exchange, the primary object being to bring about commercial unity in the Empire.

WASHED OVER NIAGARA

El Paso Man at Falls Drowns With Crowd Looking On.

With Friends, Brewster Cameron Sits on Bank and Tumbles In—Shoots Through Sluiceway and Passes Within Three Feet of Officer—Friend Rushes Into River to Help Him.

Niagara River, N.Y., Oct. 5.—Brewster Cameron of El Paso, Texas, 65 years old, lost his life here Saturday by going over the American Falls.

The accident was one of the most unusual recorded in the long list of tragedies at this resort.

Cameron was in the insurance business and came to the Falls by appointment to meet Frank H. Fulford of Bellair, Ind., and E. L. Tidball of Buffalo, Mr. Tidball being president of the American Surety Co.

The three men sat on the bank of the river until nearly 6 o'clock and when their conference was completed, arose to go. Fulford and Tidball got up first, and as Cameron attempted to do so his feet seemed to give out under him and he toppled backward into the swiftly rushing rapids. In a moment he was whisked several yards out into the stream.

Fulford, disregarding the great risk to himself, plunged into the river and attempted to get hold of Cameron, but without avail. A strange cross current caught Cameron and brought him toward shore, sending him with terrific speed into the opening of the raceway that feeds the elevator of the Cataract Hotel. Down this sluiceway went the unfortunate man and before his companions could reach him, he was again shot out into the river.

By this time the cries of the men had attracted a crowd, and Reservation Officer Tracy G. Levee, seeing the body coming down the rapids, waded out to meet it and was within three feet of Cameron when he shot by. The unfortunate man realized his plight and strove desperately to get to shore, but his frantic struggles were futile against the rush of the angry waters.

A moment later and he had passed beneath the Goat Island bridge and all hope of saving him was gone. His two business associates and a score of others stood by powerless to assist, and witnessed his plunge over the brink of the Falls to eternity. The body was not seen after it took the plunge.

With the finding Saturday of the body of another man in Niagara river just below the Falls, all records at Niagara Falls are broken. The last month has established the ghastly record of six suicides who have destroyed their lives here, two on Goat Island and four over the Falls. Three were women.

MACHINISTS GO BACK

Majority Award of First Board Is Finally Accepted.

Through Agency of Manitoba Cabinet Ministers, Settlement Is Arrived at —Strikers Will Be Taken on as Company Needs Men and Leaders In Deadlock Will Not Be Discriminated Against.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—It was announced last evening by Hon. Robt. Rogers, Minister of Public Works for Manitoba, who has been negotiating with the president of the C.P.R. for some days past, that the strike has been brought to a close.

It is understood that the western negotiations have been in the hands of W. M. Whyte, vice-president at Winnipeg, and Bell Hardy for the strikers.

The Manitoba Minister stated last evening that by the terms agreed upon the men accept the finding of the majority of the arbitration committee, which, it will be remembered, they rejected, and which was the cause of all the trouble.

The company agrees to take back the men as they find room for them, and there will be no discrimination against men who may have gone on strike.

In fact, the president declares that there is no hard feeling whatever against the men on account of the difficulties, and he hopes all will be well in the future.

It is quite likely that the agreement which has been reached will give the company an excuse to get rid of a good many men who may have proved incompetent, yet on the other hand they are bound by contract to keep all the men who are good workmen.

It is said that the settlement is largely due to Hon. Mr. Rogers, Minister of Public Works, and Hon. Colin Campbell, Attorney-General of the Roblin Ministry, and, as a matter of fact, a great deal of the preliminary work was done in Winnipeg.

Saturday evening Mr. Campbell wired his colleague that the strike was happily at an end, adding that clause 3 of the agreement reads as follows: "The company is to use all reasonable means to find employment for the men, and to prevent discrimination against those who went out."

James Somerville of the Machinists' Union, who was seen last evening, had not heard the news officially, but he said he expected it, and felt quite disappointed over the terms. It was Mr. Somerville who submitted the minority report of the board of arbitration, to back up which the strike was called.

Evelyn Claims Non-Support.

New York, Oct. 5.—Mrs. Nesbit Thaw, in a signed statement given out by her last night in the presence of her attorney, Daniel O'Reilly, makes the claim that for the past two months Harry K. Thaw has not contributed to her support, and, contrary to general opinion, no sum of money has ever been settled on her either by Thaw or his family.

In her signed statement, Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw says that Harry Thaw's "coke trust" income alone is $60,000 a year.

Mrs. Thaw, continuing, comments on Thaw's mental condition, saying: "Thaw's present mental condition is what it always has been and always will be," and with it she makes the statement that it is incurable.

Fall Proves Fatal.

Toronto, Oct. 5.—Death from concussion of the brain in St. Michael's Hospital yesterday afternoon followed the attempt of Alexander Falconer to jump from a moving Dundas car in Richmond street, near Sheppard, on Saturday evening. He was a widower, residing at 11 Hepburn street, and leaves a grown-up son and daughter. He was 45 years of age.

Tour Canada's Coming Premier

Mr. Borden Is Heard by Thousands in Niagara District.

Winds Up Day of Ovations and Big Crowds With Crowded Meeting at Niagara Falls--Overflow Meeting at St. Catharines--Chamberlain's Policy Will Succeed in Spite of Present Government, He Says.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 5.—The best day's work of R. L. Borden, the Conservative leader, was performed Saturday when he made a spectacular tour of the Niagara frontier and finished the week with a remarkable meeting in the big skating rink here Saturday night. His progress from St. Catharines was attended by a series of ovations, the most enthusiastic of which was when he reached the big arena and was given a cheer that lasted five minutes and was well sustained throughout. During the afternoon and evening Mr. Borden spoke three times, and in addition he made his appearance before hundreds at Merritton. At St. Catharines the opera house was packed and several hundred people who could not get in were spoken to in the Masonic Temple. By special car on the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Electric Railway, the party proceeded to Niagara Falls. As the car passed through Merritton, a manufacturing town, factory whistles screeched a welcome and the crowd was so great at the trolley station that Mr. Borden got down to meet the people.

The neighboring town of Thorold, which is in the riding of Welland, gave the Conservative leader a warm reception. A temporary platform had been erected and from this Mr. Borden spoke to fully 2,000 people who gathered in the street.

On reaching Niagara Falls the party found many thousands waiting. A procession was formed and the Conservative chief with Mr. Hanna, Col. Clark and the minor celebrities were driven to the rink through streets thronged with people. Three bands were in line, and delegations from many points in the county walked with torches behind the leader the streets ablaze with the flare of roman candles and rockets.

The vicinity of the rink was a dense mass of humanity, the overflow, for long before the hour of opening not a foot of space in the building was unoccupied. A Conservative estimate places the number inside at 4,000 while there were fully as many who were anxious to hear Mr. Borden.

When Mr. Borden appeared in the rink the audience rose and gave him a five-minute cheer to the accompaniment of the waving of hats, handkerchiefs and flags; and again when he got up to speak the cheering lasted quite as long.

Mr. Borden went over several points of argument. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had once proposed to make the all-red route an issue in this campaign, thinking he had originated the scheme of a fast transatlantic service. But it was soon discovered that of primary importance was better freight and cold storage facilities. The Conservatives recognized the great importance of the transportation problem and were ready to do their utmost in solving it. When the transcontinental railway was proposed, they did not oppose it, though they strenuously opposed the contract under which it was proposed to construct the road. Mr. Borden spoke also of the charges of Hodgins and the engineers of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and repeated some charges against the Government allowing camp followers and middlemen to run away with the substance of the country, concluding with the remark that surely the people of Canada had the right to demand common honesty and decent expenditure from the Government of their country.

Since the Confederation of the different parts of British North America was brought about by the foresight of Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir George Etienne Cartier and other great statesmen, not one foot of land had been lost to the Dominion until those men now on the treasury benches touched it.

Canada sent a contingent to aid the Motherland in the South African war, in spite of the Opposition of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Our men standing shoulder to shoulder, won for themselves a renown which would never be forgotten in the British Empire. Afterwards, owing to the cost of the war, a tax on food products was enacted. It was asked in the British Parliament if there would be no exception in the case of Canadian products, and the Lord Chancellor replied no, that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had stated that Canada wanted no preference.

These were conditions that would have to be changed.

"Believe me," said Mr. Borden, "that that great scheme of Joseph Chamberlain's will be brought about, not by the men of to-day, but in spite of them."

Seven Thousand Bodies Recovered.

Bombay, Oct. 5.—Over seven thousand bodies already have been extricated by the health department at Hyderabad, and the belief prevails that the total deaths resulting from the floods that devastated the Hyderabad district a week ago will exceed all previous estimates.

Gandier Accepts.

Toronto, Oct. 5.—Rev. Alfred Gandier of St. James' square Presbyterian Church yesterday announced to the congregation that he had accepted the principalship of Knox College.

Breach of Promise Suit.

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—Mathilda Guay is suing Henri Guay of Lemieux postoffice for $5,000 breach of promise.

Civil Service Exams.

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—Examinations for the outside civil service will begin on Friday, Nov. 17.

A Vagrant at 105.

Kingston, Oct. 4.—Mrs. Sarah Carr, aged 105, tottered into the dock at the Police Court Saturday, charged with vagrancy. She was turned out by her two daughters and fell into the hands of the police.

She was placed in a home but would not stay. Her daughters are in poor circumstances, and say they cannot keep their mother.

Thirty-Two Fined.

Cobalt, Oct. 5.—Thirty-two convictions in liquor cases, one of keeping a disorderly house, one of being an inmate, and one of frequenting, with fines totalling $2,615, is the way the books tallied when Friday's session concluded before Magistrate Atkinson. There were eighteen convictions and seventeen on Thursday.

Avery Runs Again.

Kingston, Oct. 5.—Saturday afternoon Melhar Avery, ex-M.P., announced definitely that he would run on an Independent Conservative ticket against Dr. Edwards, Conservative, who was selected by a close vote at the convention.

The Private Secretary.

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—Miss Elsie Saunders, assistant librarian at Queen's University, Kingston, has been appointed private secretary to Prof. Shortt, civil service commissioner.

Drowned In the Canal.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—John Curran, aged 30, fell into the canal near Wellington street bridge and was drowned.

Sir James Whitney's estimate of Mr. R. L Borden, Conservative Leader :—"There is not a cleaner, abler or brighter man in public life in Canada than Mr Borden." A vote for Mr. Porter will help to defeat Laurier and the extravagant, discredited and exhausted administration.

The Public Works department built some new crossings recently, for which many people were thankful. But why the P. W. department leaves the approaches to those crossings covered with stones ranging in size from a pigeon's egg to a cocoanut is more than the average man can understand. Is it to bump the bicyclists?

Farmers complain that Belleville grocers, who drive down to the market to buy on market days, block up the steps of the market building with their rigs and prevent farmers' wives and daughters from getting off at the platform on the south side. As a consequence they have to carry their heavy baskets, sometimes, all the way from the opposite sidewalk. A little more thoughtfulness on the part of local men would be appreciated. If they won't take a hint the authorities should move in the matter. Farmers think that they, who pay for space in the market building, should not be crowded away from the door by people who pay nothing.

MR. SMITH MUST BE CAREFUL.

(Hamilton Herald, Independent.)

If the venerable Goldwin Smith isn't careful he will be brought to the bar of public opinion on the charge of appealing to racial and religious prejudice in getting off such matter as this:

> "At present the two most important questions for the people practically seem to be whether a change of Ministry is likely to lead to greater purity of administration, and how long it is to be desired that the Government should be in French hands necessarily and visibly subject to the political influence of Rome."

It is openly charged that Premier Laurier knew all about the A. W. Fraser timber limit deal. What do the electors of Canada think of that?

Mr. Taft, judging by his reception through the U. S., says he is going to be elected. Mr. Borden, for the same reason in Canada, says the same thing. And we believe they are both right.

Mr. Borden, the leader of the Opposition, has found it necessary to give a flat denial to a statement, circulated in the West, accusing Mr. Hanna of having slandered old country immigrants. If Mr. Borden attempts to contradict every lie circulated by the Grits he will find his whole time occupied.

Poor McLaurin. What a pitiable and humiliating position he occupied when "stepping down and out" on the demand of Sir Wilfrid. His consent to retire was reluctantly given and sorrowfully he explained that when "Sir Wilfrid sent for and asked me if I would retire and make way for Mr. Charles Murphy, in Russell, I positively refused." But afterwards consented, as it would be a favor to the Government. So he is out and Murphy is in. That is, he intends to try to get in.

"I had to select a man of the race, creed and religion of Mr. Scott. I looked about, and as heaven is my witness, I thought I had found the man I needed in Mr. Murphy."

Such were the reasons given by Sir Wilfrid when asking the electors of Russell to accept his new-found Secretary of State. Thinking people will ask themselves, What interests have Irish Roman Catholics in the Government of the country that should not be enjoyed by others of a different creed and nationality? The principle, if it may be so dignified, is vicious. No man should be selected for office for any reason other than qualification.

Newburgh Burned For Second Time in Village's History.

Napanee, Ont., Oct. 5.—About four o'clock Saturday morning fire broke out in Newburgh, a village of about 500, seven miles northeast of here. on the Bay of Quinte Railway, and destroyed several buildings.

As Newburgh has no fire brigade, Napanee firemen went out by special train, and put out, as was supposed, all the fire and returned home at 7.30 a.m. The fire, however, broke out again and the brigade went again and totally extinguished the fire.

The fire started in Geo. Walker's meat stall and spread and burned M. Ryan's general store, C. P. Finkle's Hall, used for holding meetings, etc.; C. P. Finkle's blacksmith shop and carriage manufacturing shop, the postoffice, Rev. Mr. Chant's residence and Mr. Gibson's house.

Twenty-one years ago nearly all the village was destroyed.

Escaped Prisoner Went Back to Scene of His Former Crime

William Rightcliffe, After Spending Saturday in Church, Started Out on a Marauding Expedition, and Was Recaptured.

William Rightcliffe, who escaped from the county jail on Saturday morning, was recaptured last night. William may have loose ideas in regard to the ethics of ownership, but he believed in church-going, at all events. After taking French leave from the jail last Saturday, he spent all the rest of the day in John St. Church, entrance to which he obtained by breaking a window. It is said he was seen getting into the church. The broken window is there yet. After the shades of night had fallen William left his hiding place and started on his travels. His jail garments not being to his liking he decided to "borrow" some others. So he made his way to the Oak Hills, where he had been employed before, and, curiously enough, continued his criminal career by breaking into the very house for stealing from which he had been sentenced in the first place. It is alleged that he also broke into the house of Mr. Lethbridge, a farmer in that vicinity. From both places he stole clothing. Rightcliffe was seen in the vicinity yesterday, and last evening Messrs. John Detlor and H. Crosby captured him and brought him back to the hospitable arms of Jailor Ketcheson. He must now face trial on three new charges—two of house-breaking and one of jail-breaking. His original sentence may be considerably lengthened by the time his trial is over.

Business Men's Bible Class Held Banquet On Friday Evening.

Some time ago a Bible Class was formed by His Honor Judge Deroche, with the above caption. The class has attained a membership of about seventy-five, and last Friday evening held a most successful banquet in the basement of Bridge Street Church, at the opening of the autumn session.

Mr. J. J. B. Flint, in the absence of Mr. W. R. Aylsworth, President of the class, presided as chairman. The room was beautifully decorated for the occasion. After ample justice had been done to the delicacies provided by Mr. James Wallace, the chairman, with some appropriate remarks, introduced the toast of "His Majesty the King."

Mrs. A. P. Allen, in her most charming style, sang "His Majesty the King." Mrs. Allen was accompanied by Mr. Chown upon the piano.

The toast of "The Class" was proposed by His Honor Judge Deroche, the teacher, in an excellent speech. The Judge alluded to the object in view in forming the class. It was to obtain a better knowledge of the Scriptures. He said business men engrossed with the secular affairs of life could not generally give the time necessary for a proper study of the Bible. This class was designed to meet that want. Members of every sect and creed are welcomed. Doctrinal dogmas are not discussed. Every person is invited to state his own views. The Bible is the greatest and oldest book in the world, containing the vital truths of Christianity. A study of this book and of the peoples and countries where the scenes described took place cannot fail to be instructive and some good must result.

The Misses Price sang a duet with much taste and expression.

The chairman called upon Messrs. Donald G. Bleecker, E. F. Dickens, W. R. Morden, R. F. Smith, W. J. Diamond, Dr. McCulloch and Mr. James Moynes for three-minute addresses. These gentlemen made eloquent responses and spoke of their attachment to the class and their belief in the good work it was accomplishing.

Mrs. Allen sang a topical song, which she sang at the Old Boys' Reunion with such marked effect. The chairman said Mrs. Allen won the hearts of all present by her beautiful and touching rendering of the song.

Mr. David Price, in a clever and humorous speech, proposed the toast of "Our Guests."

To this toast Mr. William Johnson, the veteran Superintendent of Bridge Street Sunday School, made the first response. Space interdicts any adequate, reference to Mr. Johnson's able and witty speech. He had urged Judge Deroche to found the class, and his prophecy had been fully verified. He was delighted with its rapid growth and he knew a great and necessary work would be done in our city by it.

The Church Quartette gave one of their inimitable selections.

Mr. George A. Bennett, Chairman of the School Board, and ex-Ald. Marsh voiced the pleasure they had enjoyed at the banquet and wished the class Godspeed.

The guests were confined to the wives and sweethearts of the members of the class, and a number of gentlemen whom the class hopes to enrol as members. The proceedings terminated with God Save the King.

Another Pane Broken.

A pane of glass was last evening broken in the south door of Mr. A. McCrodan's store, on the corner of Front street and Victoria avenue. It was evidently the work of boys throwing stones, as a stone was found inside of the store near the window.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. William H. Mills and Miss Mills wish to warmly thank their many friends for the almost overwhelming kindness shown on the occasion of the death of the late Mrs. Wm. H. Mills. It made a great sorrow easier to bear, and will never be forgotten.

How the Country is Robbed

There is no use mincing language.

Mr. Marcil, who is seeking re-election in Bonaventure, claims votes on the ground that he has had $640,000 of Government money spent in his constituency, which he boasts is $125 for every elector in the county. Is this not bribery by the Government of a gigantic size.?

Where is Bonaventure, and what is there to justify such lavish expenditure?

Bonaventure is in Quebec and lies to the North of New Brunswick, on the other side of the Bay of Chaleur. About 100 miles of sea coast is backed by very little good agricultural land. But it elects a Laurierite, who, in asking the votes of the habitants, sets forth with great particularity the details of this expenditure — a wharf here, a breakwater there, a lighthouse somewhere else, a road yonder, a bridge over this river and so on. He made the claim that it was his influence and his work which had "secured" these benefits, and then gave a long list of prospective improvements to be effected in case he was re-elected.

Tax-payers, how do you like it?

It is the way Laurierites secure their election.

Had not the provisions in the election law, introduced in the Commons by Mr. Alcorn, M.P. for Prince Edward, been opposed and strangled by Aylesworth, Laurier and their followers, such bold offers of bribes would have been declared criminal and the bribers subject to punishment. That, however, would not suit the Government bribers, as it would prevent them promising Government money for votes.

How long is this to continue?

PARISIAN SAGE.

PUTS HAIR ON YOUR HEAD AND KEEPS IT THERE.

What's the use of being bald? What sense is there in deliberately allowing your hair to turn gray?

Do you want to look old before your time? Give up the thought; old age will come all too soon.

Look after your hair. Parisian Sage will kill the dandruff germs, and is the only preparation, so far as we know, that is guaranteed to do so.

Man or woman, no matter how old you are, Parisian Sage will make you look younger.

Why not go to J. S. McKeown's and get a large bottle to-day, it only costs 50 cents, and your money back if it does not cure dandruff, stop falling hair, or itching of the scalp. It will make your hair luxuriant, bright and beautiful, and it is the most refreshing, pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

The keynote to the above drama, which comes to the Carman next Thursday, October 8, is a human and quite feminine foible, so universal that if a man or woman is not conscious of it at his or her own fireside they have not failed to smile over it in some of their neighbors' homes. In other words it is a pink and white tyranny that is impaled on the spear-ends of satire — not the buckram female, loud of voice and militant, but a charming would-be domestic angel, who believed husbands would be happy provided they accept their wives' code in becoming so.

Prices 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1. Plan opens Wednesday morning.

Prince Edward Pedagogues at D. and D. Institute.

The steamer Brockville, carrying the Prince Edward teachers, arrived at the Institution shortly after eleven o'clock on Friday last, and the visitors were met at the dock by three members of the staff, by whom they were escorted up to the Institution. They proceeded at once to the chapel, where the Superintendent, Dr. Coughlin, extended to them a very hearty welcome to the Institution. The visitors were then divided into companies, each one of which visited two of the classrooms, one manual and one oral, remaining about twenty minutes in each. Then all assembled in the girls' large sitting-room, where an excellent lunch was served. The dormitories were next visited, and then an exhibition of physical drill was given in the boys' study-room. It was the intention to have next visited the industrial departments, but as it was then nearly two o'clock it was found impossible to do so.

Before leaving the Institution, Mr. Dobson, Principal of the Picton High School, moved a vote of thanks to Dr. Coughlin and the staff for the cordial reception they had received, and for the many kindnesses shown them. In doing so he expressed the great surprise and delight at what they had witnessed. They had all heard more or less of the work of the Institution, but they had no conception of the excellence and magnitude of the work that was being accomplished, and they would never forget the things they had that day seen and heard. Teachers of hearing children often spoke of the patience and perseverance required in their work, but they had that day learned a new lesson and found that all the patience they had to exercise was very small compared to that of the teachers of the deaf.

Mr. Tice, Principal of the Picton Model School, seconded the motion in a few well-chosen words. He said that in making their plans for the day they had made a mistake. They should have set apart a whole day for the Institution and another day for the city schools. To him, also, the visit to the Institution had been a revelation, and was an experience he and they would never forget.

Mr. Dolan, who acted as chairman, put the motion, which was carried with loud applause. In conveying the vote of thanks to Dr. Coughlin and his staff, he also expressed his personal appreciation of the marvellous work that was being done. He said that they seemed that day to have witnessed a miracle, for they had seen the dumb taught to speak, and he was sure all of them would be the better for the lesson in patience and tact and wonderful skill that they had received.

Dr. Coughlin briefly responded. He assured them all that their visit had given himself and the whole staff, and the pupils also, a great deal of pleasure, and they only regretted that their stay could not be longer. On behalf of his staff he had no hesitation in accepting the compliments that had been paid, for he had a splendid staff and they were doing excellent work. He himself had occupied his position for less than two years, and he found the work there most interesting and inspiring. Good work had been done in the past and he hoped that even better work would be done in the future, for they had no right to mark time and stand still. Every year's added experience should result in increased efficiency and improved methods, and he hoped that every year the work accomplished would be a little better than that of any other term. He was glad their visitors had enjoyed their visit and he hoped they would all return some time and remain a whole day.

"Y's" Held Annual Meeting--Officers For Ensuing Year.

"At Homes" are the order of the day, and the "Y's" gave theirs on Thursday evening, the 1st Oct., at the residence of His Honor, Judge Deroche, on Campbell St., This is the second time the "Y's" have been hospitably entertained by Judge and Mrs. Deroche. The night was all that could be desired, and ere the hour arrived for closing a number of friends had gathered, thus evincing their interest in the cause of temperance. We trust on the next occasion of the kind to see a still larger number present.

In the absence of our esteemed President, Mrs. J. Williams, the Vice-President, Miss Farley, took the chair and filled it admirably. The programme was longer than usual, for it was the annual meeting of the society, and several reports were heard from the various departments of work before we could give ourselves to social enjoyment. The Treasurer, Miss M. Mallory, told of a balance on hand. Donations had been given to the Y.M.C.A., the Lumber Camp Mission, the Fruit and Flower Department, to the "Y" Lecturer, Miss Jameson, and to Mr. Beale who visited the city in the spring and addressed the boys at Queen Victoria School on the subject of purity.

Mr. G. Stewart gave a short, helpful address, suggesting to us some Departments of work that we might enter upon more earnestly this winter.

The election of officers resulted as follows:—

President—Mrs. J. Williams.
Cor. Sec.—Miss K. Foster.
Rec. Sec.—Miss M. Reeves.
Treasurer—Miss L. Pascal.

Space will not admit of a thorough report of the excellent work done during the year by the Flower Mission, the Lumber Camp Department and our indefatigable Social Committee. The musical part of the programme was under the superintendence of Miss Ethel Jones, and solos were rendered by Miss W. Riggs and Mr. F. Sprague. Mr. H. Holton gave a selection on the mandolin. The last half hour was pleasantly spent in conversation, while refreshments were served.—Com.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Mr. Hugh McGillis left this morning for the west.

Mr. T. Blackburn leaves for New York to-night on business.

Dog Poisoned.

It is evident that dog poisoners are again at their nefarious work in this city, as two canines were yesterday poisoned. A valuable bull terrier belonging to Mrs. Archie Russell, residing on Pinnacle street, was found dead in its kennel and a hound, whose owner is not known, was found dead in Mr. R. Templeton's yard on John street.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Geo. Powell, of Orillia, has arrived in the city and taken up his residence at the Driving Park. He will have charge of the track, and with his well known ability should make it a great success.

It now looks like Chicago for the National league pennant. If New York wins all her games she can just tie Chicago. But if the Board of Directors of the National league decides the disputed game with Chicago in favor of New York, as many think they will, the Giants may yet fly the rag and play the post season games.

Football results Saturday — Varsity 13, T.A.C. 12; Hamilton Tigers 42, Toronto Argos 2; Ottawa 11, Montreal 2.

Bellairs of New York broke the Canadian record by running five miles at Montreal in 25.31, which was travelling a few.

Never in the history of baseball has there been such an exciting finish as in the present season. Winners in both big leagues are still in doubt, with the end of the season only two days off. It looks like Chicago in both National and American.

Matthewson for New York has been worked too hard and blew up on Saturday, while Covalski, the Phillies' star, had the Giants at his mercy. He beat New York three times in one week.

An error was made the other day in stating that Trenton would enter an intermediate team in the O.H.A. this winter, if they were allowed to play their home games on the Belleville rink. It is a junior team Trenton proposes to enter, and Rev. Mr. Armstrong this morning received notification that their request to play in Belleville has been granted. So hockey should boom here next winter. The Trenton boys should have a look-in for the championship.

Harmsworths Buy Timber.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 5.—The Harmsworths of London, publishers of The London Times, Daily Mail and other newspapers, are buying 150 sections of timber limits on Vancouver Island, thirty-five sections having already been bought in Quatsino district, and options on thirty-three more are being cruised, which will be bought if satisfactory. This is their first investment in British Columbia, though they have large holdings of pulpwood limits in Newfoundland and New Brunswick and contemplate entering into active competition with the paper trust.

Leigh Hunt, former financier of Seattle, is also acquiring fourteen sections of timber on Vancouver Island.

Woman Had Money.

Detroit, Oct. 5.—Mrs. Nellie Bishop was committed to the Wayne County Asylum at Eloise Saturday. It was not known that she had any money, but as is customary a thorough search was made of her person by the matron. Besides about $20 in cash, four bank books were discovered, showing that she had a total of $2,240 to her credit.

Three of the books showed balances in the Dominion Bank, Windsor; the Hamilton Savings, and in the Dominion Postoffice Savings Bank, Guelph branch, and a small amount in a Detroit bank. Mrs. Bishop has a son in Hamilton. Her home was in Milford, Ont.

Fruit Cream For Dinner.

Those who like the taste of fruit after every meal will surely like this new dessert, which has been tried for afternoon teas at country clubs.

It is made by cutting into bits pineapple, oranges, walnuts, bananas and marshmallows. These are stirred into whipped cream that has been put in the refrigerator and made quite cold.

The mixture is turned out into the small tumblers used at soda water fountains for all such concoctions. As an addition a macaroon is often put on the top or a small bit of brandied peach or a brandied cherry.

The young matron who has Sunday suppers could prepare such a refreshing sweet beforehand. Served with layer cake, it would satisfy any appetite.

Rouge Used on Ear Tips.

It has been remarked that certain women who sit on the piazzas of summer hotels this season are adopting the French idea of using no makeup except a little rouge on the tips of their ears. "Women who will not make up in the daytime," says a woman who returned recently from Paris, "rouge the tips of their ears. The redness of the ear lobes brings out the paleness of the cheeks. The women whose cheeks are white make them appear ruddy by rouging the tips of their ears a bright pink." This ought to furnish a fresh topic of conversation to those who sit on the summer piazzas and have everlasting discussions on beauty, dressmakers and age.

Alum For Toothache.

Every one does not know that alum in boiled milk is good for toothache. A piece of it should be boiled in the milk and then the fluid held in the mouth, not swallowed.

Alum is also good for a mouth wash in cold water. It checks any bleeding of the gums and heals and antiseptizes the wounds.

If a woman has receding gums which are apt to bleed a little after eating unpeeled fruit or corn on the cob or certain meats she would do well to keep alum dissolved in cold water in the bathroom and rinse the mouth with it after every meal and especially before she retires at night.

Man's Greatest Pleasures.

What are man's greatest pleasures? While the great thinkers of thought have been publicly trying to answer this all important question and, as usual, have only involved a mere intellectual controversy, we have been working quietly and have obtained some startling results. Here is the list complete:

Hearing ourselves talk.
Articulating.
Listening to ourselves.
Ejaculating.
Conversing.
Speaking.
And last, but not least, talking.

Sleeps In Cold Storage.

There is an apartment house in New York which has what is known as cold storage. In each apartment there is a kitchen which is supplied with a refrigerator. Inside the refrigerator it is always ice cold, says the New York Sun. A coil of pipes is covered with perpetual frost. The owner of one of these apartments opens the refrigerator door on very hot nights and sets an electric fan in front of it. In a short time the air of the whole apartment is cooled.

Brown Bread.

This is a new recipe and very nice: One-half cupful of Indian meal, one and one-half cupfuls of graham flour, one cupful of rye meal, one cupful of sour milk, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of water, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in sour milk and one teaspoonful of salt.

Rather Clever.

Something more than quiet humor is in this paragraph, printed at the end of the Edmonton Opera House regulations by Manager Brandon: "Any old ladies afraid of taking cold may keep on their hats or bonnets."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Milk for the baby can be kept warm the whole night if it is kept near a hot water bottle, the two wrapped in a woolen blanket. It has been known to keep warm until daylight.

Blackberries with sugar and orange juice to taste are delicious if thoroughly chilled before serving as a dessert for the summer dinner.

Nothing raises the price of a blessing like its removal, whereas it was its continuance which should have taught us its value.

Inspiring Hope.

The Doctor—Bear up. I must tell you the worst—you can't possibly recover. The Client—That's a pity, for if I'd lived a bit longer I should have come into a fortune. As it is, I haven't a penny to pay you with, doctor. The Doctor—Well, now, don't give up hope. We'll try to mend you. We'll try.—Illustrated Bits.

Newton's Light Theory.

Sir Isaac Newton earned worldwide fame by showing that gravitation, previously recognized only at the surface of the earth, is operative throughout the universe wherever there is matter. In another field of physics he was far less happy. His brilliant success in experimental optics came to be qualified, though not invalidated, by a faulty interpretation of the facts. He gave his name and powerful authority to the corpuscular theory of light. In Sir Isaac's view, the phenomenon of luminosity is produced by corpuscles—exceedingly minute particles of matter—which are projected continuously from the sun, stars and all other luminous bodies. But his corpuscles failed to elucidate all the appearances, and Sir Isaac's theory was finally deposed by an explanation which referred light to undulatory vibrations in the ether. It would be some comfort for the discoverer of universal gravitation, were he living now, to realize that the modern physicist is daily dealing with corpuscles flung off from matter at speeds fairly comparable with that of life itself.

Couldn't Help It.

A young lady tells the following story of an Englishman she met during a trip to Mexico:

The Englishman became acquainted with the American party while they were all guests at a winter hotel. Whenever the parents of the American girl proposed any trip the Englishman immediately begged to be made one of the party. He was to be included in a moonlight trip to a nearby mountain. After the Americans were ready to start they had to delay some fifteen minutes awaiting their guest's arrival. When he did arrive he electrified them by his comments on the reason for his delay. What he said was:

"I beg pardon for my beastly tardiness. Couldn't help it, don'cherknow. I had to bring my mother from the gardens first. It's a singular horrid bore, but one has to be kind to his mother, don'cherknow!" — Milwaukee Free Press.

The Queer Screw Plant.

There is nothing under the sun quite so quaint, so weird and witchlike as the pandanus prairies of Fiji. The pandanus, or screw plant, as it is called, is a most grotesque specimen of the vegetable kingdom even at the best and in the early stages of its growth. In its very young days it is of an extraordinarily screwlike shape and looks as though some unkind hand had taken hold of its long, swordlike leaves and twisted them round and round. Later on it straightens out a bit, and from it grow a number of tall wooden stilts. Its foliage is simple, a number of drooping, ragged tufts, for all the world like mops and very mournful looking. Among these mops hangs the fruit, in shape like a pineapple, made up of hard red and yellow kernels, woody and fibrous and quite uneatable from a European's point of view.

His Status.

The caste system is so deeply rooted among the people of India that Christianized Hindoos are still under its potent influence. For example, Mr. J. C. Oman, formerly professor of natural science in the government college at Lahore, tells in his book, "The Brahmans, Deists and Muslims of India," of the native Christian head master of a mission school who was asked in a court of justice what his religion was.

"Brahman-Christian," he replied.

The judge, who was a European, not recognizing such a sect, asked for more information.

"I am a Brahman-Christian," reiterated the head master. "I cannot call myself simply a Christian," he continued with some warmth, "when that Choorah (sweeper) there is also a Christian. I am a Brahman-Christian, sir."

Friday and Fortunes.

Two women who wished to make an appointment with a fortune teller who was pronounced "just splendid" by everybody who had patronized her were advised by the seer to come on Friday.

"That is, if you are not superstitious about Friday," she said. "Most people are. They regard Friday as such an unlucky day that they won't even have their fortune told them for fear they will hear something unlucky. That is why I advised you to come on that day. I will have plenty of time and won't have to put your cases through with such a rush."—St. Louis Republic.

An Equinox.

Tommy—Pa, what is an equinox? Pa—Why—er—it is—ahem! For goodness sake, Tommy, don't you know anything about mythology at all? An equinox was a fabled animal, half horse, half cow. Its name is derived from the words 'equine' and 'ox.' It does seem as if these public schools don't teach children anything nowadays!"

Naturalized.

An Italian went to the civil service commissioners' rooms to be examined for a laborer's position. He answered most of the questions correctly. Finally they asked him if he had ever been naturalized. He seemed a bit puzzled, but at last his face lighted up. "Ah, I know whata you mean. Scratcha de arm. Yes, lasta week."

Then He Stole.

Prudent Swain—If I were to steal a kiss, would it scare you so that you would scream? Timid Maiden—I couldn't. Fright always makes me dumb.

I have never known a man of real ability to be ungrateful.—Goethe.

Jockey's Tricks.

"There are tricks of two kinds in jockeying," said a jockey, "the legitimate and the illegitimate. Use the first and you'll prosper. Use the last and it's all up.

"Illegitimate tricks are pulling a race and getting left at the post. If you once pull a fast horse and make him lose, you are always afterward an object of suspicion, and ten to one if you ever pull another horse you are done for. But getting yourself left at the post is a big and complex subject, and it is the one trick that a clever jockey can work time and again with safety.

"To cause a rival horse to swerve is an illegitimate trick that often wins your race. You cause the swerving by straightening out your leg so that your heel nearly touches the other horse's nose, or you make a wide slash with your whip so that it nearly touches the other horse's eyes.

"The legitimate tricks are— But why give them away when it has taken all my life to learn them?"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

We Work Too Hard.

Lady Headfort during her American tour said in New York that she approved of international marriages.

"They correct us," she explained. "Our Englishmen work too little, your American men work too much, and the international marriage tends to bring about a happy mean. Your men do work too much, you know," said Lady Headfort. "I have an English friend who attended the funeral of one of your hardest workers, a multimillionaire. My friend's wife said rather bitterly to him at the funeral:

"'How you have missed your opportunities, my love! Place yourself beside Mr. Ritch there. You are both of the same age. You both began life together. Yet you are a poor man, while he died a multimillionaire.'

"'Yes,' said the English husband. 'There Ritch lies, dead of nervous prostration, without one single penny in his pocket, and here I stand, hale and hearty, with a wallet in my coat containing quite a hundred dollars.'"

Talismans in Malta.

There are still to be found in Malta a number of small stones shaped and colored like the eyes, tongues and other parts of serpents.

The superstitious among the Maltese connect these with the tradition that St. Paul when shipwrecked was cast on their island and that it was there that while lighting a bundle of sticks for a fire a viper fastened on the apostle's hand. St. Paul calmly shook the reptile off into the flames, and no harm followed. The natives wear these stones as talismans, in which character they suppose them serviceable in warding off dangers from snake bites and poisons.

They are found in St. Paul's cave imbedded in clay and are set in rings and bracelets and when found to be in the shape of a tongue or liver or heart are hung around the neck. They are also taken internally, dissolved in wine, which method is attended, according to some people, by more immediate results.

Blessings.

She was the daughter of the village physician, a sunny curled darling of six, whose big blue eyes rested on the face of the Sunday school teacher with an attention and intelligence most encouraging.

So when, after a discourse to the children on the beauty of appreciating their blessings, the teacher asked for an explanation of a blessing the doctor's little daughter rose and said:

"If my papa was to have a patient and she was to get well, and she was to pay my papa, and my papa was to give the money to my mamma, and my mamma was to buy me a new dress and take me down to the vacant lot and let me ride the great big fierce lion on the merry-go-round, that would be a blessing."—Woman's Home Companion.

A Witty Reply.

A witty but not overindustrious Celt was one of a street gang. A few minutes before noon one day he threw his shovel into the gutter, sat down on the curbstone and proceeded to light his pipe. Just then the superintendent of streets came round a corner and, seeing Pat, roared out:

"Here! What are you throwing down your shovel for at this time of day?"

"To cool it, sorr," said Pat.

Wasted Opportunities.

"How did you like my talk last night?" asked the beginner in the lecture field.

"Well," replied the candid critic, "you didn't take advantage of your many opportunities."

"I didn't?"

"No; you had a number of opportunities to quit before you did."—Philadelphia Press.

Declined in Rebuttal.

Authoress (of the budding variety)—I got level with the editor last night. He always rejects my manuscripts. But I have had my revenge. Friend—How did you do it? Authoress—I declined his son with thanks.—Pick-Me-Up.

Driven From Home.

"Did you hear that the daughter of that rich man in the next street had been driven from home?"

"No! When did it happen?"

"Just after she got into the carriage."

No Wonder.

Jack—Yes, poor John may have had his faults, but his heart was on the right side."

Wagge—Is it possible? No wonder he died.

ot as far as many another derelict has wandered in her time, son," said Barnett.

The talk washed back and forth across the hulks of classic sea mysteries, new and old; of the City of Boston, which went down with all hands, leaving for record only a melancholy scrawl on a bit of board to meet the wondering eyes of a fisherman on the far Cornish coast; of the Great Queensland, which set out with 569 souls aboard, bound by a route unknown to a tragic end; of the Naronic, with her silent and empty lifeboats alone left, drifting about the open sea, to hint at the story of her fate; of the Huronian, which ten years later, on the same day and date and hailing from the same port as the Naronic, went out into the void, leaving no trace; of Newfoundland captains who sailed, roaring with drink, under the arches of cathedral bergs, only to be prisoned, buried and embalmed in the one icy embrace; of craft assailed by the terrible one stroke lightning clouds of the Indian ocean, found days after, stone blind, with their crews madly hauling at useless sheets, while the officers clawed the compass and shrieked; of burnings and piracies, of pest ships and slave ships and ships mad for want of water, of whelming earthquake waves and mysterious suctions, drawing irresistibly against wind and steam power upon unknown currents; of stout hulks deserted in panic, although sound and seaworthy, and of others so swiftly dragged down that there was no time for any to save himself, and of a hundred other strange, stirring and pitiful ventures such as make up the inevitable peril and incorrigible romance of the ocean. In a pause Billy Edwards said musingly:

"Well, there was the Laughing Lass."

"How did you happen to hit on her?" asked Barnett quickly.

"Why not, sir? It naturally came into my head. She was last seen somewhere about this part of the world, wasn't she?" After a moment's hesitation he added, "From something I heard ashore I judge we've a commission to keep a watch out for her as well as to destroy derelicts."

"What about the Laughing Lass?" asked McGuire, the paymaster, a New Englander, who had been in the service but a short time.

"Good Lord, don't you remember the Laughing Lass mystery and the disappearance of Dr. Schermerhorn?"

"Karl Augustus Schermerhorn, the man whose experiments to identify telepathy with the Marconi wireless waves made such a furore in the papers?"

"Oh, that was only a byproduct of his mind! He was an original investigator in every line of physics and chemistry, besides most of the natural sciences," said Barnett. "The government is particularly interested in him because of his contributions to aerial photography."

"And he was lost with the Laughing Lass?"

"Nobody knows," said Edwards. "He left San Francisco two years ago on a hundred foot schooner with an assistant, a big brass bound chest and a ragamuffin crew. A newspaper man named Slade, who dropped out of the world about the same time, is supposed to have gone along too. Their schooner was last sighted about 450 miles northeast of Oahu in good shape and bound westward. That's all the record of her that there is."

"Was that Ralph Slade?" asked Barnett.

"Yes. He was a free lance writer and artist."

"I knew him well," said Barnett. "He was in our mess in the Philippine campaign on the North Dakota. War correspondent then. It's strange that I never identified him before with the Slade of the Laughing Lass."

"What was the object of the voyage?" asked Ives.

"They were supposed to be after buried treasure," said Barnett.

"I've always thought it more likely that Dr. Schermerhorn was on a scientific expedition," said Edwards. "I knew the old boy, and he wasn't the sort to care for treasure, buried or unburied."

"Every time a ship sets out from San Francisco without publishing to all the world just what her business is all the world thinks it's one of those wild goose hunts," observed Ives.

"Yes," agreed Barnett. "Flora and fauna of some unknown island would be much more in the Schermerhorn line of traffic. Not unlikely that some of the festive natives collected the unfortunate professor."

Various theories were advanced, withdrawn, refuted, defended, and the discussion carried them through the swift twilight into the darkness which had been hastened by a high spreading canopy of storm clouds. Abruptly from the crow's nest came startling news for those desolate seas: "Light, ho! Two points on the port bow!"

The lookout had given extra voice to it. It was plainly heard throughout the ship.

The group of officers stared in the direction indicated, but could see nothing. Presently Ives and Edwards, who were the keenest sighted, made out a faint, suffused radiance. At the same time came a second hail from the crow's nest.

"On deck, sir."

"Hello," responded Carter, the officer of the deck.

"There's a light here I can't make anything out of, sir."

"What's it like?"

"Sort of a queer general glow."

"General glow, indeed!" muttered Forsythe, among the group aft. "That fellow's got an imagination."

"Can't you describe it better than that?" called Carter.

"Don't make it out at all, sir. 'Tain't any regular and proper light. Looks like a lamp in a fog."

Among themselves the officers discussed it interestedly as it began to grow plainer.

"Not unlike the electric glow above a city seen from a distance," said Barnett as it grew plainer.

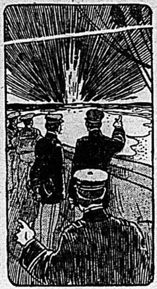
"Yes, but the nearest electric lighted city is some 800 miles away," objected Ives.

"Mirage, maybe," suggested Edwards.

"Pretty hard working mirage to cover that distance," said Ives. "Though I've seen 'em"—

"Great heavens! Look at that!" shouted Edwards.

A great shaft of pale brilliance shot up toward the zenith. Under it whirled a maelstrom of varied radiance, pale with distance, but marvelously beautiful. Forsythe passed them with a troubled face on his way below to report, as his relief went up.



A great shaft of pale brilliance shot up.

"The quartermaster reports the compass behaving queerly," he said.

Three minutes later the captain was on the bridge. The great ship had swung, and they were speeding direct for the phenomenon. But within a few minutes the light had died out.

"Another sea mystery to add to our list," said Billy Edwards. "Did any one ever see a show like that before? What do you think, Doc?"

"Humph!" grunted the veteran. "New to me. Volcanic, maybe."

CHAPTER II.

THE falling of dusk on June the 3d found tired eyes aboard the Wolverine. Every officer in her complement had kept a private and personal lookout all day for some explanation of the previous night's phenomenon. All that rewarded them were a sky filmed with lofty clouds and the holiday parade of the whitetted waves.

Nor did evening bring a repetition of that strange glow. Midnight found the late stayers still deep in the discussion.

"One thing is certain," said Ives; "it wasn't volcanic."

"Why so?" asked the paymaster.

"Because volcanoes are mostly stationary, and we headed due for that light."

"Yes, but did we keep headed?" said Barnett, who was navigating officer as well as ordnance officer, in a queer voice.

"What do you mean, sir?" asked Edwards eagerly.

"After the light disappeared the compass kept on varying. The stars were hidden. There is no telling just where we were headed for some time."

"Then we might be fifty miles from the spot we aimed at."

"Hardly that," said the navigator. "We could guide her to some extent by the direction of wind and waves. If it was volcanic we ought certainly to have sighted it by now."

"Always some electricity in volcanic eruptions," said Trendon. "Makes compass cut didoes. Seen it before."

"Where?" queried Carter.

"Off Martinique. Pelee eruption. Needle chased its tail like a kitten."

"Are there many volcanoes hereabouts?" somebody asked.

"We're in 162 west, 31 north, about," said Barnett. "No telling whether there are or not. There weren't at last accounts, but that's no evidence that there aren't some since. They come up in the night, these volcanic islands."

"Just cast an eye on the charts," said Billy Edwards. "Full of E. D.'s and P. D.'s all over the shop. Every one of 'em volcanic."

"E. D.'s and P. D.'s?" queried the paymaster.

"Existence doubtful and position doubtful," explained the ensign. "Every time the skipper of one of these wandering trade ships gets a speck in his eye he reports an island. If he really does bump into a rock he cuts in an arithmetic book for his latitude and longitude and lets it go at that. That's how the chart makers make a living, getting out new editions every few months."

"But it's a fact that these seas are constantly changing," said Barnett. "They're so little traveled that no one happens to be around to see an island born. I don't suppose there's a part on the earth's surface more liable to seismic disturbances than this region."

"Seismic!" cried Billy Edwards. "I should say it was seismic! Why, when a native of one of these island groups sets his heart on a particular loaf of bread up his breadfruit tree he doesn't bother to climb after it. Just waits for some earthquake to happen along and shake it down to him."

"Good boy, Billy!" said Dr. Trendon approvingly. "Do another."

"It's a fact," said the ensign heatedly. "Why, a couple of years back there was a trader here stocked up with a lot of belly mixture in bottles. Thought he was going to make his pile because there'd been a colic epidemic in the islands the season before. Bottles were labeled 'Do not shake.' That settled the business. Might as well have marked 'em 'Keep frozen' in this part of the world. Fellow went broke."

"In any case," said Barnett, "such a glow as that we sighted last night I've never seen from any volcano."

"Nor I," said Trendon. "Don't prove it mightn't have been."

"I'll just bet the best dinner in San Francisco that it isn't," said Edwards.

"You're on," said Carter.

"Let me in," suggested Ives.

"And I'll take one of it," said McGuire.

"Come one, come all," said Edwards cheerily. "I'll live high on the collective bad judgment of this outfit."

"Tonight isn't likely to settle it anyhow," said Ives. "I move we turn in."

Expectant minds do not lend themselves to sound slumber. All night the officers of the Wolverine slept on the verge of waking, but it was not until dawn that the cry of "Sail ho!" sent them all hurrying to their clothes. Ordinarily officers of the United States navy do not scuttle on deck like a crowd of curious schoolgirls, but all hands had been keyed to a high pitch over the elusive light, and the bet with Edwards now served as an excuse for the betrayal of unusual eagerness; hence the quarter deck was soon alive with men who were wont to be deep in dreams at that hour.

They found Carter, whose watch on deck it was, reprimanding the lookout.

"No, sir," the man was insisting, "she didn't show no light, sir. I'd 'a' sighted her an hour ago, sir, if she had."

"We shall see," said Carter grimly. "Who's your relief?"

"Sennett."

"Let him take your place. Go aloft, Sennett."

As the lookout, crestfallen and surly, went below Barnett said in subdued tones:

"Upon my word, I shouldn't be surprised if the man was right. Certainly there's something queer about that hooker. Look how she handles herself!"

The vessel was some three miles to windward. She was a schooner of the common two masted Pacific type, but she was comporting herself in a manner uncommon on the Pacific or any other ocean. Even as Barnett spoke she heeled well over and came rushing up into the wind, where she stood with all sails shaking. Slowly she paid off again, bearing away from them. Now she gathered full headway, yet edged little by little to windward again.

"Mighty queer tactics," muttered Edwards. "I think she's steering herself."

"Good thing she carries a weather helm," commented Ives, who was an expert on sailing rigs. "Most of that type do. Otherwise she'd have jibed her masts out, running loose that way."

Captain Parkinson appeared on deck and turned his glasses for a full minute on the strange schooner.

"Aloft there!" he hailed the crow's nest. "Do you make out any one aboard?"

"No, sir!" came the answer.

"Mr. Carter, have the chief quartermaster report on deck with the signal flags."

"Yes, sir."

"Aren't we going to run up to her?" asked McGuire, turning in surprise to Edwards.

"And take the risk of getting a hole punched in our pretty paint with her running amuck that way? Not much!"

Up came the signal quartermaster to get his orders, and there ensued a one sided conversation in the pregnant language of the sea.

"What ship is that?"

No answer.

"Are you in trouble?" asked the cruiser and waited. The schooner showed a bare and silent main peak.

"Heave to." Now Uncle Sam was giving orders.

But the other paid no heed.

"We'll make that a little more emphatic," said Captain Parkinson. A moment later there was the sharp crash of a gun, and a shot went across the bows of the sailing vessel. Hastened by a flaw of wind that veered from the normal direction of the breeze the stranger made sharply to windward, as if to obey.

"Ah, there she comes!" ran the comment along the cruiser's quarterdeck.

But the schooner, after standing for a moment, all flapping, answered another flaw and went wide about on the opposite tack.

"Derelict," remarked Captain Parkinson. "She seems to be in good shape, too, Dr. Trendon."

"Yes, sir." The surgeon went to the captain, and the others could hear his deep, abrupt utterance in reply to some question too low for their ears.

"Might be, sir. Beriberi, maybe more likely smallpox if anything of that kind. But some of 'em would be on deck."

"Whew! A plague ship!" said Billy Edwards. "Just my luck to be ordered to board her." He shivered slightly.

"Scared, Billy?" said Ives. Edwards had a record for daring which made this joke obvious enough to be safe.

"I wouldn't want to have my peculiar style of beauty spoiled by smallpox marks," said the ensign, with a smile on his homely, winning face. "And I've a hunch that that ship is not a lucky find for this ship."

"Then I've a hunch that your hunch is a wrong one," said Ives. "How long would you guess that craft to be?"

They were now within a mile of the schooner. Edwards scrutinized her calculatingly.

"Eighty to ninety feet."

"Say 150 tons. And she's a two masted schooner, isn't she?" continued Ives insinuatingly.

"She certainly is."

"Well, I've a hunch that that ship is a lucky find for any ship, but particularly for this ship."

"Great Caesar!" cried the ensign excitedly. "Do you think it's her?"

A buzz of electric interest went around the group. Every glass was raised. Every eye strained toward her stern to read the name as she veered into the wind again. About she came. A sharp sigh of excited disappointment exhaled from the spectators. The name had been painted out.

"No go," breathed Edwards. "But I'll bet another dinner"—

"Mr. Edwards," called the captain. "You will take the second cutter, board that schooner and make a full investigation."

"Yes, sir."

"Take your time. Don't come alongside until she is in the wind. Leave enough men aboard to handle her."

"Yes, sir."

The schooner steamed to within half a mile of the aimless traveler, and the small boat put out. Not one of his fellows but envied the young ensign as he left the ship, steered by Timmins, a veteran bo's'n's mate, wise in all the ins and outs of sea ways. They saw him board, neatly running the small boat under the schooner's counter. They saw the foresheet eased off and the ship run up into the wind. Then the foresail dropped and the wheel lashed so that she would stand so. They awaited the reappearance of Edwards and the bo's'n's mate when they had vanished below decks, and with an intensity of eagerness they followed the return of the small boat.

Billy Edwards' face as he came on deck was a study. It was alight with excitement. Yet between the eyes two deep wrinkles of puzzlement quivered. Such a face the mathematician bends above his paper when some obstructive factor arises between him and his solution.

"Well, sir?" There was a hint of effort at restraint in the captain's voice.

"She's the Laughing Lass, sir. Everything shipshape, but not a soul aboard."

"Come below, Mr. Edwards," said the captain. And they went, leaving behind them a boiling caldron of theory and conjecture.

CHAPTER III.

BILLY EDWARDS came on deck with a line of irritation right angling the furrows between his eyes.

"Go ahead," the quarter deck bade him, seeing him aflush with information.

"The captain won't believe me," blurted out Edwards.

"Is it as bad as that?" asked Barnett, smiling.

"It certainly is," replied the younger man seriously. "I don't know that I blame him. I'd hardly believe it myself if I hadn't"—

"Oh, go on! Out with it! Give us the facts. Never mind your credibility."

"The facts are that there lies the Laughing Lass a little weather worn, but sound as a dollar, and not a living being aboard of her. Her boats are all there. Everything's in good condition, though none too orderly. Pitcher half full of fresh water in the rack. Sails all O. K. Ashes of the galley fire still warm. I tell you, gentlemen, that ship hasn't been deserted more than a couple of days at the outside."

"Are you sure all the boats are there?" asked Ives.

"Dory, dingey and two surfboats. Isn't that enough?"

"Plenty."

"Been over her, inside and out. No sign of collision. No leak. No anything, except that the starboard side is blistered a bit. No evidence of fire anywhere else. I tell you," said Billy Edwards pathetically, "it's given me a headache."

"Perhaps it's one of those cases of panic that Forsythe spoke of the other night," said Ives. "The crew got frightened at something and ran away, with the devil after them."

"But crews don't just step out and run around the corner and hide when they're scared," objected Barnett.

"That's true, too," assented Ives. "Well, perhaps that volcanic eruption jarred them so that they jumped for it."

"Pretty wild theory, that," said Edwards.

"No wilder than the facts, as you give them," was the retort.

"That's so," admitted the ensign gloomily.

"But how about pestilence?" suggested Barnett.

"Maybe they died fast, and the last survivor, after the bodies of the rest were overboard, got delirious and jumped after them."

"Not if the galley fire was hot," said Dr. Trendon briefly. "No; pestilence doesn't work that way."

"Did you look at the wheel, Billy?" asked Ives.

"Did I? There's another thing. Wheel's all right, but compass is no good at all. It's regularly bewitched."

"What about the log, then?"

"Couldn't find it anywhere. Hunted high, low, jack and the game; everywhere except in the big, brass bound chest I found in the captain's cabin. Couldn't break into that."

"Dr. Schermerhorn's chest!" exclaimed Barnett. "Then he was aboard."

"Well, he isn't aboard now," said the ensign grimly. "Not in the flesh. And that's all," he added suddenly.

"No, it isn't all," said Barnett gently. "There's something else. Captain's orders?"

"Oh, no. Captain Parkinson doesn't take enough stock in my report to tell me to withhold anything," said Edwards, with a trace of bitterness in his voice. "It's nothing that I believe myself, anyhow."

"Give us a chance to believe it," said Ives.

"Well," said the ensign hesitantly, "there's a sort of atmosphere about that schooner that's almost uncanny."

"Oh, you had the shudders before you were ordered to board," bantered Ives.

"I know it. I'd have thought it was one of those fool presentiments if I were the only one to feel it. But the men were affected too. They kept together, like frightened sheep. And I heard one say to another, 'Hey, Boney, d'you feel like some one was a-buzzin' your nerves like a fiddle string?' Now," demanded Edwards plaintively, "what right has a jackie to have nerves?"

"That's strange enough about the compass," said Barnett slowly. "Ours is all right again. The schooner must have been so near the electric disturbance that her instruments were permanently deranged."

"That would lend weight to the volcanic theory," said Carter.

"So the captain didn't take kindly to your go-look-see?" questioned Ives of Edwards.

"As good as told me I'd missed the point of the thing," said the ensign, flushing. "Perhaps he can make more of it himself. At any rate he's going to try. Here he is now."

"Dr. Trendon," said the captain, appearing. "You will please to go with me to the schooner."

"Yes, sir," said the surgeon, rising from his chair with such alacrity as to draw from Ives the sardonic comment:

"Why, I actually believe old Trendon is excited."

For two hours after the departure of the captain and Trendon there were dull times on the quarter deck of the Wolverine. Then the surgeon came back to them.

"Billy was right," he said.

"But he didn't tell us anything!" cried Ives. "He didn't clear up the mystery."

"That's what," said Trendon. "One thing Billy said," he added, waxing unusually prolix for him, "was truer than maybe he knew."

"Thanks," murmured the ensign. "What was that?"

"You said 'Not a living being aboard.' Exact words, hey?"

"Well, what of it?" exclaimed the ensign excitedly. "You don't mean you found dead"—

"Keep your temperature down, my boy. No. You were exactly right. Not a living being aboard."

"Thanks for nothing," retorted the ensign.

"Neither human nor other," pursued Trendon.

"What!"

"Food scattered around the galley. Crumbs on the mess table. Ever see a wooden ship without cockroaches?"

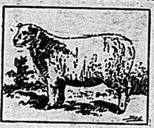
FINISHING SHEEP.

To Reach Perfection They Must Be Properly Fed From Birth.

Scientific men give to the feeder various formulae for the proper balancing of the rations or food given to live stock which is termed a balanced ration, or, in other words, a certain quantity of food the chemical constituents of which balance in correct proportion to the supposed requirement of the animal which consumes them. Like all scientific principles when used in practical work, it needs, in addition to the scientific, a thorough practical knowledge in order to obtain full benefit from the information that science has placed in the hands of the feeder. What is suitable for an animal at one stage of its development is not necessarily so at another. In dealing with the finishing of sheep, however, it may at once be said that, no matter how skillful the feeder may be, he can never bring sheep or lambs to a proper finish that have been in their earlier days neglected or allowed to waste and become poor.

The essence of the first class carcass or the perfectly finished sheep or lamb is that it should never lose during any portion of its career that fine touch which only those that have been fed straight on from birth can give. The breeder who is most successful is the feeder who brings his sheep to the greatest degree of perfection, is the man who feeds regularly with an increasing quantity of food, in accordance with the consuming capability of the sheep, straightaway from birth, and is the man who exhibits the most perfectly finished animal.



A CANADIAN PRODUCT.

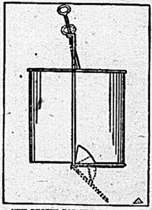
It is singular but true that for our ordinary market requirements it is far more difficult to finish our sheep so as to realize the highest price than it is to finish for the show or for exhibition. For the latter one cannot well get the animal too fat, nor can it be overfed so long as the firm and good touch remains, but with the ordinary market the demand at the present time is for the animal that is deep in its flesh, with a good handle and a moderate supply of fat. This market condition needs great care in feeding.—W. R. Gilbert.

IMPROVED BUCKET.

For Use In Feeding Stock and Handling Fluid Substances.

A bucket of peculiar construction, designed especially to be used by farmers and dairymen in feeding slop to stock and in handling of fluid substances, has recently been invented. It serves in a sense as a dipper.

The arrangement is such that it can be filled by forcing it bottom downward into a receptacle of fluid substance, the hinged portion of the bottom being opened to permit the bucket to be filled and closed to hold the contents until carried to the place of feeding. The contents can thus be discharged into a trough without wasting it and without the liability of spilling it upon the clothes of the operator. The hinged portion of the bottom of the can is operated by a rod extending above the tip, which terminates in a handle.



NEW BUCKET FOR FEEDING STOCK.

As the bucket is carried by the latter, pressure is always maintained upon the bottom to keep it closed. When it is desired to discharge the contents the handle is pushed downward.

Feeding a Coach Stallion.

I feed our stallions during breeding season about ten quarts oats and eight quarts bran and as much timothy hay as they will eat up clean per day. I always feed them three times a day and a bran mash twice a week. During the nonbreeding season I cut the oats down if I do not want the horse for show purposes. All our stallions get two hours walking exercise a day. Alfalfa hay is a very good feed, only it is very fattening.—P. G. H. Bement, Pabst Stock Farm.

Want Good Pastures.

If troubled with stock breaking through the pasture fences, the indications are that the pastures inside the fence are not meeting the animal's requirement. A good pasture takes the place of a good fence.

Selections

IN A YOKOHAMA THEATER.

The Plays Last All Day and Sometimes Two Days.

Before leaving Yokohama I went to the theater, which certainly was unlike anything I have ever seen before. We sat on the floor of our so called box and had tea like the crowd. And such a crowd! It was an endless source of interest and amusement to watch them, whole families—mothers-in-law and daughters-in-law, children of all ages and parents of different generations, fathers, sons and grandsons. All had their dinners with them. Little trays were produced—tiny boxes full of rice, bowls containing weird foodstuffs, pink, white and green; seaweed on rice cakes, raw fish and nameless yellow condiments, tea in microscopic cups, of course, with no milk or sugar. The Japanese cannot understand Europeans putting milk in their tea, as, according to them, it has a strong smell. The children were dressed and undressed during the entr'actes, and people smoked, slept, ate, talked and fanned themselves. It was certainly a great contrast to see a little "musme" such as Pierre Loti describes, daintily dressed in the gayest of kimonos and smartest of obis, sitting between a cooly wearing nothing but a loose cotton jacket and an old hag nursing a baby. Although it was true that most of the men had little on and the thermometer was 85 degrees, the atmosphere was not impossible, as I am sure would have been the case in a European theater under similar circumstances. The plays have usually fourteen or fifteen acts and last all day and sometimes two. This particular one, not having an actress such as Sadi Yacco to interpret it, was quite unintelligible to me, but I admired the grace of the actresses, their easy movements when dancing and the way they managed their tight clothes. Imagine my surprise when I found out afterward that they were all men! Up to a few years ago men and women did not act together in Japan, the theatrical companies being composed of either one sex or the other. But a change has come over them, and there are now mixed companies.—Reminiscences of Lady Randolph Churchill in Century.

The Suffocated Duck.

"There's one thing I'm glad of," said a chef. "Caneton rouennais is dying out."

"Is it a disease?"

"No; it's a duck. It's the duck of Rouen, a famous duck which you kill by suffocation. When you order Caneton rouennais at a fashionable restaurant you may be sure that it is not suffocated for you as cruelly as though you had been Nero.

"But every now and then, after eating Caneton rouennais, people take sick and die. Foreign physicians, studying the matter, show us that the blood of a suffocated duck is apt to turn violently poisonous—that you may be eating Caneton rouennais or you may be taking the equivalent of a deadly dose of prussic acid.

"Yes, the Caneton rouennais of late has avenged itself on so many of its torturers that I don't think it will be long now before the suffocation of ducks will cease."—Exchange.

Junk Dealing a Great Industry.

But few of the thousands of people who see an "old iron" man poking through a heap of rubbish realize that the junk business in this country has grown to stupendous proportions. In Philadelphia last year over $25,000,000 changed hands in dealing in old metal, ranging from the trivial sums paid to the men who search the alleys for small discarded articles to the many thousands of dollars paid for machinery from dismantled factories.

The Pennsylvania railroad alone disposes of from 10,000 to 20,000 tons of waste material a month to Philadelphia dealers. This is chiefly wornout rolling stock and rails. The company which controls the street railways of that city disposes of almost an equal amount, and hundreds of other industrial concerns add their quota.—Popular Mechanics.

Inconsistent.

The East Asiatic Lloyd of Shanghai publishes a string of verses by one Richard Neumann, the burden of which could be expressed in the words, "Do not marry." In the next column Richard Neumann's name appears in an advertisement stating that the poet is willing to serve as witness at marriages at the following prices:

"In 5 o'clock dress, 2 taels.

"Cutaway coat and light trousers, 3 taels.

"Clawhammer coat, high hat, etc., 4 taels.

"Wearing all his decorations, 5 taels.

"Pay must be in advance, and witness must be invited to the meal following the ceremony."

He Required Time.

Just before Mark Twain's daughter, Miss Clara Clemens, sailed for Europe she attended a reception, at which she met one of the friends of her Hartford childhood who had been a very small boy, but had grown to be an unusually tall man. Thinking that Mark might not remember the friend, she said to her father:

"You remember Tom Jones, father?"

"I remember part of him," replied Mark, peering up at Jones, "but it seems to me it would take a week to remember all of him."—Harper's Weekly.

FEEDING HORSES.

Variety of Grains Properly Bala Give Best Results.

One of the commonest faults in f ing horses is the lack of variet feed. Considering the number of ferent grains and feed stuffs, it seem strange that every team ow should not provide for his anima ration that would be perfectly acc able to its system at all times. I a fact, however, that no more tha per cent feed what may be terme well balanced ration.

The other 80 per cent still cling the old ration of corn and hay or and hay, which practical experim have long since proved to be exp sive and wasteful. When it comes feeding your horses, just think of y own appetite. Supposing you w performing hard work, manual la how long would you be content to two articles of food, the same th for every meal, day after day? I pretty safe to say that you would of your ration in a very short time

A bad digestion and a poorly no ished body are always the results improperly balanced food, writes breeder in American Cultivator. W such a condition exists in either m or horse the best physical effort c not be expected; it is impossible. one or two articles of feed will sup to your horses all the elements of trition that their system needs. you want the best results, feed a tion that contains all the elements nutrition in properly balanced p tions. Corn alone is not a well b anced grain for feeding; neither oats nor barley.

Of the three grains oats are proba fed more extensively than are c and barley combined. Barley is rapi gaining favor as a feed, however, a when properly combined with the o er grains makes an ideal ration.

We cannot emphasize too stron the necessity for grinding the gr part of the ration. The horse ow who fails to do this loses 25 to 50 p cent of the nutritive value. The h outer covering of the grain makes difficult to digest, and a very lar proportion passes through the stoma of the animal in an undigested con tion. An examination of the fee will show the whole grain and pro the truth of this statement. Wh you feed a ground ration you prep it for quick digestion. Your anim utilize it more readily, and there practically no waste. It should be membered that the horse digests food quickly, and whatever ration y feed should be prepared with a vi to supply the nutrition the hor needs. Your horses will work bett and keep in better condition on five six quarts of ground mixed seed th they will on eight quarts of who grain.

Feed a variety of grains proper balanced and have them well grou and you will not only have bett horses, but it will cost you less mon to obtain this much desired result.

Running the Hand Separator.

When running the hand separat the handle should be turned steadi care being taken to keep a consta even pressure all the way rou not pushing down hard and pulling hard, while for a moment when t crank is down and again at the t there is no pressure upon it. Turn the speed the directions call for, or it is found by testing the skimmi that it is not skimming clean an creased speed of from three to fi turns per minute will help matters. Bulletin Michigan Experiment Statio

THE SWINEHERD.

Tests at the Indiana experiment st tion indicate that pigs make bett gains when their grain is fed dry tha they do when it is mixed with wate This would suggest that those wh take the trouble to mix grain wi water before feeding waste their tim and to a slight extent the food valu of the grain.

The Pigpens In Summer.

In summer, if the pig keeper is wis a large proportion of his stock will running out to grass. Then of cours is an opportune time to give the v cant piggeries a thorough cleansin and lime washing to set drainage yards and outlets right and attend any structural repairs that may necessary. On a dairy farm especiall should the piggeries be kept in a san tary condition. If neglected, offensiv odors arise from them. In many case the dairy is not far away. This is point which should be watched. Whe building or rebuilding pens let the be as far removed as possible from th dairy, for this is not only objectio able, but really harmful, as few thing absorb the impurities of the atmo phere more readily than milk.

Protein Feeds of the Farm.

For the pig two to six months ol protein is the most important fee Without protein it cannot build up th lean meat or grow to any size. Pr tein is found in skimmilk, clover an alfalfa. Corn is nine-tenths carb hydrates. Oats have a little more pr tein than corn, but not sufficient fo the pig. Rye contains a little mor protein than corn. Barley is one of th best feeds on the farm. It contain more protein than rye. In clover an alfalfa there is a large bulk for th required nutrients, and pigs cannot ge enough for a maximum growth Even if you have corn and clover is still necessary for the young pi to have some protein food—cowpea soy beans or Canada field peas. Ther is nothing better grown on the farm to balance up the ration.—Professo William Dietrich.

An Outrage on All Fair-Minded Voters.

Ameliasburg Liberals Use the Roblin's Mills Fair As a Means to Attract a Crowd for a Political Gathering--Much Indignation Felt.

The fair-minded people of Prince Edward County, no matter on which side of politics they are, are indignant over the action of a few audacious partisans who, on Saturday last, actually advertised and held what was called "A Liberal Rally" on the grounds of the Ameliasburg Agricultural Association, while the Roblin's Mills Fair was in progress.

It has always been the boast of the Ameliasburg fair authorities that political issues were kept strictly at arms' length; they even went so far as to have a Liberal president one year and a Conservative president the next; thus providing absolute neutrality. Then to have a few hidebound partisans take the law in their own hands and use the Roblin's Mills fair as a bait to draw a crowd for political purposes—well, no wonder the fair-minded people of Ameliasburg are warm under the collar!

It is not likely that such an outrageous thing will be allowed to happen again, and the incident in question has done the cause of Dr. Currie no good, for Prince Edward people like fair play.

Incidentally it may be remarked that the meeting was a frost, though the Hon. Sydney Fisher was there.

There was a rumor current on the fair grounds that the Ontario Government might withhold the provincial grant to the fair because it was used for political purposes.

After the fair was over the Hon. Sydney Fisher came to this city, and was met by a bodyguard of two lonesome Liberals. He went to bed at 9 o'clock. When he left Belleville nobody appears to know or care.

A Popular Young Man Passed Away

HARRY LANE.

Many were the expressions of regret heard upon the street when it became known that Mr. Harry Lane had passed away on Saturday night as the result of an attack of pneumonia. Deceased, who was 29 years of age, was a son of the late Patrick Lane, and was born here. He had resided all his life in this city and was not only well known but universally esteemed. Of late he had been a trusted employee of McGinnis Bros., grocers. Mr. Lane was a member of St. Michael's church. A young widow and a little daughter survive. The other relatives are three brothers, Michael and Patrick, of Toronto, and William of this city, and one sister, Mrs. James Ely, of Toronto.

West Huntingdon Lady Had Narrow Escape Saturday.

On Saturday afternoon, about 5.30, Mrs. Richard Hagerty, of West Huntingdon, was seated in her conveyance, which was standing in front of a business place on Front street, when her rig was struck by a waggon driven by Neal Davis, of Foxboro. The sudden collision threw Mrs. Hagerty over the dashboard, but she fortunately escaped injury. The horses attached to Mrs. Hagerty's rig started to run away, but were caught by Mr. C. A. Harte, of this city, who, unfortunately, was thrown violently to the ground and sustained severe cuts about the head, and face. The conveyance was slightly damaged. It is alleged that Davis drove off without waiting to see if he had caused any damage.

Daring Theft From Local Liverymen.

Herbert Duval Imitates Methods of a Famous Namesake.

On Wednesday last, September 30th, Herbert Duval and another party secured from Morrison and McGuire's livery, in this city, a horse and buggy stating that they intended to drive to Wooler. As they did not return a warrant for their arrest was issued and notifications was sent to various police officials to be on the lookout for them. Yesterday word was received in the city that Duval had been placed under arrest at Campbellford, and the horse and buggy had also been recovered. This morning Sergt. Hayes, of the local police, in company with Mr. Morrison, went to Campbellford to bring back Duval and the outfit.

Duval was at noon to-day brought to the city and later brought up before Magistrate Masson, who remanded him to jail until Saturday. No evidence was taken upon the charge.

Harvest Festival At St. Thomas'.

The annual harvest festival services were held in St. Thomas' church yesterday, there being large congregations present. The decorations of fruit and flowers were much admired, as were also the striking sermons by the Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton, of Deseronto. Many people were to-day telling of the beautiful address given by him last night. Rev. A. L. Geen assisted in the services, and the choir rendered excellent and appropriate music.

DIFFERENT VIEWS.

May be entertained about the abilities of opticians, and eye-sight specialists, but the proof of "the pudding" is in the experience of those most interested. It does not take long to find out whether the glasses we sell our patrons are the most excellent for the sight and eye-strain or otherwise. Our many customers, in this district and all over Canada are the best proof of our ability, after many of them had failed to get relief from some of the most prominent specialists in Toronto. The reason is "This one thing we do" In this age you cannot do many things and do them all well. That is why we have succeeded, where even prominent oculists have failed, because the refraction of the eye is only one of the many specialties they have in hand.

HEADACHES ARE DANGER SIGNALS

They Tell Us Plainly That Something Is Wrong Inside.

There are tablets and powders that will stop a headache promptly—but removing a danger signal does not take away the danger.

In nearly every case a headache—of whatever kind—is a symptom of poisoned blood, due to Bowels, Kidneys and Skin failing to thoroughly remove indigestible food and waste, worn-out tissue from the body. Then digestion is poor, causing sick headaches, or uric acid is formed and deposited on the nerves, causing neuralgia.

Not only the danger signal, but the danger itself as well, is quickly removed by "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" are tablets made of the combined juices of oranges, apples, figs and prunes, containing all their medicinal properties, concentrated and intensified. They cause the liver to secrete more bile, which moves the bowels freely and regularly, and cures the most obstinate cases of Constipation. They stir up kidneys and skin to throw off all the urea, or dead tissue, which has been poisoning the system. They sweeten the stomach, improve digestion and tone up the whole body. The headaches disappear—because the source is removed. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50. Trial size, 25c. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

MONTREAL SENSATION.

Scores of Good French Families In Round-Table Scandal.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—The city is still discussing the discovery that a score of men belonging to excellent French-Canadian families have been banded in a club strangely like the "Knights of the Round-Table," whose members disgraced Germany and steeped themselves in infamy.

Four prisoners came before Magistrate Bazin in the court of arraignment—Joseph Hetu, an insurance agent; Joseph Bouthillier, a bookseller on St. Denis street; Victor Michaud, alias Becton, an actor of the Parisian Theatre, and Joseph St. Pierre, a Canadian Pacific Railroad clerk. They pleaded not guilty to the astonishing charges against them, and the case will come up for trial on Oct. 8.

The four, it is charged, were associated with Dr. J. W. Geoffrion, No. 1219 St. Catherine street, who pleaded guilty recently to like accusations and was remanded. Dr. Geoffrion was president of the club, whose members addressed each others as do nuns in a convent. Mysterious rites were celebrated at the club, and orgies were held at which the guests were youths. One of these told his parents what he had seen, and the discovery of the band's existence followed.

CALLS IT A LIE.

Archbishop Ireland Says Merry Del Val Will Not Retire.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 5.—Asked what credence is to be given to the story taken first from the Italian paper, The Avanti, and now widely circulated through the press of America, to the effect that Cardinal Merry del Val is soon to resign from the papal secretaryship of state, forced to that step in large measure by representations coming to the Pope from English and American prelates, among whom he himself is numbered by name, Archbishop Ireland said:

"The story is a falsehood made out of whole cloth. The Avanti is the chief representative of the yellow press of Italy; it is an avowed enemy of the Vatican and deliberate falsehoods are their stock in trade, when facts, or even apologies for facts are wanting."

Kilties For Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 5.—A Highland regiment has been organized here, with D. C. Cameron, the Liberal candidate in Winnipeg, as colonel.

Shipwrecked.

Nassau, New Providence, Oct. 5.—The British steamer Hesleyside, Capt. Bedlington, from St. Michael's, Sept. 17, for Key West, was driven ashore on Abaco Island, in a hurricane, Oct. 1. The steamer is a total wreck, but the crew were saved and have arrived here.

BURGLARS AT MILVERTON.

Quartette of Robbers Blew Up Safe and Get $220.

Stratford, Oct. 5.—Between 1 and 2 o'clock yesterday morning the post-office at Milverton was entered by burglars, who, after blowing up the safe, got away with over $200 in stamps and $20 in cash.

They also broke into the stable of the Queen's Hotel, stole a team of black horses and a buggy belonging to Mr. Pauli, and driving to Stratford, boarded the 4.30 train for Toronto.

Neighbors living near the postoffice heard an explosion about 1.30, but thinking the noise was made by a party of returning coon hunters, no attention was paid to it.

Immediately after the robbery the burglars drove to Stratford and after tying the team to a tree on William street, walked across the long bridge, through town to the station.

Shortly before train No. 4 arrived from the west a comparatively young man, dust stained, approached the ticket office, calling for two tickets for Toronto. He was followed by another with the same request, indicating that there were four members in the party.

The ticket agent cannot give a description of the two who purchased tickets.

ANOTHER WRIGHT TRIUMPH.

Wilbur Wright Breaks Two-Man Record Required In Contract.

Lemans, Oct. 5.—Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplanist, who holds the world's record for an aeroplane flight, established another world's record Saturday afternoon for time and distance with a passenger. With a French journalist by his side, he remained in the air for 55 minutes and 37 seconds, circling the field twenty-four times and covering a distance officially estimated at 58 kilometres, or about 36 miles. His best previous flight with a passenger was 11 minutes 35 3-5 seconds.

By this feat Mr. Wright partially fulfills the conditions of a contract by him and Lazare Weiller, who represents a syndicate, whereby Mr. Wright will receive $100,000 and the syndicate will take in return the patent rights of the Wright machine for France and the colonies, with the privilege of manufacturing aeroplanes on this model. With another flight of 50 kilometres, carrying a passenger, Mr. Wright completes the fulfillment of the Weiller contract.

PARENTS PROSTRATED.

Mother and Father of Late Mrs. J. F. Creighton Feel Sentence Keenly.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 5.—Judge E. W. Harris and his wife, of Port Huron, both aged people, have suffered a collapse owing to the revival of the tragedy of several months ago, when their daughter, Mrs. James F. Creighton, and her two doughters, were murdered at Owen Sound by the husband of the woman and the step-father of the two girls.

The news that Creighton has been sentenced to hang for the triple murder has caused the aged couple to become seriously ill, and grave fears are entertained for Mrs. Harris, who has been quite feeble since the tragedy.

Gorky Weds Andrieff.

London, Oct. 5.—It has just leaked out at St. Petersburg, a despatch to The Globe reports, that Maxim Gorky recently married Mrs. Andrieff, who formerly was the wife of a famous Russian author, Leonidas Andrieff.

Presumably Mme. Andrieff is the woman known here as Mme. Andrieva, who accompanied Maxim Gorky to New York two years ago, and who was the cause of his being ostracized by society in America when it was learned that she was not his wife.

New King's Printer.

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—Charles H. Parmalee, ex-M.P. for Shefford, has been formally appointed King's printer, in room of Dr. S. E. Dawson.

Mr. Parmalee, who is 53 years of age, has been a newspaper man for thirty-five years: He is the publisher of The Waterloo Advertiser. For two or three years he was in journalism in Montreal. He was first returned to Parliament for Shefford in 1896.

Killed by Train.

Niagara Falls, Oct. 5.—Car Inspector J. Trimble at 4.15 yesterday morning found the lifeless body of a man terribly mangled along the side of track No. 8 at the west end G.T.R. westbound yards.

It was identified as Thomas Parr of Stamford. The young man evidently was at an early hour yesterday morning attempting to board a train for Stamford.

Killed In Auto Collision.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—An automobile, racing at the rate of forty miles an hour, and a train on the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric Railway, running at even a higher rate of speed, collided at the Burlington Road crossing a mile north of Kenosha, Wis., Saturday.

As a result George O. Field, a prominent man of Manestee, Mich., was killed.

Say Bills Are Bogus.

Oakville, Oct. 5.—Thomas Crozier, formerly of Milton, Ont., but now said to be residing in Toronto, was arrested here Friday evening on a charge of passing bogus five-dollar bills. He claims to have received the money at Niagara Falls in payment for work done.

Import Duty on Yukon Beers.

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—An ordinance is published placing a duty of 50 cents per gallon on porter, beer and ales imported into the Yukon territory. This does not apply to Canadian or British products.

Leg Badly Mangled.

Welland, Oct. 5.—Frank Hyatt, the six-year-old son of Frank Hyatt, had his leg badly mangled by being caught in a wagon here. The doctors have amputated it.

Lady Cook Comes to Assist Bryan.

New York, Oct. 5.—Lady Cook, the philanthropist and suffragette, who, before her marriage to Sir Frederick Cook of London, was known as Miss Tennessee Claflin, arrived here Saturday on the White Star liner Cedric. She will remain in this city until after the election.

She is an admirer of Bryan, and it was learned that a meeting with the Democratic candidate had been arranged. Lady Cook said she would assist Mr. Bryan in whatever way she could, but could not say whether she would speak at public meetings in Mr. Bryan's behalf.

Officers Fear Lynching.

Stratford, Oct. 5.—It is not likely that Frank Roghmond, the prisoner accused of the murder of Mrs. Poake, will be removed from the jail and taken to Sebringville, a distance of five miles, for the inquest to-night.

As the attendance of the prisoner is necessary, it is thought that the inquest will adjourn to Stratford some night this week. The reason for this is that the officials do not care to take any chances in driving the prisoner along the country road through the section where the crime was committed.

"Brainstorm" For Moir.

Stratford, Oct. 5.—E. Sydney Smith, K.C., of this city will act as crown counsel at the Middlesex Assizes, which opens in the court house, London. Interest, of course, centres around the trial of Private Moir, who will answer to the charge of killing Color-Sergeant Lloyd at Wolseley Barracks. It is stated that the defence will plead "brainstorm" for Moir.

Chancellor Sir John A. Boyd will preside.

Protection Can Save Them.

London, Oct. 5.—Robert Duff, engaged in the yarn and cloth trades in Canada, when interviewed by The Yorkshire Post, expressed the opinion that nothing could save the Canadian woollen industry but higher protection. Canadian woollen manufacturers understand their business, but they suffer in competition through lack of specialization.

Roosevelt Eight Years From Now.

Rock Island, Ill., Oct. 5.—"Theodore Roosevelt for President again eight years from now," was the declaration of the President's son-in-law, Congressman Longworth, in a speech he made here Friday to a large audience that cheered the sentiment again and again.

Attorney and Moulder.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 5.—Wm. N. Osgoode, a Lowell attorney, and Robt. J. McCartney, a moulder, of Fall River, were nominated for governor and lieutenant-governor respectively, by the state convention of the Independence League, held in Fanuel Hall Saturday.

Pictures of Britain.

London, Oct. 5.—Lantern slides, accompanying lectures descriptive of Britain, for use in Canada in connection with the scheme for the spread of empire knowledge amongst school children, will shortly be available.

HOUSE WORK

Thousands of American women in our homes are daily sacrificing their lives to duty.

In order to keep the home neat and pretty, the children well dressed and tidy, women overdo. A female weakness or displacement is often brought on and they suffer in silence, drifting along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have help to overcome the pains and aches which daily make life a burden.

It is to these faithful women that comes as a boon and a blessing, as it did to Mrs. W. Barrett, of 602 Moreau St., Montreal, who writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

"For years I was a great sufferer from female weakness, and despite every remedy given me by doctors for this trouble, I grew worse.

"One day a friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and am thankful to say that it made me strong and well."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

CRISIS IN NEAR EAST

All Europe Is Watching the Bulgarian Situation.

Past Week Has Seen Swift Changes In Political Standing of Powers—Affair Is Huge Surprise to Britain—Austria-Hungary Is Working With Ferdinand to Give Him Control of Neighboring States.

London, Oct. 6.—In the ancient apital of Tiernovo the independence f Bulgaria was proclaimed yesterday ith the Czar of the Bulgarians as uler.

Czar of the Bulgarians is recognizd to mean more than Czar of Bularia, because it is a distinct intimaion that he regards his country as aving sovereignty over all people of hat blood in the near east.

Within a day or two Austria-Hunary, which has been working with rince Ferdinand in this preconcertd plan, will proclaim the new status f Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The question, which has been stiring the whole of Europe more deeply han any similar question in the emory of the present generation, is, oes it mean war?

From all the capitals last night ome reports indicating that it means, rst of all, an European congress of he signers of the treaty of Berlin

ZAR FERDINAND OF BULGARIA,
He Is a Cousin of King Edward.

consider the situation and probly revise the treaty.

Turkey, caught in a moment of eakness, is the victim of this situaon, and while some international nimosities have been stirred up, robably no power is willing to make ar. Reports from the emancipated urkish press to London indicate that the "Young Turks" will swallow this bitter pill as best they can and, if they do, naturally the Bulgarians, while willing and eager for war, will have no cause on which to base the beginning of hostilities.

From the British standpoint the whole affair has been a surprise, and more than a surprise, because for the first time in years, the British Government felt itself, with apparently a perfect understanding with France and Russia, and complete friendship with Italy, to be in a position when it dominated European politics, reserving out of this consideration the almost open enmity between itself and Germany.

Probably never in the history of Europe have politics taken such amazing kaleidescopic revolutions as during the past week.

An untangling will come when the signatories of the Berlin treaty meet to consider what action shall be taken regarding the violations of the treaty.

Great Britain last night served notice that it does not recognize the right of any of the parties to this treaty to violate its provisions without consulting the others, but English diplomats know that the conference will resolve into a scramble among the power to get what is termed in European politics "compensating advantages" which Austria, backed by Germany, has already obtained.

Preference Means Discord.

London, Oct. 6.—(C.A.P.)—Dr. Muspratt, president of the Financial Reform Association, in a letter to the press, says the recent discussion at a meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers in Montreal ought to convey a warning to those who indulge in the hope that if we impose a duty on foreign goods coming into Britain, while admitting the colonial free, a great market will be provided to our manufacturers within the Empire.

Dr. Muspratt believes that so far as political results are concerned the fiscal federation of the Mother Country and colonies, in place of binding the Empire together, will sow the seeds of discord that in a short time will rend it to pieces.

Storms In West Indies.

Havana, Oct. 6.—Baracoa, on the northeast coast, suffered severely on Saturday and Sunday from a heavy storm. The custom house, which was in the course of construction, and many other buildings were destroyed.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Oct. 6.—Heavy rains fell throughout Sunday and about midnight a whirlwind of considerable force struck Somerset Island, tearing up large trees and unroofing and otherwise damaging [illegible] buildings. No lives were lo[illegible]

Revivalists at Orillia.

Orillia, Oct. 6.—A big religious revival is going on here, which commenced on Sept. 30 and is to continue until Oct. 13. The revival is being conducted by Dr. Wilbur J. Chapman and Charles M. Alexander. The meetings are being held in the Palace Roller Rink, and Sunday night there were about 3,500 people present. There is a choir of 200 voices, which is led by Mr. Alexander. There are twelve members in the Chapman-Alexander party.

Fatal Tenement Fire.

New York, Oct. 6.—Eleven persons were killed, more than a dozen injured and 30 more escaped with their lives only by the narrowest margin, in an incendiary fire which wrecked the tenement house at 71 1-2 Mulberry street, early yesterday.

That a deliberate attempt was made to destroy the house and its occupants as well, there is no doubt in the minds of the police and firemen.

Deserts Liberal Party.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 6.—Mayor Morash of Lunenburg, ex-Liberal M.P.P., well known in this province, at a public meeting in that town last night, formally joined the Conservative party. He stated that he could no longer remain a member of the party that had disgraced the name of Liberalism. He preferred to call them Laurierites rather than Liberals.

Was Welcomed At Ottawa.

Mr. Borden Gets Hearty Greeting at the Capital.

P. D. Ross Tells Why Fraser and Chevrier Were Pulled Out of Contest—Public Opinion Crushingly Against Them—Reports Like Those of Government Would Throw English Ministry Out of Power.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—The Conservative rally at Ottawa last night was characterized as one of the very best of the campaign. It was enthusiastic to a degree. There were over six thousand present, and R. L. Borden rose to an unusual pitch of eloquence.

This was Hon. Mr. Hanna's first appearance before an Ottawa audience. He got a rousing reception.

P. D. Ross drew attention to the change in the candidature for Ottawa, and as to how A. W. Fraser and Dr. Chevrier had been pulled out of the fight. He imagined that the change was due to the growing and crushing conviction of public opinion that Fraser and Chevrier had been benefiting by Government patronage.

Dr. J. L. Chabot, the French-speaking candidate, congratulated himself that the Liberals had brought out their biggest and best against him. The bigger the game, the greater the honor. He challenged the Premier to state on the first occasion he spoke in Otttawa, whether, if he were returned for Ottawa, he would sit for the capital or Quebec East.

Talking of federal matters, R. L. Borden contrasted the report of the Civil Service Commission this year regarding the Marine and Fisheries Department with the investigation of the same Department during 1892-3. This alone should be sufficient to drive the Government from power; it would in the old country within a week of publication.

Mr. Borden praised the administration of the public domain of Sir James Whitney and his Ontario Government, and contrasted it with the handing over to their party friends by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Government some of the richest land in Canada.

The manner in which Canada was being administered was well exemplified by their experience in London. An Irish loan was subscribed for 70 times over, but when these same gentlemen were asked to finance a Canadian loan, less than half of it was subscribed.

QUEBEC EAST FAITHFUL.

Premier Gets Good Reception In His Adopted City.

Quebec, Oct. 6—Whatever may have been the receptions accorded Sir Wilfrid Laurier during his present campaign tour, the demonstration given in his honor last evening by the electors of Quebec East shows that at least his adopted riding is still faithful to him.

He was welcomed by more people, as well as with more enthusiasm, than at any place since his tour was opened at Sorel.

Sir Wilfrid was presented with a large volume bound in red leather and faced with a golden plate duly inscribed. Inside the volume was an address couched in the most ornately eulogistic terms, and a requisition to the Premier signed by over 3,000 voters of Quebec East asking him to again become their candidate. Sir Wilfrid consented to run once more in Quebec East despite his engagements at Ottawa, and kissed two happy young ladies who presented him with huge bouquets.

A striking feature of the demonstration was the absence of banners and the other stock in trade of machine-made enthusiasm.

Farmer Drowns.

Kenora, Oct. 6.—The body of Auton Anderson, a well-known Swedish farmer, was found in the lake channel, four miles out. He left Sept. 25 to go to his farm at Port Aylmer, and it was supposed he had arrived safely until the boat was found tied to the shore, and a search revealed the body.

Petro Sumonetta, Italian, was smothered in the C.P.R. gravel pit at Margach by a cave-in of the bank.

Riot In Court.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 6.—There was a scene of riotous disorder in Justice Austin's court yesterday, in which several persons were slightly injured in an attempt to lynch Edward Martin, a negro, who assaulted Miss Edith Ralston, a concert singer, at College Grove Friday night.

Martin was spirited away to Superior Judge Wilbur's court, where he pleaded guilty and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Fraser Case Goes Over.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—The examination of A. W. Fraser in the case of Conroy v. Fraser was called in the Superior Court at Hull yesterday morning.

Henry Aylen, K.C., on behalf of the plaintiff, Conroy, asked for adjournment, owing to absence of his client, and the case was put over till the next term.

Aitken Appointed.

London, Oct. 6.—The City Council last night appointed Assistant Fire Chief Aitken to succeed the late Fire Chief Lawrence Clark.

A sum of $1,000 was voted to the widow of the late chief.

Victims of Runaway.

New York, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Isabella Van Cleaf, 70 years old, a widow, was killed almost instantly, and her son, John Van Cleaf, a wealthy broker, was injured Sunday in a runaway accident on Upper Broadway.

Dies of Lockjaw.

Guelph, Oct. 6.—Norman Douglas Wilson, son of William Wilson of this town, died yesterday morning from lockjaw, caused by stepping on a bone while in his barefeet.

Aldermen Fight.

Guelph, Oct. 6.—Ald. A. W. Humphreys and Chairman James Ryan of the sewerage committee got into a hot discussion about the sewerage, in which Ryan intimated that Humphreys had been helping his friends get jobs on the new waterworks plant. This made Mr. Humphreys mad and he tried to disfigure Mr. Ryan's complexion. They were parted before much damage was done. A charge of assault may be pressed.

Bear Kills Babe.

Tucson, Ariz., Oct. 6.—A terrible tragedy was enacted at Elyrsian Grove, a pleasure park, when an immense black bear escaped from a cage and charged a throng of visitors, and snatching an infant from its go-cart crushed it to death before its mother's eyes. It was attacking the woman when a shot from a policeman's revolver stopped it. Bystanders opened a fusilade and killed the bear.

Bishop Tierney Is Dead.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 6.—Right Rev. Michael Tierney, 68 years old, bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Hartford, died at his residence here yesterday afternoon from the effects of a stroke of apoplexy.

Fity Thousand Dead.

Allahabad, British India, Oct. 6.—The latest reports from Hyderabad estimate the flood casualties at 50,000. Order is being gradually restored and the bodies buried.

Sir James Whitney's estimate of Mr. R. L. Borden, Conservative Leader :—"There is not a cleaner, abler or brighter man in public life in Canada than Mr Borden." A vote for Mr. Porter will help to defeat Laurier and the extravagant, discredited and exhausted administration.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Let's Larrup Laurier.

Mayor of Trenton will run for the Commons. Is this another case of money making the mare go?

• • •

Hon. Sydney Fisher, who introduced politics in the Militia, was a fit personage to introduce politics into a township fair. One was about as small a transaction as the other.

Shovel away the fog, please, or we may not be able to see the returning prosperity Grit papers prattle about.

October fog
Would choke a dog.
The bloomin' weather's
On the hog.

(From "Poems of a Pessimist," now on the press.)

Indignant non-partisans tore up the platform the Grits had the gall to erect on the fair grounds at Roblin's Mills. As a consequence the orators had to do without one. But that's nothing new for latter-day Liberals. They want no platform but self-interest.

Judging by the number of fairy stories that certain prominent Grits are telling about East Hastings, it begins to look as though Mr. Ed. Butler, of this city, is doomed to be sandbagged and thrown out when the convention is pulled off. A certain shining light in Gritism, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the candidature, says he has not thought of the matter at all, and has no intention of running. After mature deliberation, we confidently look for his nomination and acceptance of the same. Why does he need to deny the allegation? Oh! that's the kind of allegator he is, that's all.

Enquiries have been made as to whether there will be any registration of voters for the coming election. There will not. People who were on the provincial lists at the last election, and those who registered then, can vote at the Dominion election on the 26th inst.

King Edward, so the fashion authorities say, has over 200 suits. And not a libel suit among 'em, which is where the editor of the Globe has it on King Ned.

The Texas mayor who pulled down $1 a year is dead. In this case it was not money that made the mare go.

"Our brilliant Government," says a Grit paper. Exactly. One hundred scandal power.

The moulders at the Cobourg car works have all been laid off. And in these "good Grit times," too!

Good judges say Mr. Borden will be returned with a majority of 21. In that case it will be 23 for the Sunny Smile.

Grit candidate named Eastwood will run in Hamilton. As if there wasn't punk wood enough in Hamilton Gritism already, including the head of the Hamilton Times.

Mr. Funnell's friends are doing their best to "jolly" him and put him "up in the air." Win in West Hastings! He has no more chance than a dead man in a Marathon race, and though his hopes may rise, owing to the political excitement of the moment, they will fall to the ground, on the night of October 26, as hard as a sack of flour dropped from the City Hall tower.

Remember "Spotless Jim" Stratton. He is now writing sermonettes, trying to "elevate" the politics of Peterboro.

Yesterday was the Jewish Day of Atonement. Laurier's will come three weeks from yesterday.

After being on strike for two months, the C.P.R. machinists — not all of them, either — will go back to work on the company's terms. They lost a million and a quarter of money. Winter is close at hand, and how many women and children will suffer as a result of that strike only providence knows. It looks, at this distance, as though the strike was ill-advised. The men and their families would have suffered even if they had won, and they haven't won. Whether they were right or not is a matter of opinion, but a cold world judges by results.

Mr. Fielding says we should not dwell on theories. Quite right. The Grits have a theory that the Government will get full value for its expenditure of public money. Which will never be realized, so long as they practise the wasting of $10,000,000 a year on useless works.

If taxpayers were bled white with an expenditure of $43,000,000 in 1896, as Sir Richard Cartwright said, what color are they bled now with an expenditure of $112,000,000?

"The Government's policy is sound," vociferates Mr. Fielding. If so, then the Liberal platform of 1893 must have been rotten.

Mr. Fielding is reported as saying at Galt that if any industry is not getting along, then it is his duty to approach the question sympathetically and to try and find a solution of the problem. Why, then, has it not been solved? You have been twelve years at it, and there is no solution yet. Sifton would not let you. That's the reason.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Fielding both admit that scandals affecting their Government's administration have been exposed. How many have been punished? Not one. But many of the offenders have been rewarded.

• • •

Borden for Premier and Better Government!

E. L. Convention, Held at Foxboro, Was Big Success.

The fourteenth annual convention of the Epworth League workers from the various circuits within the Belleville district was held in Foxboro in the afternoon and evening of Friday, Oct. 2, 1908. The splendid weather made the attendance one of the largest in the history of the organization. The interest manifested in this work deepened and increased throughout the sessions, making it a most helpful and inspiring gathering.

One of the most encouraging signs was the ready way and the excellent manner in which all the fifteen leagues presented their reports and took part in the discussions.

In the absence of Rev. E. B. Cook, Northport, President of Picton district, who was to have delivered an address on "How Best to Promote Bible Study," Prof. Doxsee gave a practical talk along that line.

Miss Florence Adams introduced the topic "The Junior League," which developed into a discussion as to why there were not more Junior Leagues.

Rev. G. B. Greatrix, Chairman of the district, gave "The Latest News From the Front," as gleaned from his attendance at the General Sunday School and Epworth League Board meeting held in Toronto last month, closing with a passionate appeal for the adoption by the Leaguers of the "Win One Motto."

The needs and advantages of the Summer School at Chemong were presented by Miss L. Rush and Prof. Doxsee, after which Miss Sweetman gave a talk on Deaconess work.

"The Social Side of League Work" was the subject of an excellent paper read by Miss Nora Reynolds, of Stirling.

Dr. Bishop then closed with a missionary address, "Jesus Expectant."

The music by the choir and the hospitality of the ladies of Foxboro added in no small degree to the pleasure of all present.

The officers for the ensuing year are:

Honorary President — Rev. G. B. Greatrix.

President—Rev. C. E. Cragg, Foxboro.

1st Vice-President — Rev. J. L. Clarry, Shannonville.

2nd Vice-President — Miss Elda Nobes, Bayside.

3rd Vice-President—Mr. G. F. Stewart, Belleville.

4th Vice-President — Miss Laura Phelps, Canifton.

5th Vice-President— Miss Florence Adams, Belleville.

Sec.-Treas. — Miss Louise Rush, Canifton.

Conf. Representative— Prof. E. R. Doxsee, Belleville.

Changes Made at The Institute

A change has been made in the school hours at the Institution for the Deaf, which it is hoped will be productive of good results. Heretofore the regular school hours have been from 9 to 12 a.m. and from 1.30 to 3 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and to 3.30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, the extra half hour being for drawing, while the hours for the industrial department were from 7.30 to 8.30 in the morning and from the close of school till 5.30 in the afternoon. This division of the time allotted to the shops into two parts has never proven very satisfactory. Not much could be accomplished in one hour in the morning, as about half the time was spent in getting started at the work and in getting cleaned up again at the close. The only effective work done was in the afternoon, and even this was broken into on some days by physical culture and other duties and exercises. Beginning with yesterday, the regular class-work will commence at 8.15 in the morning and proceed continuously till 12.45, when it closes for the day. There will be two intermissions for the junior pupils and one for the seniors, during which each pupil will receive a bun or other lunch, as the time between meals is longer than usual. The pupils have their dinner at one o'clock, followed by the usual time for play and recreation. Work in the shops, etc., will begin at 2.30 and continue till 5.30 on school days, and from 7.30 to 11.30 on Saturdays, as heretofore. By this arrangement it is expected that much better results will be obtained in the industrial departments, while the length of time allotted to regular class-room work will be the same as before. We might add that this is the plan in use in nearly all schools for the deaf in the United States, and wherever adopted has given good satisfaction and enabled better work to be done.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Eastern Ontario Dairymen Meet Next in Prescott.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, held at Toronto at the time of the Toronto Industrial Exhibition, says the Canadian Dairyman, it was decided to hold the next annual convention of the association in Prescott, Ont., next January. Brockville tried to get the convention, as did also Cornwall and Perth. It looked for a while as if Brockville would get the convention, but acting upon the advice of Chief Instructor Publow, who advised that the convention should be moved around and held at a place that had never had it before, it was decided to hold it at Prescott.

The officers of the association who were present included the President, J. R. Dargavel, M. L. A., Elgin, Ont.; Senator D. Derbyshire; Secretary R. G. Murphy, of Brockville; G. A. Putnam, Director of Dairy Instruction, Toronto; Chief Instructor G. G. Publow, Kingston; J. H. Singleton, Smith's Falls; Henry Glendinning, Manilla; T. B. Carlow, Warkworth; Ed. Kidd, North Gower; Jas. Whitton, Wellman's Corners; T. A. Thompson, Almonte, and Mr. Whittaker, Winchester.

Chief Instructor G. G. Publow reported that there had been a greater improvement this year in the quality of the milk received at the factories, and also in the quality of the cheese made than ever before in the history of the association. There had also been a great improvement in the condition of the cheese factories and creameries. The improvement was attributed largely to the interest aroused through the holding of district dairy meetings and by the sending of speakers to the annual meetings of the factories.

Visiting In Style—the Bancroft Fair.

Canadian democrats "to the hilt" always preach, but never practise what they do preach. The style now is as the Premier travels through the country, to send heralds in advance, with carloads of flags, etc., with which to decorate the walls and flag staffs of the cities, towns and villages which he is to visit. These decorations are usually put up at night, under the cover of darkness, so that when the people rise in the early morn they can feast their eyes upon what appears a spontaneous recognition of the great importance of the man who is to visit them, though they are but the work of the hirelings who precede the defender of middlemen and graft.

The example having been set by the chief, why should it not be followed by the Liberal candidate for West Hastings, Mr. Funnell? So it was. If not with flags and other decorations, it was in another way. Having due respect for, and a proper appreciation of, the importance of maintaining his dignity as a candidate for Parliamentary honors, he deemed it in accord with his importance and dignity to visit the Bancroft Fair in a Special Private Car, and not appear there in the guise of an ordinary plebeian.

It can readily be understood that, when the luxurious private car hove in sight at the fair grounds, preceded by a forerunner, in stentorian tones, singing the lines of the immortal Scott:

> "Hail to the Chief, who in triumph advances."

The refrain was immediately taken up by all living creatures on the fair grounds, except the electors. The Horses neighed; the Bulls and the Cows bellowed; the Sheep bleated; the Dogs growled; the Hens cackled; the Hogs grunted; the Cats mewed, and the Organ Monkey vigorously turned the crank and screeched out a joyous welcome.

Overcome by this spontaneous reception, the candidate began to moralize, and as soon as the echo from the Eagle Nest Mountain had died away he heard in the distance an incorrigible old Tory repeating in a solemn tone the lines of a sarcastic poet, which run as follows:

> "All would be deem'd, e'en from the cradle, fit
> To rule in politics, as well as wit,
> The grave, the gay, the fopling and the dunce
> Start up (God bless us) statesmen all at once."

While the sound of the chanter's voice was still ringing in his ears, he gazed upon those by whom he was surrounded in the "Private Car" and thinking of the eloquence of Frankford Demosthenes and the irresistabilities of the Belleville contingent who dominated and ruled the roost, he had brought to mind Shakespeare's lines in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and to the disgust of his listeners, he in mournful cadence repeated them:

> "In the modesty of fearful duty,
> I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
> Of saucy and audacious eloquence."

"Them's me," he exclaimed. That's original.

Satisfied with the day's outing, and the Fair having ended, the "Private Car," with its aristocratic occupants, rolled away towards Trenton, where it deposited the distinguished candidate in the bosom of his family.

While his opponent was thus luxuriating, poor Porter, being a Tory and one of the people, had to content himself in an ordinary car, where he enjoyed the company of those whom he desired to meet.

After all, as Mr. Funnell says he expects to be beaten by about fifteen hundred, why should he not enjoy the dignity of his position until the election is closed? So go it now, for after the 26th you can't.

That Grit Convention.

"Who was at that Grit convention, held not long ago in Trenton?" has been repeatedly asked.

That is not generally known. It was, we have been given to understand, a meeting of a few of the faithful, called together to receive instructions from a Mr. Mowat, of Toronto, as to what they should do. Having their orders, which were not to allow an election in West Hastings to go by default, though they know an opposition to be a hopeless task, they with docility accepted the Toronto lash and prevailed upon Mr. Funnell, a very respectable citizen of Trenton to throw himself into the breach and sacrifice himself upon the altar of middlemen and land and timber limit grafters.

It is safe to venture the opinion that if the inner thoughts of Mr. Funnell could be fathomed, it would be found that his every fibre shakes at the very thought of having to defend or attempt to defend the maladministration of the present Government. If he does not, it is a lamentable illustration of the depths to which latter-day Liberalism will drag its devotees.

As to who were present, we have learned that the following gentlemen graced the august gathering: Mr. Mowat, of Toronto; Mr. Snell, of Marmora; Dr. Simmons, of Frankford; Mr. Thrasher, of Stirling. These are all that we have heard of from the Riding outside of Sidney, Trenton and Belleville. That there was a gathering of some of the faithful residing in Trenton is probable. The Belleville contingent was an important aggregation of its latter-day Liberal organizers, and consisted of Mr. Henry Pringle, the defeated candidate at the last local election; Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, who has been a constant applicant for a judgeship, and Mr. Butler, who is a candidate for the nomination for East Hastings.

It is but just to add that there were a few gentlemen from Sidney present, but as the assembly was a closed door affair, so far as we can learn, we are unable to chronicle their names.

For their sake we are glad of it, for no doubt they would prefer not being named in connection with the farce.

BREATH HELP FOR CATARRH.

DRUGGIST J. S. McKEOWN IS HAVING SPLENDID REPORTS FROM HYOMEI USERS.

It's the poison germs in the air you breathe that creates and feeds catarrh, Hyomei simply catches these germs on their way to work and destroys them. The first breath of Hyomei air kills all catarrhal poison.

This makes the air you are breathing inward helpful, it goes on its way through the air passages, bronchial tubes and lungs charged with germ destroying power that cannot be resisted, it soothes and heals the wounded and inflamed membrane.

That is why Hyomei is so instantly helpful for any distress of the breathing organs, colds, croup, bronchitis, asthma or dreaded pneumonia, they are the germ life that Hyomei kills.

Cheese Board.

At the Cheese Board on Thursday there was a good attendance of salesmen and buyers. As was anticipated, the price of cheese was slightly lower, the highest price paid being 12 1-4c, against 12 7-8c the previous week. There were boarded 2520 boxes of white and 235 boxes of colored, the majority of which was sold on the Board for 12 1-8c, 12 3-16c and 12 1-4c.

The Romance of a Black Moustache.

Canadian Woman, Endowed With One, Wears Male Attire for Fifteen Years.

New York, October 5.—After travelling about the country for fifteen years in male attire, the sex of Mary Johnston, alias Frank Woodhull, was discovered yesterday at Ellis Island, when the immigration doctors decided to examine her for tuberculosis.

Miss Johnston is fifty years old, slight of build and of sallow complexion. Her manner and conversation show refinement and some culture. She won the sympathy of the officials at Ellis Island who heard her story, following the disclosure that she was a woman. She arrived here Saturday in the steerage of the American liner New York, from Southampton. Miss Johnston was born in Canada, of English parents, both of whom died when she was twenty. Nature had endowed her with a thick black mustache and an unusually low toned voice, and it was in accordance with these handicaps that she was forced to disguise herself as a man, associate with men, and earn her living in occupations usually followed by the male sex. Her sallow cheeks became scarlet yesterday when she was picked out of a group of men in the male detention ward on Ellis Island and told she was suspected of having tuberculosis.

The woman protested that she was in perfect health, but the examining surgeon said he wanted to be sure, and ordered her to the hospital for examination. She tried hard to control her nerves, but when the surgeon said: "I shall have to ask you to remove your clothing, Mr. Woodhull," Miss Johnston wept. "Oh, please don't examine me," she pleaded. "I might as well tell you all. I am a woman and have travelled in male attire for fifteen years. I have never been examined by a doctor in all my life, and I beg of you not to make an examination of me now." The surgeon called in the matron at the woman's request, and they examined her lungs to make sure she was not tubercular. It was found she was in good health, but not rugged. She was an alien, but not an undesirable one, and had it not been for her clothes, she might have been admitted to the country. The case, however, was called to the attention of Commissioner Watchorn, who will hold Miss Johnston until further examination is made into her history.

GUARANTEE AND RECOMMEND VINOL AS THE BEST COD LIVER PREPARATION ON THE MARKET.

If one person more than another should know the value of medicine it is the retail druggist.

For this reason such testimony as the following should be convincing.

C. A. Potterfield, the leading druggist of Charleston, W. Va., writes: "I have used Vinol for every member of my family, and have never been disappointed in its results. It is a pleasure to see a remedy that gives such universal satisfaction."

Mr. J. F. Bradley, of New Brunswick, N.J., writes: "It is a pleasure to recommend the cod liver preparation, Vinol, as it gives such splendid satisfaction. I have used it in my family and can recommend it from experience."

As a body-builder and strength-creator for old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, after sickness, and for chronic coughs colds, bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles, Vinol is unexcelled. MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

"The Tyranny of Tears," a comedy of the emotions, which will be produced at the opera house on Thursday, Oct. 8, is most ingenuously constructed on the simplest lines, is a triumph of the commonplace. Played virtually by five characters and with one change of scene, it has that spacious appearance of ease which is due to dexterity and craftsmanship. It is refreshing, free from theatrical expedients, and the knots which we are accustomed to see snipped by the scissors of an erratic fate are here gently untangled by the fingers of probability.

Prices 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1. Plan opens Wednesday morning.

Girlhood Vigor Regained.

The difficulty with most women lies in the fact that while they are anxious about the health and welfare of their family and loved ones, they rarely ever pay attention to themselves until Nature says Stop. To prevent this every woman should take Psychine regularly. It creates an appetite and is the greatest of digestants. Psychine is a boon to run-down, tired and over-worked women, for there is LIFE IN EVERY DOSE. Mrs. J. T. Miller, of 63 Notre Dame St., Winnipeg, proved this, for she says: "I am thankful for what Psychine has done for me. I was laid up with weakness. Oh, how I suffered. My appetite was very poor and my stomach was greatly disordered. To-day I am strong and well, for Psychine has brought me permanent relief. I feel like a new woman now to what I did before taking Psychine. I feel the vigor of girlhood in my veins once more."

A REAL WELCOME.

"What is the freight car doing here?"
said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"It's Laurier's car; it's Laurier's car," the station agent said.
"What does he want a freight car for?" said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"To tote his props; to tote his props," the station agent said.
"For he's coming here to-morrow, all the scenery is lent.
The town must be in gay attire, to mark the glad event.
But the decorations will not cost the citizens a cent
When they welcome Premier Laurier in the morning.

"What are those raucous sounds I hear?"
said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"It's Liberals learning how to cheer," the station agent said.
"What do they want to practise for?" said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"To get the bursts 'spontaneous'," the station agent said.
"There's a smart young chap from Ottawa, whose purpose is avowed,
And he's teaching squads of Liberals to holler good and loud,
When the idol of his countrymen starts bowing to the crowd.
Which will welcome Premier Laurier in the morning.

"Who's that man rooting in the car?"
said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"Another Welcome Agent," the station agent said.
"What is he now so busy at?" said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"He's touching up some mottoes," the station agent said.
"He's repair man for the outfit. Did you think he was a thief?
He's stitching up some banners, which have rather come to grief,
And painting sunny smiles upon the portraits of the chief.
For the welcome of the Premier in the morning.

"Who's that man staring at a book?"
said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"That man who writes the notices," the station agent said.
"What is the book he's staring at?" said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"The Standard dictionary," the station agent said.
"He's hunting up some synonyms for glorious and success,
To write ovation stories in the local Liberal press,
And he'll put some extra ginger in the citizens' address.
To welcome Premier Laurier in the morning.

"It seems a little cut and dried," said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"It's got to be, it's got to be," the station agent said.
"It's something like a circus," said Toiler-on-the-grade.
"It's worse than that, it's worse than that," the station agent said.
"If the banners and the cheering were not ready in advance.
The whole affair would fall as flat as sermons at a dance.
And the Liberal party can't afford to take the slighest chance,
In the welcome of the Premier in the morning."

COUNTERFEITING CHARGED.

Toronto Man and Son Are Arrested Charged With Passing Bad Money.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—With the arrest of Thomas Crozier, a builder, of 9 Gerrard street west, a well-to-do citizen, and his son, Milton Crozier, the first of whom was taken into custody at Oakville and the other at Milton, during last week-end, the local police believe they have laid by the heels a couple of counterfeiters who have troubled local bankers and tradesmen for several months past.

The elder man was arrested in Oakville on Friday night on the charge of passing a spurious $5 bill of the Farmers' Bank at the local opera house.

The younger man was arrested on the following day at Milton, where his father owns a farm. The arrest was made at the instance of the Dominion detective department. Inspector Parkinson having taken charge of the case as soon as the first arrest was made.

Following the arrest of the two men, Inspector Duncan, with Detectives Sockett, McKinney, Montgomery, and Levitt of the Toronto police, made a raid on the house at 9 Gerrard street west at 10 o'clock Sunday night and found some photographic apparatus, a small hand press, and nearly one hundred tubes of paints.

Methodist Church Sold.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—The sale of the Dominion Methodist Church to C. Ross & Co. for $125,000 has been approved by the church board, and the congregation will seek new quarters.

Big Fire at Steveston.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 6.—Part of the town of Steveston, with the Beaver salmon cannery, was burned yesterday morning. The loss is supposed to be from a hundred to a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Two Chinamen are said to have been burned to death.

Killed In Runaway Accident.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 6.—In a runaway accident in the City Park Sunday H. W. Cortes, a member of a leading hardware firm, was killed, and Mrs. F. M. Treadway and her two children were painfully injured.

The Prig and His Cane.

In the number of the Tatler for Oct. 6, 1709, it is observed that "a cane is part of the dress of a prig" (this, by the way, shows the erroneous notion prevalent that "priggishness" is a modern word) "and always worn upon a button, for fear he should be thought to have an occasion for it or be esteemed really and not genteelly a cripple."

In the number of Nov. 18 a rural squire in town is sketched who is the prototype of one of the pavement nuisances: "His arms naturally swung at an unreasonable distance from his sides, which, with the advantage of a cane that he brandished in a great variety of irregular motions, made it unsafe for any one to walk within several yards of him."

And under date of Dec. 5 there is an amusing sketch of "a lively, fresh colored young man" who was among the applicants to Isaac Bickerstaff's court of censorship for license to use "canes, perspective glasses, snuffboxes, orange flower waters and the like ornaments of life." This young man had his cane hanging on his fifth button and was "an Oxford scholar who was just entered at the temple."

A Wedding Superstition.

It has been considered unlucky to be married in May ever since the days of Ovid, and those people who have spent their time in looking up roots and reasons have given what they consider to be the origin of the superstition as follows:

In ancient Rome there was held in May a festival called the Lemuria, or feast of the Lemures, which was a ceremony in honor of the speeches of departed souls. It became with the Romans what we should call "bad form" to have matrimonial feasts at the season of a solemn ritual, being no doubt thought to be an insult to the dead to marry at such a time. From this a number of stories grew of the revenge made by the outraged ghosts upon those who dared to disregard them, and if anything unfortunate happened to a couple who had been married in May it would, of course, have been put down to retribution. So the tradition of ill luck arose, and its influence has lasted ever since, even to our time.

Towed by a Halibut.

About the mouths of the streams on which salmon camps are situated the Indian dogs and children amuse themselves catching the fish. Some of the youngsters are so small that after they have succeeded in cornering a fish the combined efforts of the party are often required to dispatch it and carry it to camp. I have watched dogs running about in a rift snapping at the salmon and apparently having the time of their lives.

One of the most amusing sights that I saw during my stay in Alaska was two Indian boys being towed about the harbor at Kadiak by a huge halibut they had just hooked. Utterly unable to land the fish, they had fastened the line to the stern of the boat, and while they pulled with all their might, each one at an oar, they rallied each other for not exerting more strength and shouted loudly for help. Finally an Indian put out in a boat, and the fish was landed.—Forest and Stream.

Bewildering France.

There are in France two Bordeaux, the one in the Gironde and a tiny place in the Loiret. There are two Toulouses, the old town in the Haute-Garonne and Toulouse du Jura, a village with 600 inhabitants, near Lons-le-Saunier. There is Tours in Touraine, Balzac's Tours in the Indre-et-Loire and Tours, a village in Savoy, near Albertville. There are seven St. Cyrs, simple St. Cyrs, that is, and twenty-four with something tacked on to them; seven St. Denises and forty-seven with some addition, fourteen St. Germains and 114 with something tacked on.

Great Lovers of Water.

The Siamese are more devoted to the water than any other nation in the world. They are nearly always bathing, generally with their clothes on, and they never go anywhere by land if they can possibly go by water. The streets of Bangkok are like those of Venice, and the inhabitants say that their idea of paradise would be a town with canals where there were currents in both directions, so that they might be spared the effort of rowing.

The Sorrow of It.

"It's too bad," observed the man who seemed to be thinking aloud.

"What's too bad?" queried the party who had overheard the observation.

"That our neighbors always know when we have fried onions for supper, but never get next when we have strawberries and ice cream," explained the noisy thinker.—Chicago News.

The Weather.

"Do you think there is any reliable way of foretelling the weather?"

"Yep," answered Farmer Corntossel. "Jes' think of the kind you don't want and then prophesy it."—Washington Star.

Full of It.

Mrs. Caterby—In a short time now we will do all our heating by alcohol.

Caterby—That's good. All we'll have to do will be to connect your Uncle Jake to the furnace and range.—Life.

WHAT SWORDS COST.

Anything From £4 4s. to £750 Can Be Paid For Good Weapon.

In the first place, remarked the Sword King, as we walked through his big London factory, we make 70,000 swords a year, and hope to go on making more, in spite of all the Peace Conferences in the world. You must know that all our steel comes from Sheffield in 14 foot lengths, each 1 1-2 inches wide; none of your German stuff for me.

Every first-class sword takes ten days to make, and goes through sixty or seventy different processes. It is then tested by being screwed into a kind of toy cannon, and brought down flat with great force on a steel table, which is covered with a wire cage in case of any accident.

After the surface has been proved the back and edge are struck against a small block of oak, the final test being that of bending, and the Toledo proof of thrusting against solid iron.

The regulation sword for an infantry officer costs £4 4s. Cavalry swords are much more expensive, the regulation weapon even for troopers in the Hussar regiments costing £6. Hussar officers also wear full-dress Mameluke scimitars at £12 12s. each, and must possess court swords, with hilts of cut steel, which usually cost £60.

The Dragoon's sword costs as much as £8 10s., although the highly ornamented weapons worn by generals and admirals of the fleet cost but £7 to £8 each.

The same price is paid for the weighty claymores used in all Highland regiments; but the Scottish officer of expensive tastes may pay from £20 to £30 for his dirk if he desires one set with real cairngorms.

Of course, presentation swords run into a lot of money. Some time ago we had an order from the Foreign Office for a sword for a dusky monarch. The pattern of the blade was specially designed and inscribed; the scabbard was of fish-skin, mounted with 22-carat gold, and the weapon cost £80. Many swords costing over £100, however, are made for foreign officers, and a superb weapon, ornamented with ivory, gold, silver, and precious stones, which was recently ordered for the King of Siam, cost no less than £750.—Tit-Bits.

RAILWAY LAW COURTS.

How English Employes Are Tried For Derelictions of Duty.

Regularly about once a week the head offices of big British railway companies are transformed into miniature law courts. When anything happens—such as a collision, for example—engine-drivers, guards, shunters, and platelayers are all cited to appear at the offices, so that the directors may find out who is to blame. When the man who is being charged is found guilty, they do not, as a rule, dispense with his services. His name and the nature of the offence are placed upon a kind of black list.

Should the guilty person lose his situation later, he finds it extremely difficult to get a similar one, because the manager usually refers to the "black list" when writing out the man's character.

Every engine-man concerned in a mishap must report the circumstance in writing, and also send part of the broken material to show whether the breakage is due to careless handling of the train or faulty metal. The courts-martial take a long time in coming to a decision. The officials are armed with microscopes, and the pieces are thoroughly examined. Very often the question of guilt or innocence is a knotty one, owing to the nature of the smash.

Sometimes a large number of employes are called upon to give evidence; still, the guilt is invariably fixed all the same. The men's evidence is listened to and taken down just as carefully as in a case at the Central Criminal Court.

If a man thinks he has been condemned wrongly he may appeal. A special appeal court will listen to him, and—not hurry him. If the accident in question, however, is one which the Board of Trade have inquired into, an appeal will be of no avail. The Government inspector's decision is final.

Burns and the Children.

A characteristic story of John Burns is told by the master of a London secondary school. A colleague on the staff of the school was accustomed to take his boys to Battersea Park for games of football and cricket. A small tip to the policeman, it is said, was found to secure the best pitches, and the small children of the neighborhood were turned off to allow the boys to play. One day the policeman saw the master and his class approaching and began to clear the ground. A stentorian voice from a neighboring tree cried, "Leave those kiddies alone. The park is for them, and they shall not be turned off." And down clambered the indignant champion of the children's rights.

Unconventional Broadland.

The great charm of the Norfolk Broads to the worker is the absolute change it is able to give. There is no hurry—one must go with the wind. There is no noise—the only sound above the restful hum of a summer's day is the clack-clack-clack of the sheet running out, or the rattle of the blocks as the jib flaps, and, perhaps, from somewhere hid away, the pop of a cork or the happy, careless laughter of a holiday party. Broadland is synonymous with independence and unconventionality. Everyone "looses starch." Provided you conform to the few simple unwritten laws of the district there is nothing you may not do.

Railway Play Boxes.

Railway play boxes are making their appearance in England on the Grat Northern Co.'s line in time for the holiday rush. Children can be kept amused and quiet during the longest journeys—while mother and father reads the newspaper or fall asleep in their corner seats—by wonderful little models of trains and railway systems which can be bought for 25 cents.

"Worrying about the schooner. Hope Billy Edwards saw or heard or felt that squall coming," replied Forsythe, giving expression to the anxiety that all felt.

"He's a good sailor man," said Ives, "and that's a stanch little schooner by the way she handled herself."

"Oh, it will be all right," said Carter confidently. "The wind's moderating now."

"But there's no telling how far out of the course this may have blown him."

Barnett came down, dripping.

"Anything new?" asked Dr. Trendon.

The navigating officer shook his head.

"Nothing. But the captain's in a state of mind," he said.

"What's wrong with him?"

"The schooner. Seems possessed with the notion that there's something wrong with her."

"Aren't you feeling a little that way yourself?" said Forsythe. "I am. I'll take a look around before I turn in."

He left behind him a silent crowd. His return was prompt and swift.

"Come on deck," he said.

Every man leaped as to an order. There was that in Forsythe's voice which stung. The weather had cleared somewhat, though scudding wrack still blew across them to the westward. The ship rolled heavily. Of the sea naught was visible except the arching waves, but in the sky they beheld again, with a sickening sense of disaster, that pale and lovely glow which had so bewildered them two nights before.

"The aurora!" cried McGuire, the paymaster.

"Oh, certainly!" replied Ives, with sarcasm. "Dead in the west. Common spot for the aurora. Particularly on the edge of the south seas, where they are thick!"

"Then what is it?"

Nobody had an answer. Carter hastened forward and returned to report.

"It's electrical anyway," said Carter. "The compass is queer again."

"Edwards ought to be close to the solution of it," ventured Ives. "This gale should have blown him just about to the center of interest."

"If only he isn't involved in it," said Carter anxiously.

"What could there be to involve him?" asked McGuire.

"I don't know," said Carter slowly. "Somehow I feel as if the desertion of the schooner was in some formidable manner connected with that light."

For perhaps fifteen minutes the glow continued. It seemed to be nearer at hand than on the former sighting. But it took no comprehensible form. Then it died away and all was blackness again. But the officers of the Wolverine had long been in troubled slumber before the sensitive compass regained its exact balance, and, with the shifting wind to mislead her, the cruiser had wandered by morning no man might know how far from her course.

All day long of June 6 the Wolverine, baffled by patches of mist and moving rain squalls, patrolled the empty seas without sighting the lost schooner. The evening brought an envelope of fog again, and presently a light breeze came up from the north. An hour of it had failed to disperse the mist when there was borne down to the warship a flapping sound as of great wings. The flapping grew louder—waned—ceased—and from the lookout came a hail.

"Ship's lights three points on the starboard quarter."

"What do you make it out to be?" came the query from below.

"Green light's all I can see, sir." There was a pause.

"There's her port light now. Looks to be turning and bearing down on us, sir. Coming dead for us"—the man's voice rose—"close aboard; less'n two ship's lengths away!"

As for a prearranged scene, the fog curtain parted. There loomed silently and swiftly the Laughing Lass. Down she bore upon the greater vessel until it seemed as if she must ram, but all the time she was veering to windward, and now she ran into the wind with a castanet rattle of sails. So close aboard was she that the eager eyes of Uncle Sam's men peered down upon her empty decks, for she was void of life.

Behind the cruiser's blanketing she paid off very slowly, but presently caught the breeze full and again whitened the water at her prow. Forgetting regulations, Ives hailed loudly:

"Ahoy, Laughing Lass! Ahoy, Billy Edwards!"

No sound, no animate motion, came from aboard that apparition as she fell astern. A shudder of horror ran across the Wolverine's quarter deck. A wraith ship, peopled with skeletons, would have been less dreadful to their sight than the brisk and active desolation of the heeling schooner.

"Been deserted since early last night," said Trendon hoarsely.

"How can you tell that?" asked Barnett.

"Both sails reefed down, ready for that squall. Been no weather since to call for reefs. Must have quit her during the squall."

"Then they jumped," cried Carter, "for I saw her boats. It isn't believable."

"Neither was the other," said Trendon grimly.

A hurried succession of orders stopped further discussion for the time. Ives was sent aboard the schooner to lower sail and report. He came back with a staggering dearth of information. The boats were all there; the ship was intact—as intact as when Billy Edwards had taken charge—but the cheery, lovable ensign and his men had vanished without trace or clew. As to the how or the wherefore they might rack their brains without guessing. There was the beginning of a log in the ensign's handwriting, which Ives had found with high excitement and read with bitter disappointment.

"Had squall from northeast," it ran. "Double reefed her, and she took it nicely. Seems a seaworthy, quick ship. Further search for log. No result. Have ordered one of the crew who is a bit of a mechanic to work at the brass bound chest till he gets it open. He reports marks on the lock as if somebody had been trying to pick it before him."

There was no further entry.

"Dr. Trendon is right," said Barnett. "Whatever happened—and God only knows what it could have been—it happened just after the squall."

"Just about the time of the strange glow," cried Ives.

It was decided that two men and a petty officer should be sent aboard the Laughing Lass to make her fast with a cable and remain on board overnight. But when the order was given the men hung back. One of them protested brokenly that he was sick. Trendon after examination reported to the captain.

"Case of blue funk, sir. Might as well be sick. Good for nothing. Others aren't much better."

"Who was to be in charge?"

"Congdon," replied the doctor, naming one of the petty officers.

"He's my cockswain," said Captain Parkinson. "A first class man. I can hardly believe that he is afraid. We'll see."

Congdon was sent for.

"You're ordered aboard the schooner for the night, Congdon," said the captain.

"Yes, sir."

"Is there any reason why you do not wish to go?"

The man hesitated, looking miserable. Finally he blurted out, not without a certain dignity:

"I obey orders, sir."

"Speak out, my man," urged the captain kindly.

"Well, sir, it's Mr. Edwards, then. You couldn't scare him off a ship, sir, unless it was something—something"—

He stopped, failing of the word.

"You know what Mr. Edwards was sir, for pluck," he concluded.

"Was!" cried the captain sharply "What do you mean?"

"The schooner got him, sir. You don't make no doubt of that, do you, sir?" The man spoke in a hushed voice, with a shrinking glance back of him.

"Will you go aboard under Mr. Ives?"

"Anywhere my officer goes I'll go and gladly, sir."

Ives was sent aboard in charge. For that night, in a light breeze, the two ships lay close together, the schooner riding jauntily astern. But not until morning illumined the world of waters did the Wolverine's people feel confident that the Laughing Lass would not vanish away from their ken like a shape of the mist.

CHAPTER V.

WHEN Barnett came on deck very early on the morning of June 7 he found Dr. Trendon already up and staring moodily out at the Laughing Lass. As the night was calm the tow had made fair time toward their port in the Hawaiian group. The surgeon was muttering something which seemed to Barnett to be in a foreign tongue.

"Thought out any clew, doctor?" asked the first officer.

"Petit Chel — pshaw! Jolie Celimene! No," muttered Trendon. "Marie—Marie—I've got it! The Marie Celeste."

"Got what? What about her?"

"Parallel case," said Trendon. "Sailed from New York back in the seventies. Seven weeks out was found derelict. Everything in perfect order. Captain's wife's hem on the machine. Boats all accounted for. No sign of struggle. Log written to within forty-eight hours."

"What became of the crew?"

"Wish I could tell you. Might help to unravel our tangle." He shook his head in sudden, unwonted passion.

"Evidently there's something criminal in her record," said Barnett, frowning at the fusty schooner astern. "Otherwise the name wouldn't be painted out."

"Painted out long ago. See how rusty it is. Schermerhorn's work, maybe," replied Trendon. "Secret expedition, remember."

"In the name of wonders, why should he do it?"

"Secret expedition, wasn't it?"

"Um-ah; that's true," said the other thoughtfully. "It's quite possible."

"Captain wishes to see both of you gentlemen in the wardroom, if you please," came a message.

Below they found all the officers gathered. Captain Parkinson was pacing up and down in ill controlled agitation.

"Gentlemen," he said, "we are facing a problem which so far as I know is without parallel. It is my intention to bring the schooner which we have in tow to port at Honolulu. In the present unsettled weather we cannot continue to tow her. I wish two officers to take charge. Under the circumstances I shall issue no orders. The duty must be voluntary."

Instantly every man, from the veteran Trendon to the paymaster, volunteered.

"That is what I expected," said Captain Parkinson quietly. "But I have still a word to say. I make no doubt in my own mind that the schooner has twice been beset by the gravest of perils. Nothing less would have driven Mr. Edwards from his post. All of us who know him will appreciate that. Nor can I free myself from the darkest forebodings as to his fate and that of his companions. But as to the nature of the peril I am unable to make any conjecture worthy of consideration. Has any one a theory to offer?"

There was a dead silence.

"Mr. Barnett? Mr. Trendon? Mr. Ives?"

"Is there not possibly some connection between the unexplained light which we have twice seen and the double desertion of the ship?" suggested the first officer after a pause.

"I have asked myself that over and over. Whatever the source of the light and however near to it the schooner may have been she is evidently unharmed."

"Yes, sir," said Barnett. "That seems to vitiate that explanation."

"I thank you, gentlemen, for the promptitude of your offers," continued the captain. "In this respect you make my duty the more difficult. I shall accept Mr. Ives because of his familiarity with sailing craft and with these seas." His eyes ranged the group.

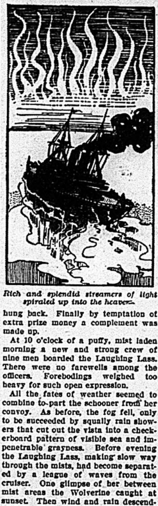
"I beg your pardon, Captain Parkinson," eagerly put in the paymaster, "but I've handled a schooner yacht for several years and I'd appreciate the chance of"—

"Very well, Mr. McGuire, you shall be the second in command."

"Thank you, sir."

"You gentlemen will pick a volunteer crew and go aboard at once. Spare no effort to find records of the schooner's cruise. Keep in company and watch for signals. Report at once any discovery or unusual incident, however slight."

Not so easily was a crew obtained. Having in mind the excusable superstition of the men, Captain Parkinson was unwilling to compel any of them to the duty. Awed by the mystery of their mates' disappearance, the sailors hung back. Finally by temptation of extra prize money a complement was made up.



Rich and splendid streamers of light spiraled up into the heavens.

At 10 o'clock of a puffy, mist laden morning a new and strong crew of nine men boarded the Laughing Lass. There were no farewells among the officers. Forebodings weighed too heavy for such open expression.

All the fates of weather seemed to combine to part the schooner from her convoy. As before, the fog fell, only to be succeeded by squally rain showers that cut out the vista into a checkerboard pattern of visible sea and impenetrable grayness. Before evening the Laughing Lass, making slow way through the mists, had become separated by a league of waves from the cruiser. One glimpse of her between mist areas the Wolverine caught at sunset. Then wind and rain descended in furious volume from the southeast. The cruiser immediately headed about, following the probable course of her charge, which would be beaten far down to leeward. It was a gloomy mess on the warship. In his cabin Captain Parkinson was frankly seasick—a condition which nothing but the extreme of nervous depression ever induced in him.

For several hours the rain fell and the gale howled. Then the sky swiftly cleared, and with the clearing there rose a great cry of amaze from stem to stern of the Wolverine, for far toward the western horizon appeared such a prodigy as the eye of no man aboard that ship had ever beheld. From a belt of marvelous, glowing gold, rich and splendid streamers of light spiraled up into the blackness of the heavens.

In all the colors of the spectrum they rose and fell—blazing orange, silken, wonderful, translucent blues and shimmering reds. Below a broad band of paler hue, like sheet lightning fixed to rigidity, wavered and rippled. All the auroras of the northland blended in one could but have paled away before the splendor of that terrific celestial apparition.

On board the cruiser all hands stood petrified, bound in a stricture of speechless wonder. After the first cry silence lay leaden over the ship. It was broken by a scream of terror from forward. The quartermaster who had been at the wheel came clambering down the ladder and ran along the deck, his fingers splayed and stiffened before him in the intensity of his panic.

"The needle! The compass!" he shrieked.

Barnett ran to the wheelhouse with Trendon at his heels. The others followed. The needle was swaying like a cobra's head. And as a cobra's head spits venom, it spat forth a thin steel blue stream of lucent fire. Then so swiftly it whirled that the sparks scattered from it in a tiny shower. It stopped, quivered and curved itself upward until it rattled like a fairy drum upon the glass shield. Barnett looked at Trendon.

"Volcanic?" he said.

"'Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord,'" muttered the surgeon in his deep bass, as he looked forth upon the streaming, radiant heavens. "It's like nothing else."

In the west the splendor and the ter[illegible] to the zenith. Barnett whirled the wheel. The ship responded perfectly.

"I thought she might be bewitched, too," he murmured.

"You may head her for the light, Mr. Barnett," said Captain Parkinson calmly. He had come from his cabin, all his nervous depression gone in the face of an imminent and visible danger.

Slowly the great mass of steel swung to the unknown. For an hour the unknown guided her. Then fell blackness, sudden, complete. After that radiance the dazzled eye could make out no stars, but the lookout's keen vision discerned something else.

"Ship afire!" he shouted hoarsely.

"Where away?"

"Two points to leeward, near where the light was, sir."

They turned their eyes in the direction indicated and beheld a majestic rolling volume of purple light. Suddenly a fiercer red shot it through.

"That's no ship afire," said Trendon. "Volcano in eruption."

"And the other?" asked the captain.

"No volcano, sir."

"Poor Billy Edwards wins his bet," said Forsythe in a low voice.

"God grant he's on earth to collect it," replied Barnett solemnly.

No one turned in that night. When the sun of June 8 rose it showed an ocean bare of prospect except that on the far horizon where the chart showed no land there rose a smudge of dirty rolling smoke. Of the schooner there was neither sign nor trace.

CHAPTER VI.

"THIS ship," growled Carter, the second officer, to Dr. Trendon, as they stood watching the growing smoke column, "is a worse hotbed of rumors than a down east village. That's the third sea gull we've had officially reported since breakfast."

As he said, three distinct times the Wolverine had thrilled to an imminent discovery, which upon nearer investigation had dwindled to nothing more than a floating fowl. Upon the heels of Carter's complaint came another hail.

"Boat ahoy! Three points on the starboard bow."

"If that's another gull," muttered Carter, "I'll have something to say to you, my festive lookout."

The news ran electrically through the cruiser, and all eyes were strained for a glimpse of the boat. The ship swung away to starboard.

"Let me know as soon as you can make her out," ordered Carter.

"Aye, aye, sir."

"There's certainly something there," said Forsythe presently. "I can make out a speck rising on the waves."

"Bit o' wreckage from Barnett's derelict," muttered Trendon, scowling through his glasses.

"Rides too high for a spar or anything of that sort," said the junior lieutenant.

"She's a small boat," came in the clear tones of the lookout, "driftin' down."

"Any one in her?" asked Carter.

"Can't make out yet, sir. No one's in charge though, sir."

Captain Parkinson appeared, and Carter pointed out the speck to him.

"Yes. Give her full speed," said the captain, replying to a question from the officer of the deck.

Forward leaped the swift cruiser, all too slow for the anxious hearts of those aboard. For there was not one of the Wolverines who did not expect from this aimless traveler of desert seas at the least a leading clew to the riddle that oppressed them.

"Aloft there!"

"Aye, aye, sir."

"Can you make out her build?"

"Rides high, like a dory, sir."

"Wasn't there a dory on the Laughing Lass?" cried Forsythe.

"On her stern davits," answered Trendon.

"It is hardly probable that unattached small boats should be drifting about these seas," said Captain Parkinson thoughtfully. "If she's a dory, she's the Laughing Lass' boat."

"That's what she is," said Barnett. "You can see her build plain enough now."

"Mr. Barnett, will you go aloft and keep me posted?" said the captain.

The executive officer climbed to join the lookout. As he ascended those below saw the little craft rise high and slow on a broad swell.

"Same dory," said Trendon. "I'd swear to her in Constantinople."

"What else could she be?" muttered Forsythe.

"Somethin' that looks like a man in the bottom of her," sang out the crow's nest. "Two of 'em, I think."

For five minutes there was stillness aboard, broken only by an occasional low voiced conjecture. Then from aloft:

"Two men rollin' in the bottom."

"Are they alive?"

"No, sir. Not that I can see."

The wind, which had been extremely variable since dawn, now whipped around a couple of points, swinging the boat's stern to them. Barnett, putting aside his glass for a moment, called down:

"That's the one, sir. I can make out the name."

"Good," said the captain quietly. "We should have news at least."

"Ives or McGuire," suggested Forsythe in low tones.

"Or Billy Edwards," amended Carter.

"Not Edwards," said Trendon.

"How do you know?" demanded Forsythe.

"Dory was aboard when we found her the second time, after Edwards had left."

"Can you make out which of the men are in her?" hailed the captain.

"Don't think it's any of our people," came the astonishing reply from Barnett.

"Are you sure?"

"I can see only one man's face, sir. It isn't Ives or McGuire. He's a stranger to me."

"It must be one of the crew, then."

"No, sir, beg your parding," called the lookout. "Nothin' like that in our crew, sir."

The boat came down upon them swiftly. Soon the quarter deck was looking into her. She was of a type common enough on the high seas, except that a step for a mast showed that she had presumably been used for skimming about open shores. Of her passengers one lay forward, prone and quiet. A length of sailcloth spread over him made it impossible to see his garb. At his breast an ugly protuberance, outlined vaguely, hinted a deformity.

The other sprawled aft, and at a nearer sight of him some of the men broke out into nervous titters. There was some excuse, for surely such a scarecrow had never before been the sport of wind and wave. A thing of shreds he was, elaborately ragged, a face overrun with a scrub of beard and preternaturally drawn, surmounted with a stiff dried, dirty cloth semiturban, with a wide, forbidding stain along the side, worked out the likeness to a makeup.

"My God!" cackled Forsythe with a hysterical explosion, and again "My God!"

A long drawn, irrepressible aspiration of expectancy rose from the warship's decks as the stranger raised his haggard face, turned eyes unseeingly upon them and fell back. The forward occupant stirred not, save as the boat rolled.

From between decks some one called out sharply an order. In the grim silence it seemed strangely incongruous that the measured business of a ship's life should be going forward as usual. Something within the newcomer's consciousness stirred to that voice of authority. Mechanically, like some huge, hideous toy, he raised first one arm, then the other and hitched himself halfway up on the stern seat. His mouth opened. His face wrinkled. He seemed groping for the meaning of a joke at which he knew he ought to laugh. Suddenly from his lips in surprising volume, raucous, rasping, yet with a certain rollicking deviltry fit to set the head a-tilt, burst a chanty:

"Oh, their coffin was their ship, and their grave it was the sea—
Blow high, blow low, what care we!
And the quarter that we gave them was to sink them in the sea—
Down on the coast of the high Barbaree-ee."

Long drawn, like the mockery of a

A CHAT ABOUT DRESS.

Timely Suggestions For an Autumn Trousseau.

Here are a few suggestions for the prospective autumn bride who has not too much money for her trousseau. Long summer days afford opportunity for adding touches of hand work to lingerie, so that when the autumn styles are launched undivided time and attention may be given to the wedding gown, go away suit and other frocks.

To begin with the underwear, have six pairs of drawers, six corset covers, six chemises (if you wear them) or six undershirts, four nightgowns, two white petticoats, one silk petticoat (or sateen with silk ruffle), eight pairs of stockings. Then there should be a dressing sack of china silk or albatross and a flannel or flannelette wash wrapper.

There will be the wedding dress, which good sense suggests shall be selected with a view to future parties, and the go away gown, which it will pay you to have good. This should have a matching waist.

Add four tailored shirt waists of linen, washable silk or flannel, one net blouse, a simple house dress of voile or challis, a plain little suiting skirt and a cover all coat.

Then there are gloves, shoes, slippers, neckwear, belts, veils and handkerchiefs.

To some this may seem an extravagant list, to others a most meager allowance. It is capable, however, of "cutting" or "padding," as we say in editorial work. Given a clever fingered girl, the long summer days, some inexpensive white material, some narrow, neat patterned valenciennes edging, and really the lingerie will cost surprisingly little.

Negligees can be made by the girl herself, too, and often trimmings may be found in the house, which will save buying.

One of the most expensive items of dress is neckwear, and this is perfectly possible work for a handy girl. Odds and ends of fine linen or batiste and bits of lace, combined with a little stitchery, result in collars and stocks not only pretty, but possessing the charm of being unique.

Putting Away Valuables.

"Hiding places for money and jewelry, did you say?" queried a college girl. "Well, I must confess that some of the girls are woefully lax about taking any kind of care of their more choice belongings. And those who are careful do have funny places for hiding things.

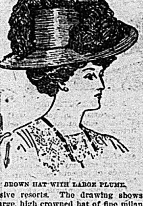
"There was one girl in our house, a senior, and where do you think she kept her rings, chains and money? She always put them in her shoe bag, for she felt sure that that was a perfectly safe hiding place. Then there was another who also chose a bag to protect hers from the burglars. It was her laundry bag. I often wondered that she didn't send her wash off with the precious possessions in it, but she claimed she never had made that mistake.

"A clock was the hiding place of another's money, while others chose the mattress, the desk drawers and places in their chiffoniers. Those are more or less common banks. Vases, too, are favorite receptacles. One girl I know had a soft pillow with a patent bag arrangement in one corner, where she hid all the things she deemed too valuable to leave in sight. Another had a fascinating old chair, and in the springs of this she found a treasure house. Still another put her valuables under the corner of her large rug.

"Oh, yes, there are lots of funny places for money and such, but the joke of it all is that half of the girls forget where they do hide their things, especially when they want them in a hurry."

A Millinery Fancy.

Large hats in brown tones are very new and smart when worn with light gowns of thin summer materials, and a few of these brown hat models have recently been seen at one or two exclusive resorts. The drawing shows a large, high crowned hat of fine milan straw trimmed only with a large, wide plume, the hat and plume both being in a soft brown shade. The hat was faced with brown malines put on in several layers and perfectly flat.



BROWN HAT WITH LARGE PLUME.

A New Guest Book.

A clever idea is the new guest book of which one hostess has thought. It is long and narrow, with a cartridge paper back and blank sheets of writing paper on the inside. Tied to this book by a long ribbon is a lead pencil. On the fly leaf the following is written: "To the Guests—If during your stay with me this afternoon or evening there has been a simple, pleasant happening which might be a pleasant memory in after years, kindly insert it in this book of pleasant recollections."

POLITENESS PAYS.

Nothing to Lose by Cultivating Good Manners.

Have you ever had a woman tell you that she would not say "Please" and "Thank you" to servants? They are such short little words that any child can utter them; but, truth to tell, children of the present day are not taught to use them when addressing servants. A little politeness goes a long way and helps to lubricate the wheels of domestic affairs fully as much as oil applied to machinery. There is frequently as much friction in the one case as in the other. Then why not apply the same method? Politeness and tact should go hand in hand. An order given with a smile and "Please" will, in all probability, be better carried out and more quickly executed for the little word, and if a "Thank you" is added when the service is finished what harm can possibly be done? There is certainly nothing to lose by cultivating good manners—if you have not them already. In fact, the gain is on the side of the well bred woman who requites each little service with a "Thank you." "Good manners are a greater factor in success than mental ability," said a savant. It is undoubtedly a well [illegible] fact that bewitching manners go far to secure a person social success. The inference, naturally, is that good manners are an inheritance that the possessor was raised in a refined and cultivated atmosphere—in other words, was "to the manner born." Beauty is a divine gift and wins favor readily, but beauty without good breeding soon fails to satisfy, and the person is apt to be looked upon as one whose birth was not all that it should have been. The old saying, "Beauty is but skin deep," should be a warning to the fortunate possessor who relies solely on its charm. It fades all too soon, and unless there are other staying qualities the disappointment will be great when the inevitable change takes place. Each one influences some one else. Our manners and sayings are imitated more than we are aware. So it behooves each person to be very careful of word and act, for surely our manners are reflected in those around us.

WHY THEY LAUGHED.

A Chinese Accessory That Made All the Mischief.

A girl whose long pongee coat has been the admiration of her friends all this season is seriously considering never wearing it again. There is no question as to the style and art of the wrap, a long, flowing affair with fascinating plaits and big sleeves that float in the smallest summer breeze. Its decoration is a triumph, for the girl hied herself to Chinatown and bought embroideries to use as insets and panels, one of the most fascinating being a black silk band not more than two inches wide. Its length is about two yards, and it is almost solidly covered with embroidery in old blues. At each end is a long black tassel. This band, you see, has been put around the low neck, so that the two ends fall free almost to the bottom of the coat.

So far so good, but one day while wearing the cloak she carried her husband's collars to a Chinese laundry. Being by no means a dull person, it took her but a moment to see that all laundry operations ceased as soon as she entered and that she had become an object of unqualified interest. Almost simultaneously it dawned on her why. It was her Chinese embroideries. To the man waiting on her she said, pointing to her coat trimmings:

"You recognise them?"

"Les, les," quoth he of the pigtail. "Chinaman hold up trousers with that," and he pointed to the beautiful long narrow black embroidered band.

Her Telephone Hour.

A girl whose engagements are many and who is therefore out a good deal has established a telephone hour. In this way her friends are always sure of catching her on the wire, and she comes in for many unexpected good times that otherwise might be missed. Until she did this it was almost impossible to get her. Now if she is not at home at the telephone time she calls up the house and tells the maid where she may be reached. The arrangement works to a charm, she says, and nothing would induce her to go back to the haphazard fashion of any and no time.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Weakly children are very liable to have sties. Good diet and cod liver oil or malt are the best remedies.

For dark circles under the eyes regular living, simple diet, deep breathing and nutritious food are unfailing specifics.

A diet of white of egg, whipped to a stiff froth and taken three times daily, is a fine prescription for a thin contour of face.

To reduce wide nostrils a lotion of tannin and camphor carefully mixed in equal proportions and faithfully applied will invariably yield good results.

For sunken cheeks one ounce of lanolin mixed with one-half ounce of cocoa butter and rubbed into the face with a rotary and upward motion is an accepted specific.

Small wisps of hair will stay in curl much longer if just before the hair is curled with the heated iron the locks are dampened with bay rum. This often proves very helpful on damp days.

Learn to dance. Dancers are fine walkers. Dance fifteen minutes every day. It will make you more limber in the unused muscles. When you walk try to relax a little. Most walkers walk as if they were trying to walk a crack. They walk stiffly.

A Novel Prize.

An odd little prize, which may be made, is a hanging pincushion ed of gilded mussel shells in have been pasted small pincus covered with bits of soft, bright flowered ribbon or velvet.

Each of these tiny shells is the tached to a ribbon cut in diff lengths and the lot of them fast together at top with a gay rosette, crocheted or gilt ring for hanger.

MISS M. CAMPBELL

Three Were Killed At Brantford In Collision To-day.

Brantford, Oct. 6.—(Special) — A collision took place this morning between a work train and a yard engine between Mount Vernon and Burford.

Three persons were killed:

Charles Rupple, home in Brantford.

Cecil Buchell, fireman, London.

Engineer Fralick, London, cut in two.

Injured—George Yapp, engineer, Brantford; Ernest Lewis, engineer, Brantford.

Assizes Opened This Afternoon.

At 1.30 this afternoon the fall sittings of the High Court of Justice opened here, before the Honorable Justice Teetzel. The court room was filled with jurymen and spectators. The following compose the Grand Jury.

THE GRAND JURY.

F. W. Barry, Trenton.
P. Bradshaw, Dungannon.
Robt. Brood, Madoc.
A. Cameron, Carlow.
J. Clancey, Rawdon.
J. Elliott, Belleville.
W. O. Farley, Thurlow.
M. Flynn, Monteagle.
R. Good, Rawdon.
Wm. Irvine, Deseronto.
A. T. McFarlane, Tyendinaga.
S. Sargent, St. Ola.
O. G. Tivy, Wollaston.

THIS AFTERNOON'S DOINGS.

Upon the assembling of court the Grand Jury were called, and selected Mr. W. O. Farley as their foreman. They were then addressed by His Lordship.

His Lordship said he was sorry the Grand Jury had some serious crimes to investigate, the most serious being that of murder, which crime he definitely explained, quoting certain clauses of the criminal code in regard to it. He briefly reviewed the circumstances of the Sero case. Two other persons are charged with serious offences, Wm. Fox is accused of discharging a revolver with intent to do grievous bodily harm to William Day, and he is also charged with assaulting and wounding the said Wm. Day, the prosecutor. Mrs. Day is also charged with aiding and abetting in these offences. A man would be charged before them with having committed rape upon a married woman. This offence was also dwelt upon by His Lordship. After their duties were done at the court the Grand Jury would visit public institutions, where public money is expended. When they have done this he would be pleased to discharge them.

It is understood that the Day assault case and the rape case will be taken up first, and the court is expected to sit to-night.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

The Board of Directors of the National League failed to reach a decision in the case of the disputed New York-Chicago game. They will render their decision to-day, and many believe the decision will be in favor of New York. It certainly should be. The Giants won the game fair and square. Leaving aside the technicality, there was no possibility for Chicago to stop the winning run from scoring. The Cubs are a lot of squealers, with about as much real sportsmanship as old Shylock had.

If New York can win the two remaining games with Boston they can tie for the pennant, but if they lose a game, or a game should be prevented by rain, it is all off with the Giants unless the disputed game is given to them.

A big Canadian professional hockey league is talked of, which will have affiliations east and west, and put hockey on the plane of professional baseball, preventing contract jumping, etc.

There are 188 entries for the Ward Marathon race, to be run at Toronto on Saturday. It is believed that 175 runners will start. This will be a record entry list for Marathon races anywhere.

The Montreal ball club lost $2000 on the season. They were $5000 ahead on July 1, but the luck changed and the gates fell off.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

SCOW TURNS; TWO DROWN.

Hands on Wrecking Craft Lose Lives In Whitefish Bay.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 6.—Two men, Capt. John Hunter of Sarnia and Fred Shields of Duluth, lost their lives near Whitefish at 2 o'clock yesterday morning by the overturning of a scow of the Reid Wrecking Co.

Capt. Reid had been engaged for some time endeavoring to save the machinery of the steamer Monarch, which went to pieces near Isle Royal a year ago.

The machinery had been raised and the outfit was proceeding down the lake from Michipicoten.

The scow which overturned was in tow of the schooner Kilderhouse, and the tug Salvator, in close proximity in case of emergency.

When 14 miles from Whitefish the scow turned turtle and went down without warning. It was loaded with derricks and other machinery.

The crew of the Salvator immediately went to the spot and saw the scow, bottom upwards, but the crew of two men, and the machinery has disappeared.

The men were never seen again and the bodies are not yet recovered. The remainder of the outfit proceeded to the Soo yesterday morning and tied up at the New Ontario dock.

CATHEDRAL OPENED.

Handsome Roman Catholic Edifice In St. Boniface Inaugurated.

Winnipeg, Oct. 6.—The new cathedral of the Roman Catholic diocese of St. Boniface was formally opened on Sunday morning with imposing ceremonies.

Three archbishops and seven bishops of the church were present from outside points, together with a large number of representatives of different church orders.

The new cathedral is a magnificent building, capable of seating 2,500, and by far the largest church edifice in western Canada. A striking feature of the day's proceedings was the parade of Roman Catholic laymen of the city. There were 9,800 men in the procession when it passed the city hall, where it was reviewed by Archbishop Langevin.

The only women in the parade were Ruthenians, who, to the number of over 100, marched, as is their custom, with their husbands and brothers, all singing Ruthenian chants.

The pulpit of the cathedral was occupied in the morning by Bishop Foy, auxiliary Bishop of Montreal. Bishop Shanley of Fargo spoke in the afternoon and Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, in the evening.

Will Not Pay Tax.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—Instead of appealing to the assessment commissioners as originally intended, the civil servants intend to refuse payment of the newly-imposed income tax when time for payment comes around next spring.

A. E. Caron, one of the members of the commission on assessment, was of the opinion that the refusal to meet the tax would be to a man on the part of the service, basing his opinion on the fact that circulars advising that course of action had been issued to all and no one had made any objection to the proposition.

Store Thrice Robbed.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—Beginning with the break pulled off by young Robert Snow, jailbreaker, three entries have been made since June into the premises of the Warren and Ellis sporting goods' store at 302 Yonge street. The last was effected Sunday night, when five revolvers were taken by a burglar who broke in at the workshop in the rear. An attempt was also made three weeks ago.

Entry was also made Sunday night into the dental premises of Dr. Charlton Mills, 128 Yonge street. About $30 worth of gold leaf and plates was taken.

Three Persons Burned.

Yonkers, N.Y., Oct. 6.—Mrs. Mary Cummings, 70 years old, and her two grandchildren, Jeanette Howland, aged 9, and Harry Howland, 11 years old, were burned to death yesterday in a fire which destroyed the cottage of John Cummings, superintendent of the estate of William J. Cohran, on the outskirts of Yonkers.

All the members of the household were asleep when the fire was started by the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

Stratford Accidents.

Stratford, Oct. 6.—While feeding a corn-cutter at Robertson's farm, in Ellice, John Ische, Stratford, had his right arm drawn into the machine and chopped off at the elbow. He is in a serious state.

Wilbur Silvester, ten years old, fell on an upturned axe on Sunday, almost severing his arm. The gash required fifteen stiches. The arm will likely be saved.

Ottawa River Low.

Ottawa, Oct. 6.—Water in the Ottawa river is lower than it has been for twelve years. Barges and vessels have had to be lightened to get through the Rideau locks. The registered depth at the foot of the locks was 5 feet 1 inch yesterday. On May 18 it was 25 feet.

Charged With Theft.

Hamilton, Oct. 6.—Joseph Leslie, 138 East Picton street, was arrested last evening charged with stealing a sum of money from George Cann, a grocer. It is alleged that the prisoner collected a bill and failed to return the proceeds to Mr. Cann.

Married on Death Bed.

Hamilton, Oct. 6.—It was learned yesterday that Mrs. James H. Wild, who died on Friday, had been married on her death bed. Her husband is a clerk in the City Hall. She was a daughter of Alex. Hayes, the well-known grocer.

Submariner on Long Cruise.

Cherbourg, France, Oct. 6.—The submarine ship Comerande arrived here yesterday after a voyage of 81 hours, covering 333 miles. A regular speed of five knots was maintained.

NEGRO STAYS IN JAIL

Authorities Take No Chances of Roghmond Being Lynched.

Inquest Into Death of Mrs. Peake, Who Was Killed Near Stratford, Resumed—Big Crowd Gathers In Expectation of Prisoner Attending Sitting, But Is Disappointed—Sons Testify to Finding the Body.

Stratford, Oct. 6.—The adjourned inquest into the death of Mrs. William Peake, who was found dead in the cellar of her home last Wednesday, was resumed last night at the Arlington Hotel, Sebringville, before Coroner Monteith.

An immense crowd gathered, expecting that Roghmond, the negro accused of the murder, might be brought out from the county jail, but they were disappointed, the evidence being taken without his presence.

William Peake, husband of the murdered woman, gave evidence concerning the health of his wife previous to the tragedy. She had been troubled with weak heart, but had never been known to have a fainting spell. Witness had been absent at the time of the tragedy and did not arrive home until the negro had been taken away.

Lee Hobson, who was at work in a field near the railroad track on the day of the tragedy, gave evidence of having seen a negro resembling Roghmond, walking on the track. Witness thought the negro was drunk, but lost sight of him before he reached the corner turning off to the Peake home.

George Peake, son of the deceased, told of returning from the field when called by his brother, to find his mother dead in the cellar. He saw the negro stretched out, lying on his back and apparently asleep. A jack-knife and pair of spectacles found beside his mother's body did not belong to the household.

John Peake, who found the body of his mother, gave evidence as to having left the field for home to get a drink of cider in the cellar. He stated positively that he heard the negro snoring when he made the discovery and immediately went for help and despatched his brother to Stratford for the police.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Admiral Nebagatoff is writing a naval history of the Russian-Japanese war.

Tom Lawson was thrown from his carriage and kicked by the horse on Sunday at Boston.

Henry C. Risley, a Chatanooga, Tenn., contractor, was shot dead by an unknown person.

Two shot and killed and one fatally wounded was the record for Sunday quarrels in New Orleans.

Joseph Chamberlain's health is much improved, and he will not resign his seat in the Commons.

The Canadian Ticket Agents' Association, 175 strong, opened a three days' session at Detroit yesterday.

Randolph Frank of the Peary expedition holds out hope that Dr. I. A. Cook, explorer, is still alive somewhere in Ellesmere land.

Mob Wipes Out Family.

Hickman, Ky., Oct. 6.—David Walker, a negro, his five-year-old daughter and a baby were killed outright; the mother, who was holding the baby in her arms, was fatally shot, and three other children will probably die as a result of a mob's visit to the Walker home. In addition, the oldest son is missing, and is supposed to have been burned with the negro's cabin, which was fired by the mob.

Walker had cursed a white woman and threatened a white man with a pistol, it is said.

Orillia Passes Bylaws.

Orillia, Oct. 6.—A vote was taken for two money bylaws in Orillia yesterday — one for $30,000, for extensions to the town's power plant at Ragged Rapids, which carried with 126 majority, and the other for $10,000, for extensions to the waterworks, which also carried, by 110 majority. Both bylaws carried in every ward.

Conductor Guilty of Assault.

St. Catharines, Oct. 6.—Conductor Harry Phillips was yesterday convicted before County Judge Carmen of aggravated assault on James Groggan by throwing him off a Niagara-St. Catharines-Toronto trolley in August. The judge held that Groggan was partly to blame, and let Phillips go on suspended sentence.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Steady—Hogs Are Weak at American Markets.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—London cables for cattle are steady at 11½c to 12½c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¾c to 10½c per pound.

Toronto Junction Live Stock.

TORONTO JUNCTION, Oct. 5.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 44 carloads, composed of 881 cattle, 110 hogs, 334 sheep and lambs, and 22 calves.

Exporters.

Export steers sold from $4.50 to $5.15; bulls, at $3.50 to $4.15 per cwt. Only one load was reported at $5.15.

Butchers.

Prime picked butchers sold at $4.75 to $5; loads of good, at $4.60 to $4.80; medium, $4.15 to $4.40; common, at $3.60 to $4; cows, $2.75 to $3.50; canners, $1 to $2. More good butchers' cattle would have sold.

Feeders and Stockers.

Not many of either class on sale. Good, 1050 lb. steers were quoted by Mr. S. Halligan at $3.60 to $4; distillery bulls, $2.25 to $2.75.

Milkers and Springers.

James Armstrong & Son bought 17, which was all that was on sale, at $30 to $65 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts limited, and prices steady at $3 to $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Prices were firmer for lambs, at $4.00 to $4.85 per cwt.; sheep, steady, at $3 to $3.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Gunns, Limited, quoted selects, fed and watered, at the market, $6.50, and f.o.b. cars, at country points, $6.25.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—At the Montreal Stock Yards' West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 3 were 2931 cattle, 2100 sheep and lambs, 4123 hogs and 552 calves. The offerings this morning for local consumption consisted of 900 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 1160 hogs and 200 calves. Owing to the fact that the supply of cattle was over 400 head smaller than a week ago and the quality somewhat better, a stronger feeling prevailed in the market and prices show an advance of ⅛c per pound on all grades. On account of the cooler weather and the lower prices that have ruled for beef of late the consumption is steadily increasing and in consequence the demand from local and outside buyers was good and an active trade was done at the higher range of values. There was also some demand from exporters for the best beeves offered to complete shipments with. Cable advices from Liverpool to-day were stronger and noted an advance in prices of half cent per pound, as compared with a week ago, with trade firm. Choice beeves here sold at 4¾c to 5c; good, at 4¼c to 4½c; fair, at 3¾c to 4c; common, at 3¼c to 3½c, and inferior, at 2½c to 2¾c per lb. Owing to smaller receipts of lambs, the good general demand for the same, market is stronger and, altho prices show no actual change from a week ago, they have an upward tendency and unless supplies increase will no doubt go higher in the near future. A fairly active trade was done this morning, with sales of choice lots at 5c to 5¼c, and good, at 4½c to 4¾c per lb. The demand for sheep for export account was slow on account of the continued discouraging advices coming from the side and, according to prices that have realized for them of late, exporters state that choice sheep are not worth any more than 3¼c per lb. for shipping purposes, but they have not declined to this figure yet, as sales this morning were made for local account, 3¾c and the culls at 3¼c to 3½c per lb. The demand for calves was fair and as the offerings were small, prices ruled firm at from $3 to $10 each. There was no further change in the local hog situation, prices being about steady in spite of the recent sharp decline in values for Canadian bacon in the foreign markets. Supplies were fairly large, for which the demand was good and sales of selected lots were made at $7 and good at $3.50 to $6.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 5.—Cattle—Receipts, 3400 head; active and 10c to 15c higher; prime steers, $5.85 to $6.35; shipping, $5 to $5.75; butchers', $4.25 to $5.25; heifers, $3.50 to $5; cows, $2.75 to $4.35; bulls, $2.50 to $4.25; stockers and feeders, $3.25 to $4.50; stock heifers, $2.75 to $3; fresh cows and springers, active and $2 to $3 higher, $25 to $63.

Veals—Receipts, 1000 head; active and steady, $6 to $9.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 18,700 head; slow and 10c to 15c lower; heavy, $6.90 to $7.20; mixed, $6.75 to $7.10; yorkers, $6 to $6.90; pigs, $4 to $5.50; roughs, $5.50 to $6; stags, $4 to $4.75; dairies, $6 to $6.60; grassers, $5.60 to $6.60.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 15,000 head; active; ewes and mixed sheep, steady; others, 15c to 25c higher; lambs, $4 to $7.20; yearlings, $4.25 to $4.75; wethers, $4.25 to $4.50; ewes, $3.75 to $4.00; sheep, mixed, $1 to $4; Canada lambs, $6.50 to $6.75.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Cattle—Receipts, 32,000; market, generally 15c to 20c lower; steers, $4.40 to $7.75; cows, $3.25 to $5.25; heifers, $3 to $4.25; bulls, $2.50 to $4.50; calves, $3.50 to $8.50; stockers and feeders, $2.60 to $4.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 29,000; market, 10c to 15c lower; choice, heavy shipping, $6.90 to $7.05; butchers', $6.90 to $7.05; light mixed, $3.60 to $6.60; choice light, $3.60 to $6.80; packing, $6.30 to $6.60; pigs, $3.75 to $6; bulk of sales, $6.25 to $6.50.

Sheep—Receipts, 23,000; market, 25c higher; sheep, $4 to $4.60; lambs, $4.50 to $6.50; yearlings, $3.85 to $4.35.

THREE KILLED, TWO HURT.

rand Trunk Freight at Brantford Strikes Yard Engine.

Brantford, Oct. 7.—Three are dead d two seriously injured as the re lt of a collision on the Grand Trunk 8 a.m. yesterday on the Tillsonburg Brantford division west of Mount rnon.

Killed—Engineer Fralick, London; reman Cecil Burchell, London, and rdman Charles Rupple, Brantford. Injured—Engineer George Yapp, antford, Fireman Ernest J. Lewis, antford.

The cause of the accident was a lision between the Brantford yard gine and a special freight train und from Hamilton to Springford, d in charge of Conductor Winder, ndon. The yard engine was in arge of Engineer George Yapp and reman Lewis, Brantford.

The tender of the yard engine and boiler of the freight were piled h in the air in a disjointed mass, ile three flat cars attached to the ecial, loaded with piles, formed a n and wedged the two engines in a th-dealing grip.

Conductor Winder and two brake n were in a caboose at the end of freight at the time. They escaped hurt.

Engineer Fralick made a vain at pt to jump from the caboose after ning on brakes, but was too late.

Fireman Burchell also stuck to his t. He was found dead in front of at remained of his cabin, which piled up in front of the boiler r. Death had been instantaneous.

Meredith, K.C., for the defence, terday asked for, and was granted postponement of the trial on the unds of bringing important wit ses over from Scotland to prove Moir has been subject to epilep fits in his youth. The witnesses in stion are Moir's mother and sis and two Scotch doctors. An affi it by Dr. M. J. Robinson, super ndent of the London Asylum for Insane, showing that Moir had n subject to epileptic fits in 1905 also produced.

In an affidavit, on his own behalf, Moir, the accused, stated that he had been subject to epileptic fits since boyhood, and that he knew nothing beyond what had been told him of having committed any crime. Moir had further been informed by his counsel that he had been suffering from epilepsy at the time of his alleged crime.

GETS TWELVE YEARS.

Italian Burglar Who Fought Constables Is Heavily Punished.

Parry Sound, Oct. 7.—At the sittings of the Assize Court here yesterday Frank Sprano, an Italian, who recently attempted to shoot Provincial Constable Knight and District Constable Madigan, near Byng Inlet, while resisting arrest, was convicted of shooting with intent to commit murder and was sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment in the Manitoba penitentiary.

The prisoner, with three others, broke into a boarding-house kept by a Mrs. Eno, at Key Harbor, and stole $800. Three of them were arrested and broke jail. Sprano was working in a field near Byng Inlet and as the constables came out of the woods toward him he put up a stiff fight with a rifle.

License Vote In Connecticut.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 7.—The prohibition forces had a drawn battle with the liquor men in the town elections of Monday, the complexion of 168 towns remaining unchanged.

Nine towns went from no license to license. Nine others went from license to no-license.

This makes 97 town no-license to 71 license.

Limit to Skyscrapers.

New York, Oct. 7.—If the building code revision committee has its way, according to a resolution adopted yesterday, buildings in this city will be restricted to 300 feet in height, unless they face a park, square or plaza, when they may be built 350 feet high. An ordinance will be drawn containing these provisions.

Big Meeting At Brantford.

Mr. Borden Addresses 3,000 Persons In Waterloo Rink.

Col. Hugh Clark and Candidates Nunan and Cockshutt Appear on the Platform with Leader—Tariff Platform Same as in Sir John A.'s Time—Civil Service Reform Urgently Needed.

Brantford, Oct. 7.—R. L. Borden visited Brantford yesterday, and addressed an audience of about 3,000 people in the Waterloo Rink. The Conservative leader was accompanied only by Col. Hugh Clark.

The Conservative leader was met at the T., H. & B. depot by a number of prominent Conservatives and the 38th Regiment Band and taken to the Kerby House, where he held a reception. Afterwards he was driven around the city, visits being made to the Mohawk Indian Institute, the Brant monument, the Blind Institute and the armories.

Candidates J. P. Nunan and W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., spoke at the evening meeting.

When Mr. Borden was introduced almost the whole audience rose to cheer, and this was repeated when a little girl presented a bouquet.

Mr. Borden dealt with the tariff question. He doubted if there was a Liberal present who could define the policy of his party in respect to the tariff.

"The platform of the Conservative party is only an adaptation to the conditions and problems of to-day of the national policy upon which Sir John Macdonald swept the country in 1878," said Mr. Borden, "and we appeal to the people upon this issue with confidence in the result."

The Conservatives stood for civil service reform. The outside service should be brought within the new act. Officers of the Government, particularly of the Interior Department, had outrageously and wantonly violated the resolution of Parliament that civil servants should take no part in election matters and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Frank Oliver had practically, if not avowedly supported them. Officers of this Department were nothing more than machine heelers doing the work of party organizers.

"Therefore," said the chieftain, "any man who insults Parliament by outrageously and wantonly violating a principle laid down by a resolution of that body must do so at his own peril and he will have no word of complaint if he is dealt with as he deserves."

Col. Clark declared people were beginning to "get on" to the record of the Government. The Liberals were in a panic. At their opening meeting they had stolen the free rural mail delivery plank in the Conservative platform.

TELEGRAPH BRIEFS.

Brockville has a population of 9,117, an increase of 191 over 1907.

As a result of a dense fog there were several street car collisions in Montreal yesterday morning.

Rhode Island Democrats have named Olney Arnold of Providence for governor, and Adelard Archambault for lieutenant-governor.

Mrs. Robert Woodhull, the only woman timber inspector in Michigan, formerly of St. Thomas, Ont., died in Detroit, aged 62 years. She was the first woman editor in the state.

The Church of the Transfiguration in East Twenty-Ninth street, between Fifth and Madison avenues, New York City, popularly known as the "Little Church Around the Corner," observed with appropriate services its sixtieth birthday on Sunday.

Rivers Drying Up.

Parkersburg, W.Va., Oct. 7.—The continued drouth throughout this state is again becoming serious.

In some localities the conditions are such that the health of the community is in grave danger.

This is true in some sections near the smaller streams, where drying up is taking place to such an extent that fish are dying off by the thousands. In order if possible to prevent an epidemic of any kind, the dead fish are being buried.

Berlin's Population.

Berlin, Oct. 7.—Berlin's population as shown by assessors reports just completed is 13,278, an increase of 195 over last year, and in same assessment increased $277,126, bringing total up to $6,307,385.

Blood Price of Industry.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—During the month of August, according to reports received at the Labor Department, 320 people were seriously injured in industrial accidents in Canada, of whom 115 died.

Falls From Ladder.

Woodstock, Oct. 7.—At Thamesford, Thomas Newton, resident of the village for 25 years, fell from a ladder suspended from the roof and was killed.

HABITANTS GATHER.

Four Thousand at L'Islet Welcome Sir Wilfrid.

L'Islet, Que., Oct. 7.—Nearly 4,000 electors of this county welcomed Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his tour of this part of the province at an open-air meeting yesterday afternoon.

The meeting was held at the Intercolonial Railway station, which is nearly two miles from the village, and the Premier was met at the station by Mayor Cloutier of L'Islet and most of the male population of the village, headed by a brass band. Special trains were also run from Levis and Riviere du Loup, bringing in nearly 2,000.

The Premier was escorted to a temporary platform erected in front of one of the two stores at the station, and after a selection from the band Mayor Cloutier, the chairman, introduced J. B. T. Caron of Ottawa, the Liberal candidate, who spoke on the general policy of the Liberal party since 1896.

Mayor Cloutier then read an address of welcome to the Premier and a bouquet was handed to Sir Wilfrid by a red-sashed little girl.

When the Premier turned to reply he was given a great reception. Sir Wilfrid spoke for over an hour, devoting a large proportion of his speech to a defence of the Government's immigration policy, which had been attacked in the House last session by Dr. Paquet, the sitting Conservative member for L'Islet.

Sir Wilfrid said that the Government had introduced over a million new citizens into the west, whose needs gave employment to the industries of the east.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux spoke for an hour with a sketch of the history of the Liberal party from the time of Baldwin and Lafontaine.

At the close of the meeting the Premier was escorted to the train by the band and given a cheer as the train pulled out for Quebec.

NIAGARA RECORD GROWS.

Unknown Woman Kills Herself, Making Twelve Since July 1.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Oct. 7.—About 7 o'clock yesterday morning a woman about six feet tall, wearing a black hat, long black coat, black shoes and spectacles and of sallow complexion, appeared in the reservation here acting strangely and tried to cross over the bridge to Goat Island, but was stopped by a policeman who informed her that the island was not open to visitors until 8 o'clock.

About 8 o'clock she walked towards Prospect Point. Officers started after her, but before they reached her she passed under the railing and leaped from the bank into the American Falls.

This is the twelfth suicide here since July 1.

ROUNDING-UP FIRE-BUGS.

Provincial Detective Reburn Makes Arrests In Eastern Ontario.

Almonte, Oct. 7.—Provincial Detective Reburn has been clearing up some incendiary cases in Eastern Ontario.

On Sunday he arrested Aaron Bulger, son of a farmer near here, for having set fire seven times since July 12 to the timber on the land of an adjoining farm. It was spite work against the farmer, who had recently bought the place. Bulger was yesterday committed for trial.

Detective Reburn also arrested W. F. McBain, a farmer, in Lancaster Township, for setting fire to his son's barns on Sept. 3. McBain was sent for trial by a Cornwall magistrate.

Shoots His Young Son.

Fredericton, N.B., Oct. 7.—At the hospital, Ned Clements Lyons, the five-year-old son of Archie Lyons of Doaktown, is lying at the point of death as the result of a bullet received from his father's gun while the latter was showing a friend the weapon, not knowing it was loaded. A critical operation was performed by doctors in an effort to remove the bullet.

Crushed by Car.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—Crossing before an east-bound car on Arthur street at Euclid avenue yesterday afternoon, Dr. Alexander K. Ferguson, 700 Bathurst street, fell from his bicycle and was fatally crushed under the front wheels of the car. He died half an hour later, while being hurried to his home in a private ambulance.

The Ward System.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—At the request of many large property owners we again organized the Belleville Municipal Rights League. We wish to intimate that originally we had about four hundred members, many of which communicated valuable information regarding city affairs. Any citizen who wishes to become a member has only to record his name with the President, together with his views on city matters, and they will be published. The effort now being made to secure the Ward System is in accord with our views, as well as with all property holders who have the welfare of the city at heart. The more we examine the past records of eleven men the more we find to condemn. The Gas Holder Fiasco, is shelved for the present and will not, perhaps, be again in evidence until we have a government investigation of the past financeering of the city. Information has been placed before us regarding the new Isolation Hospital which was to cost $9300. Owing to defective plans and specifications, which promised a fatality, we understand extra charges will be made for supports to the walls, etc. We are curious to know the architect employed by our City Clerk to draw plans for a building that would have been a death trap. Under the Ward System we always had competent builders to advise on such matters. The Isolation Hospital is now open to criticism, and a competent builder has examined the building and placed the estimate of cost, allowing $5.00 a day for his own work in bossing the job, and $500 net profit, at $5500; the contract price $93000—showing $4300 of our taxes squandered. Further information shows a party at Stirling contracted for the wood work and he sublet to a party here at profit. The brick work and plastering was let to a contractor here. We have heard of log rolling in the Council. Does this savor of log rolling by some of the members of last year's council. Perish such thoughts! You wrong the dear fellows, indeed you do! They are dear fellows and like Caesar's wife are above suspicion and above reproach. A new member of the Council, who has had some experience in building, stated last spring he had no doubt a private citizen could have had such a building put up for $7000, but it seemed to him anything for the city costs about 35 per cent. more than for a private person. We may later discuss the character of the building and the material in it. In the meantime let us conjure all good citizens and particularly our workingmen to hasten and sign the ward system petitions, as we have only till Saturday to complete the work.

Yours, etc.,
The Belleville Municipal Rights League.
L. Holly, President.
C. Lavis, Secretary.

Ames Picture Story Took Well at Picton.

Paid a High Tribute to Mr. Alcorn, the Able Bill-Framer of the Opposition.

Picton, Oct. 6.—Mr. H. B. Ames, M. P., and his picture story of the scandals associated with "our Western heritage," and the loose methods of the Laurier Government in the administering and letting of tenders, was well received in Picton last night.

"Well, there is no getting around the convicting evidence as shown there," the expressed opinion of one in the audience of more than two hundred of the electorate who filled the Opera House, seemed the general conviction.

Mr. Ames tells his story so thoroughly and his facts are so stubborn that every word he said was listened to with unabated interest throughout the two hours that the lecture lasted. Every one remained and cheered the finish. In introductory remarks Mr. Ames bore tribute to Mr. G. O. Alcorn, the Conservative candidate, who was on the platform. He termed Mr. Alcorn the able bill-framer of the Opposition.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

THE MUSIC STUDY CIRCLE'S CONCERT.

There was hardly a vacant chair in the Conservatory of Music hall last night, when the Music Study Circle gave its first concert. But the audience was nearly all ladies. With the exception of two gentlemen on the programme there were only two lonesome-looking male creatures in the hall. And that was where the male music-lovers missed their cue, for a more enjoyable little exposition of good music was never given by home talent in this city. Everything was bright and cleverly done, and the audience made their adieux at 9.30. The promoters of last evening's concert are to be congratulated not only on the excellence of last night's programme, but on its reasonable length. Too much of a good thing never yet failed to pall on even the most enthusiastic listener. Last night's programme opened with a piano duet, "Valse Caprice," Nevin, brilliantly played by the Misses Lavoie. Mr. E. V. Ilsey sang Adams' pretty song "Asthore," in a highly pleasing way. Miss Maysel Stork gave the perennial "Silver Ring," by Chaminade, in admirable style, and also a dainty little gem, "The Birth of Morn," by Leoni, which was delightful. Miss Stork shows marked improvement in recent years. Mrs. MacColl followed with a paper descriptive of music she had heard while on her recent visit to England. It was excellently written and listened to with pleasure. Mrs. MacColl was fortunate enough to hear recitals, symphony concerts, grand opera and comic opera, but what seemed to have pleased her most was the grand cathedral music of England. She heard, in London, Miss Edith Miller, well known in this city, in concert. Miss Miller is winning fame and fortune in London. Following Mrs. MacColl came Miss Winifred Allen, who played Heller's "Restless Nights," for piano, in a way which showed that young lady's musical future to be full of promise. Mr. Cameron sang "The Sands o' Dee" with fine taste and expression. Miss Mabel Ackerill played two piano numbers, Schumann's "Davidsbundler No. 2," and Chopin's Valse in A flat. Miss Ackerill showed clever execution and considerable magnetism in the Schumann number. Miss Moon sang "Daffodils a-Blowing," from the German, showing uncommon range and brilliancy of style. Miss Laura Lavoie played a Schumann march with exceeding cleverness, and Mesdames Campbell and MacColl followed with a violin and piano duo, Beethoven's First Movement, which was a brilliant exposition of technically difficult music. Mrs. MacColl showed that there is little in the way of "position" playing she does not know. The programme closed with a piano duet by Misses Milburn and Emberson, Schubert's Polonaise, opus 61, which was a dashing and effective number. The concert as a whole showed that Belleville possesses its full share (if not more) of capable and cultivated musicians.

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

This remarkable play, which comes to the Carman next Thursday night, was first produced at the Criterion Theatre in London, Eng., April 6th, 1899, making an instant and striking success, and ran to enormous business until the end of the season. It was revived on Jan. 29th, 1902, when the press greeted it with renewed enthusiasm. Mr. Ganthony, who will play the role originally played by Sir Charles Wyndham, in London, and Mr. John Drew, in New York, is one of the cleverest playwrights of modern times.

Prices 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1. Plan open Wednesday morning.

The Globe's Opinion of Laurier and His Supporters.

The Globe, in its furious attempts to discredit Mr. Borden and the Conservative party, gives utterance to the following:

> "Mr. Borden makes open confession of the weakness and incapacity of his supporters in the House of Commons and his candidates in this election, in that he goes to the Premiers and Ministers in the Provincial Governments for his chief help in the campaign. The effect of this revelation of incapacity on their part or of distrust on his own must be more damaging to Mr. Borden's cause than any assault the Liberals could make upon it."

If this paragraph had been written by a novice in the editorial chair he would not only have been dismissed, but sent to the pillary to be spanked for having so exposed the "weakness" of Sir Wilfrid and the "incapacity" of the 60 Liberal supporters who have been at his "beck and nod" for years in the House of Commons.

If it be a "weakness" on the part of Mr. Borden to call to his aid the Provincial Premiers in the contest now raging, what are we to term the conduct of Sir Wilfrid in seeking and receiving the aid of all the Liberal Provincial Premiers in 1896? Was such a course in 1896 heroism in Liberals and "weakness" in 1908 in Conservatives? Has the castigation administered to the editor by Mr. Roblin rendered him incapable of realizing the position in which he has placed his leader? Is such action the result of presuming upon his readers' ignorance and loss of memory of past events, or does he suppose they are as reckless as himself?

If, again, the utilizing of these Premiers in the present contest by Mr. Borden is evidence of the paucity of talent and administrative ability in the Conservative ranks, what has this reverend logician to say of the sixty Liberal members who sit in the House of Commons? If his theory be founded on fact, with what a congregation of incapables must Sir Wilfrid have been surrounded for the past twelve years, having, as he has had to do, when a portfolio had to be filled, to seek in the ranks of the party outside of Parliament a colleague?

No doubt the 60 Liberals who support Sir Wilfrid in the Commons appreciate the character given them by the Globe; for if that journal's reasoning has any force, it simply means that Laurier, having to seek colleagues outside Parliament, there are none to be found in Parliament.

Gentlemen, put the opinion the Globe has of you in your pipe and smoke it.

DO YOU EAT RIGHT

FEW PEOPLE IN BELLEVILLE REALLY KNOW HOW.

Slow eating and regular meals is of great benefit to a wrong acting stomach. Those who suffer with indigestion and weak stomach can with care and the use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets restore the digestion to a healthy condition, so that they can eat what they want at any time without fear of distress or suffering.

After a few days' use of Mi-o-na stomach tablets, the headaches, dizzy feeling, drowsiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, flatulence, sleeplessness, distress after eating—all these symptoms of a weak stomach—will disappear, and perfect digestion and good health will be restored.

J. S. McKeown has so much confidence in the power of Mi-o-na to cure indigestion that he guarantees satisfaction or money back. Price 50 cents.

The average age at death of people who die by accident is 35 1-2 years.

Horseflesh commands a lower price in Arizona than elsewhere.

Love is a dream and the wise man is one who manages to keep from being awakened.

The signal-box at the Crewe, Eng., station is the largest in the world and contains 492 electric pneumatic levers.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION--GOOD REPORTS PRESENTED

The twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Association of this city was held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended by members of the noble band of workers.

Mrs. F. H. Yeomans, President, occupied the chair and opened the proceedings by reading a portion of Scripture. Mrs. MacKay offered up an appropriate prayer.

The various reports presented detailed minutely the work of the Association for the past year. A synopsis of them is given below.

RECORDING SECRETARY'S REPORT

The Recording Secretary's report was a lengthy document, detailing the work of the Association for the past year and the outlook for the future. In speaking of the Hospital the report said it continues to grow in favor, and a number of patients have been denied admission from time to time owing to lack of accommodation. The building is no longer large enough to meet the demands, and it is most important that the coming year should see the much wished for new wing built.

The Home for the Friendless has for some time been in need of repairs and improvements.

The work among the city poor has received faithful attention by the ward visitors. Two valued workers, Mrs. M. J. Hendrick and Mrs. J. H. Ward, resigned owing to change of residence, and their loss is regretted.

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE.

A resolution of condolence was unanimously adopted by the Association touching the death of the late Mr. C. P. Holton, who was a valued member of the Advisory Board. His influence was always on the side of right.

TWO BEQUESTS.

The Association gratefully acknowledges, during the past year, two bequests, namely, $400 from the Knox estate and $18.46 from the Stewart estate, also the sum of $683.37 from the Entertainment Committee.

HOSPITAL REPORT.

Number of city patients treated in Hospital, 55, of whom 20 were Canadians, 27 English, 4 Irish, 3 Scotch, 1 U. S. One hundred and thirty families have been helped, either with food or fuel, 50 of them being immigrants. Mr. H. Corby's gift of $300 was much appreciated.

The greatest need for the coming winter is work of some kind, for all the poor people say "Give us work, we do not want charity."

HOSPITAL BOARD REPORT.

The report of the Hospital Board, a lengthy one, refers to the public meeting held in the City Hall last December, at which bondsmen were secured for $10,000 and subscriptions amounting to $3,000 given for extension of the hospital. Some improvements have been made and others are contemplated.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers has been postponed until a meeting to be held on Tuesday afternoon next.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

CURLING.

Local Club Elects Officers.

Last evening a meeting of Curling club members was held in Mr. J. A. Kerr's office, Campbell street, which was well attended. The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows:

Patrons—E. G. Porter, ex-M.P., J. W. Johnson, M.P.P.

Patronesses—Mrs. E. G. Porter, Mrs. J. W. Johnson.

President—B. Iler.

Vice-President—J. A. Kerr.

Sec.-Treas.—H. P. Thomas.

Managing Committee — A. P. Allen, F. Dolan, E. Ketcheson, A. McGie and F. Quick.

Ice Committee — J. A. Kerr, P. Forin, J. S. Cook and B. Iler.

Auditors — J. D. Clarke and T. Thomson.

SPORTING NOTES.

Detroit won the American League pennant, finishing four points ahead of Cleveland, with Chicago five points behind them.

The Board of Directors of the National League decided the disputed New York-Chicago game a tie and ordered it played over. This means that, no matter if New York lost to Boston to-day they would still have a chance with Chicago. The tie game will be played off to-morrow, and whichever club wins it will have the rag.

Deaths.

GALLAGHER — Died at Belleville on Oct. 7, 1908, Margaret Gallagher, wife of James Gallagher, aged 40 years.

The funeral will take place from her late residence, Canifton Road, on Friday, Oct. 9, at 8.15 a.m., to St. Michael's church, thence to St. James' Cemetery for interment.

ENVELOPES — Bond, Laid, Wove or Manilla, sizes 7 and 8, printed with your business address, from $1.25 to $3.00 per 1000. A large range of business and calling cards—ladies' and gentlemen's — all prices, Menu Cards, Toast Lists, Invitations, Programmes and all kinds of printing at most reasonable rates, at The Intelligencer Job Department.

SOME QUEER TRADES.

"Smellers" and Professional Best Man Are Found in London.

Few people are aware of the existence of some novel occupations out of which many an enterprising man is making a lucrative living. One of the queerest of these, given in a recent London directory, is that of the expert "smeller." Scent-makers need someone with a very delicate sense of smell to aid them in blending the ingredients of perfumes in proper proportions. Queen Alexandra's favorite perfume—violets—costs £10 per ounce bottle, and in order that it may be correctly blended before it is passed for Her Majesty's use, it has to run the gauntlet of five professional "smellers" from £5 to £6 weekly, and they are insured against cold and the loss of their sense of smell. Contractors for the lighting of streets, large public buildings, and pleasure-grounds often employ "smellers" to trace escapes of gas, 1s. being the sum paid for every leakage reported.

Another occupation which is distinctly prominent on the register of Mr. Chesterton's Club of "Queer Trades" is that of acting as "best man" at weddings. He is in great demand during this season of the year, and on account of this he is classed with the minister, and his fee is not fixed. Sometimes he secures as much as £5 at a single wedding, besides a handsome present from the bridegroom. But in the majority of cases he is not nearly so fortunate, and his usual fee may be classed at about £2 2s. At this rate he makes more than enough to yield him a fair income. He must be suave, adroit, nimble-witted, and patient. He never gets rattled, never allows the groom to commit any glaring error, and keeps a watchful eye upon the bride and her maids to see that everything passes off in proper style. Then, if his engagement extends to entertaining the guests at the luncheon or party afterwards, he must be able to sing and dance, be conversant with the latest of card games, and reply to many of the speeches on behalf of his clients.

HUGE SUCCESSION TAX.

Estate of Late Lord Derby Must Pay Two and a Half Millions.

The will of the sixteenth Earl of Derby, K.G., formerly Governor-General of Canada, who died on June 14 last, has been proved, the total value of his estate, both real and personal, being estimated at close on $19,000,000. More than $2,500,000 will be paid in death duties on the estate in accordance with the rate introduced by Mr. Asquith in the Budget before last, under which ten per cent. is paid on the first million, and 15 per cent. on the remaining three and three-quarter millions in English pounds sterling. The late earl had seats at Knowsley, Prescot; Holwood in Kent; Witherslack, near Grange, over Lands Lancashire, and Fairhill, near Torbridge, with the town residence at Derby House, St. James square, London. The personal estate has been sworn at $4,461,745 gross, and $3,760,675 net. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars are left to the earl's widow, and one hundred thousand dollars to the trustees of the settlements made on each of his younger children in his life time. Other legacies include two months' wages to each servant for every year of service. The residue of the estate is given to the present Earl of Derby absolutely, who were better known as Lord Stanley, who held the Postmaster-Generalship in the late Balfour administration.

Didn't Marry Family.

The story is told anent South Sea marriages of white traders to native girls that one man gave a magnificent feast to some score or so of his native wife's relatives on the occasion of the wedding. These relatives are famous for their propensity to live at the expense of the newly-allied white man. At what we might call the coffee and liqueur stage, he left the scene, to reappear a moment later with a particularly formidable double-barrelled gun in the crook of his arm. "You have had your feast, and now I know you, every one," said the trader, "and if any mother's son of you crosses my threshold again I'll let daylight through him good and quick. Good-bye, all!"

Cards Cut From Deerhide.

A remarkable collection of nearly 600 packs of playing-cards of all ages and all nations has been presented to the Company of Makers of Playing-Cards. The collection includes English cards illustrating proverbs, heraldry, fortune-telling, and items of topical interest. The Indian are the most interesting in the collection. Cut from what is presumably deerhide, the forty skin cards used by the Canadian Sioux Indian are weirdly attractive. The pack contains four suits: butterflies, fish, sticks, and annular ornaments. For the game of "Gunjfa," the Hindu made use of 120 circular cards, which are hand-painted and lacquered.

A Knight Bellringer.

Southwold, Eng., possesses a charming little church, which dates from a very early year. At the east end of the church, just before the chancel is entered, a figure may be observed standing in the wall. This figure represents a knight who, on the stroke of eleven, rings a bell by a movement of his arm. The motion of the arm is caused by an official pulling a rope in the vestry. The sudden ring, coming immediately before the service, gives many visitors no small fright.

Porter Substitute For Milk.

At a meeting of the Limerick, Ireland, Guardians recently the master reported that in consequence of a deadlock between the board and the milk contractors he had to give the inmates porter as a substitute. A heated discussion followed.

When they are come, my spirit finds
Freedom to lose itself in space,
Yearning the winds to keep apace.

Month of a thousand falling leaves—
 Tinted by Nature's master skill—
 Long have I gazed across the hill,
Craving the joys my heart receives
When you have come to be with me
Season of woodland gayety.

Month of a thousand mystic dreams,
 Tinged by the leaves of red and gold—
 What is the magic spell you hold?
Is the charm less than what it seems
Ah, 'tis a secret passing strange—
We are so fickle-fond of change!

Still they go. Adamson, who represented Humboldt, Alta., in the Commons during the last Parliament, has retired from the contest. He was the hero of the Saskatchewan land deal, out of which hundreds of thousands of dollars were coralled. He is following Fraser, of Ottawa. It is a good sign of an improvement in public sentiment when these grafters have to retire into private life. Let the Government follow, and all will be well.

Prohibition is making rapid progress in the United States. Arkansas has, by a majority of 12,000, affirmed the principle. If that were in Canada, Laurier with his prohibition colleague, Fisher, would declare that is not sufficient to justify putting the will of the people into force. That was the Laurier policy when prohibition had over 15,000 majority in its favor, and the Grit prohibitionists sustained him.

Thus far this year American saloons have been closed at the rate of thirty a day. In ten months five whole States have abolished the bar. On Jan. 1st, 1909, 38,000,000 people will reside in no-license territory, as compared with 6,000,000 ten years ago.

Romance of a Diamond King.

The well-known South African mine-owner and millionaire, Mr. Joseph Benjamin Robinson, who is included in the list of new baronets, owes his wealth partly to chance and partly to his capacity for seizing opportunities. Forty years ago he was a sharp youth of nineteen, engaged in rearing horses, cattle, and sheep. Then came the discovery of diamond diggings on the Vaal river, and he was quick to try his 'prentice hand in diamond dealing at the fields. When the Kimberley mines were discovered three years later he was already looked upon as a capitalist. Then Transvaal gold began to be talked about, the first ore being brought down from Witwatersrand and panned at Kimberley in 1886. The next day—a Sunday—Mr. Robinson was off by coach. So, too, were others, but they went on to Barberton—or "De Kaap"—which was then booming. Fortune tempted Mr. Robinson to alight at Potchefstroom, and proceed by cart to Witwatersrand, where three days later he bought the Langlaagte estate, the mine which is now the largest gold producer in the world. For the last ten years Mr. Robinson has resided mostly in England, his residence in Park Lane—Dudley House—being one of the most magnificent in London.

Chinese In Jamaica.

During the last three years 1,100 Chinamen have come to Jamaica. When, three years ago, this immigration first commenced, the Chinese came in batches of twenty and thirty, whereas they are now coming in batches of ninety and one hundred. In other words, the number of the immigrants has been rapidly and steadily increasing; the first lot came to spy out the fatness of the land, and the others have followed to reap it.—Daily Gleaner, Jamaica.

King Edward's Lucky Number.

The King's lucky number is nine. Both his parents were born in 1819, he was born on a 9th, his marriage took place in the year '63, which numbers added the one to the other make nine; his reign commenced in 1901, he was to have been crowned on the 27th, which figures added, together make nine, and he was actually crowned on the 9th of August.

Human Nature.

An old maid's love affairs of her youth grow big in proportion to her years. By the time she is fifty she thinks she was the most popular girl in town and tries to make every other one believe she was once beautiful and attractive.

A woman wonders why her next door neighbor does not punish her child for putting his sticky fingers on her porch chairs, while she will allow her own child to jump unmolested on her neighbor's flower beds.

GARDEN NOTES.

Some Late Summer Work Apt to Be Neglected.

The most important point now in the culture of good vegetables of any kind is to see that they keep growing freely. Good quality is always absent from vegetables that are stunted and grow slowly during hot weather. They are tough and stringy instead of tender when cooked, while salads are never crisp and nice under the circumstances. One of the plants that need a great deal of water is celery. The young plants should now be growing freely, and happy is the grower who has a good water supply and can run the hose into the trenches at will and keep the roots always moist. Celery, with the roots in a cool, moist soil, is independent of the weather, and, no matter how hot the sun, it will grow rapidly, the leaves soon spreading out and forming a fine shade for the roots. Where this convenience is not at hand and watering by hand has to be resorted to, the job is herculean if much celery is grown, but it must be attended to until the plants are strong enough to take care of themselves. The grower who uses plenty of decayed manure in his trenches, as we advise, will be reaping the benefit now in the healthy, strong growth of the plants.

Potatoes need a lot of cultivating now, and until finally banked up they must be kept hoed frequently. The potato bug is never so destructive in plots well cultivated, though of course spraying should be followed up for these and for fungoid diseases. As the early rows are lifted, late cabbage and coleworts may be planted or, in localities favorable for their growth, Savoy cabbages and the various kales for winter use. There is still time even for leeks, though those transplanted now will not be so large as those put out earlier. They will, however, be very useful for soups and flavoring. Where good lettuces are desired, thin the rows early and again when the thinnings are large enough for use. They will not do as well now transplanted unless very carefully looked after, and it is best to sow thinly where they have to stand, preferably in a shaded or partially shaded border.

Late tomatoes are having a good time, the warm, dry weather suiting them well if the plants are kept right at the roots and well cultivated. The early plants are getting well set with fruit, and as this begins to swell freely the plants may be fed and watered a little more liberally. Keep a sharp lookout for the side shoots and pinch them out regularly, as they take the strength away from the flower and fruit clusters. As the stems grow secure them to stakes or wires, whichever is most convenient, so they will not be blown about by high winds.

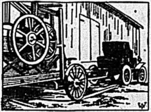
Cucumbers outside are beginning to fruit, and the vines must not suffer for lack of nutriment. Continue to pinch the points of the shoots of the young plants where they have not a sufficient number of vines, and as the fruits develop cut them when quite young. A few cucumbers left to go to seed will take more out of the vines than a large crop cut as soon as ready. Where shallots are fully grown they may be pulled and laid in the sun to dry, but let them have another week or two if not ready. Continue to feed the onions as long as they are growing and draw out at once any attacked by maggot or mildew.

AUTO POWER IN FARMING.

The Ingenious Device of a Connecticut Farmer.

An enterprising farmer, E. C. Belden of Suffolk, Conn., uses his automobile to drive farm machinery. The illustration shows the auto in position and connected with one of the farm machines. He uses it quite extensively for driving a wood saw.

The wheels are blocked to keep the machine steady, using sticks of wood or making small holes in the ground into which the wheels are set. To connect with the machine Mr. Belden made an extension for the crank shaft. The extension has a flange with holes for cap screws, which are threaded into the hub of the balance wheel, the balance wheel being on the end of the crank shaft in this type of automobile. Other styles of autos might require different methods of connection.



AUTO POWER ON THE FARM.

The machine as arranged makes a very convenient addition to the farm equipment, being available either for travel or for farm power or for a combination when work is to be done in locations some distance from the farm.

Most Useful Tree.

The carnahuba palm of Brazil is said to be the world's most useful tree. It gives to the people of that country everything from drugs to cattle feed. Its roots make a valuable medicine—a blood purifier. Its timber takes a high polish and is in demand by cabinetmakers. The sap becomes wine or vinegar, according to the way it is prepared, and sugar and starch may also be made from the sap. The fruit of the tree is used as cattle food, and a nut it bears is a fairly good substitute for coffee. From the pith of the tree corks are made.

JEWESSES IN ENGLAND.

Are Foremost In Every Intellectual and Artistic Pursuit.

It is interesting to note that Jewish women in England have been among the foremost in every intellectual and artistic pursuit, while in domestic life they have always been recognized as pre-eminent. Many great London hostesses, many talented wives of English statesmen, are Jewesses, and in philanthropy their work is very valuable. "The Jewess of stage and literature and life," says a writer in The Lady's Realm, "has always commanded honor, esteem, admiration. Intellect she has, and esprit, and as for chic, says Zangwill, your Yiddish girl possesses it in a degree which among Christians is the birthright of a few actresses and music hall artistes—themselves probably of Semitic origin. And more than probably in the case of Madame Rachel, who began by selling oranges and singing at cafes, and ended by being feted right royally even at the Imperial Palace of St. Petersburg; and also in the case of Sarah Bernhardt, for her stage brilliancy is probably due to the half that is Hebrew. Turning to Jewesses in our midst, the public does not often number among its favorites such a group of relatives as Miss Julia Neilson, Miss Hilda Hanbury (sister of the late Lily Hanbury), Eileen Kerin and Nora Kerin, the last named, who studied at Paris and Queen's College, Harley street, declaring to the writer that they were all stage-struck whilst still in the nursery, where they acted their own tiny plays. Not to mention Miss Marie Dainton and Ada Reeve, Mrs. Lewis Waller and Mrs. Clement Scott, sisters, are Jewesses. Miss Irene Vanbrugh and Violet Vanbrugh admit a Jewish strain, though far off; Mrs. Brown-Potter is the granddaughter of a Spanish Jewess. And here one may say anent the Jewess of the stage that her influence on it is wholly good, for, like Caesar's wife, a Jewess must be above reproach.

"But if one were asked to name the virtue pre-eminently which Jew and Jewess exercise in their relation toward the world, it would be philanthropy or benevolence. Montefiore and Mocatta have been and are names almost synonymous with those words, and we know what the late Mrs. Sam Lewis did with her millions, remembering even the telegraph boys, newspaper lads, and policemen at the dangerous crossing. Happily, Mrs. Bischoffsheim, la grande dame of philanthropy, is still with us, though her husband, who has given an excellent street ambulance system, did not long survive their golden wedding, which they celebrated by the distribution of £10,000 to Gentile and Jewish charities."

ARISTOCRATIC NUNS.

British Peerage Has Several Fair and Noble Recluses.

The Duke of Norfolk has two sisters who are nuns; Lady Minna Howard belongs to the Carmelite Order and Lady Etheldreda is a Sister of Charity. Lady Edith Fielding, sister to Lord Denbigh, is another Sister of Charity, and spends her days at a convent in Kiou-Kiang, which is in China, as its name indicates. Lady Cristina Bandini, daughter of our Scotch-Italian peer, Lord Newburgh, is a nun in a French convent; and Lady Leopoldina Keppel in a nun of the Sacred Heart, in spite of the fact that she is sister of a Protestant peer, Lord Albemarle.

Then, Miss Mary and Miss Edith Clifford, sister of Lord Clifford of Chudleigh, are both nuns, as are Miss Cicely Arundell, sister to Lord Arundell, and Miss Leonie Dormer, sister to Lord Dormer. Lord Ffrench, who lives in Johannesburg, has two sisters who are nuns; three Misses Petre, sisters of Lord Petre, are nuns; Lord Herries has no fewer than four sister who live in convents; and, as for Lord Trimlestown, an Irish peer and eighteenth baron, history seems uncertain as to whether four or five of his sisters are nuns, as several of these ladies have not been raised to the rank of baron's daughters. In by-gone days there were four sisters of a one-time Lord Camoys who had taken the veil, but most of these ladies are now no more.

A Laughing Philosopher.

The Earl of Sandwich, whose great-nephew has been sponsored by the German Emperor, was once described as a "laughing philosopher." He is a man of parts, a musician, an architect, a connoisseur in art, and a great traveler. He has never married, but shows a marked liking for children, and keeps about a hundred, mostly the sons of soldiers, in a house on his estate, called St. Edward's Home. At the time of the Boer War he turned his country place, Hinchingbrooke, into a convalescent hospital for wounded officers. The humorous side of his nature is sometimes shown in curious fashion. For instance, during the bicycle craze, he used to walk about the streets of Huntingdon with a bicycle bell, which he rang incessantly in order to warn unwary pedestrians of their possible danger. For his charitable deeds he has received from King Edward the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

The State and the Crystal Palace.

A movement has been organized to obtain state aid for the Crystal Palace. The Lord Mayor has taken the matter in hand, and a public meeting is to be held to consider the project. It is stated that an initial grant of £100,000 and an annual subsidy of £12,000 would be required. The Crystal Palace, which has labored under financial difficulties for some years, is considered to be a national institution, and Lord Brassey, among others, favors a Government grant.

London on Canvas.

By permission of Archbishop Bourne, Mr. Louis Weirter, R.B.A., has converted the top of the lofty campanile of Westminster Cathedral into a sort of studio, from which he is painting an immense picture of London, measuring 20 feet by 12 feet, as seen from that lofty view-point.

"I think I'll try him with a little brandy," said Trendon and sent for the liquor.

Barnett raised the patient while the surgeon held the glass to his lips. The man's hand rose, wavered and clasped the glass.

"All right, my friend. Take it yourself, if you like," said Trendon.

The fingers closed. Tremulously held, the little glass tilted and rattled against the teeth. There was one deep, eager spasm of swallowing. Then the fevered eyes opened upon the face of the Wolverine's first officer.

"Prosit, Barnett," said the man in a voice like the rasp of rusty metal.

The navy man straightened up as from a blow under the jaw.

"Be careful what you are about," warned Trendon, addressing his superior officer sharply, for Barnett had all but let his charge drop. His face was a puckered mask of amaze and incredulity.

"Did you hear him speak my name—or am I dreaming?" he half whispered.

"Heard him plain enough. Who is he?"

The man's mouth closed, but he smiled a little—a singular, wry mouthed, winning smile. With that there sprung from behind the brush of beard, filling out the deep lines of emaciation, a memory to the recognition of Barnett—a keen and gay countenance that whisked him back across seven years time to the days of Dewey and the Philippines.

"Ralph Slade, by the Lord!" he exclaimed.

"Of the Laughing Lass?" cried Trendon.

"Of the Laughing Lass."

Such a fury of eagerness burned in the face of Barnett that Trendon cautioned him. "See here, Mr. Barnett, you're not going to fire a broadside of disturbing questions at my patient yet awhile. He's in no condition."

But it was from the other that the questions came. Opening his eyes he whispered: "The sailor? Where?"

"Dead," said Trendon bluntly. Then, breaking his own rule of repression, he asked:

"Did he come off the schooner with you?"

"Picked him up," was the straining answer. "Drifting."

The survivor looked around him, then into Barnett's face, and his mind, too, traversed the years.

"North Dakota?" he queried.

"No. I've changed my ship," said Barnett. "This is the Wolverine."

"Where's the Laughing Lass?"

Barnett shook his head.

"Tell me," begged Slade.

"Wait till you're stronger," admonished Trendon.

"Can't wait," said the weak voice. The eyes grew wild.

"Mr. Barnett, tell him the bare outline and make it short," said the surgeon.

"We sighted the Laughing Lass two days ago. She was in good shape—deserted—that is, we thought she was deserted."

The man nodded eagerly.

"I suppose you were aboard," said Barnett, and Trendon made a quick gesture of impatience and rebuke.

"No," said Slade. "Left three—four—don't know how many nights ago."

The officers looked at each other. "Go on," said Trendon to his companion.

"We put a crew aboard in command of an ensign," continued Barnett, "and picked up the schooner the next night, deserted. You must know about it. Where is Billy Edwards?"

"Never heard of him," whispered the other.

"Ives and McGuire, then. They were there after— Great God, man!" he cried, his agitation breaking out. "Pull yourself together! Give us something to go on."

"Mr. Barnett," said the surgeon peremptorily.

But the suggestion was working in the sick man's brain. He turned to the officers a face of horror.

"Your man. Edwards—the crew—they left her? In the night?"

"What does he mean?" cried Barnett.

"The light! You saw it?"

"Yes. We saw a strange light," answered Trendon soothingly. Slade half rose. "Lost! All lost!" he cried and fell back unconscious. Trendon exploded into curses. "See what you've done to my patient," he fumed. Barnett looked at him with contrite eyes.

"Better get out before he comes to," growled the surgeon. "Nice way to treat a man half dead of exhaustion."

It was nearly an hour before Slade came back to the world again. The doctor forbade him to attempt speech. But of one thing he would not be denied. There was a struggle for utterance, then:

"The volcano?" he rasped out.

"Dead ahead," was the reply.

"Stand by!" gasped Slade. He strove to rise, to say something further, but endurance had reached its limit. The man was utterly done.

Dr. Trendon went on deck, his head sunk between his shoulders. For a minute he was in earnest talk with the captain. Presently the Wolverine's engines slowed down and she lay head to the waves, with just enough turn of the screw to hold her against the seaway.

CHAPTER VII.

BY the following afternoon Dr. Trendon reported his patient as quite recovered.

"Starved for water," proffered the surgeon. "Tissues fairly dried out. Soaked him up. Fed him broth. Put him to sleep. He's all right. Just wakes up to eat. Then off again like a two-year-old. Wonderful constitution."

"The gentleman wants to know if he can come on deck, sir," saluted an orderly.

"Waked up, eh? Come on, Barnett. Help me boost him on deck."

The two officers disappeared to return in a moment arm in arm with Ralph Slade.

Nearly twenty-four hours' rest and skillful treatment had done wonders. He was still a trifle weak and uncertain, was still a little glad to lean on the arms of his companions, but his eye was bright and alert and his hollow cheeks mounted a slight color. This, with the clothes lent him by Barnett, transformed his appearance and led Captain Parkinson to congratulate himself that he had not obeyed his first impulse to send the castaway forward with the men.

The officers pressed forward.

"Mighty glad to see you out." "Hope you've got your pins under you again." "Old man, I'm mighty glad we came along."

The chorus of greeting was hearty enough, but the journalist barely paid the courtesy of acknowledgment. His eye swept the horizon eagerly until it rested on the cloud of volcanic smoke billowing up across the setting sun. A sigh of relief escaped him.

"Where are we?" he asked Barnett. "I mean since you picked me up. How long ago was that anyway?"

"Yesterday," replied the navigating officer. "We've stood off and on looking for some of our men."

"Then that's the same volcano"—

Barnett laughed softly. "Well, they aren't quite holding a caucus of volcanoes down in this country. One like that is enough."

But Slade brushed the remark aside.

"Head for it!" he cried excitedly. "We may be in time! There's a man on that island!"

"A man!" "Another!" "Not Billy Edwards?" "Not some of our boys?"

Slade stared at them bewildered.

"Hold on," interposed Dr. Trendon authoritatively. "What's his name?" he inquired of the journalist.

"Darrow," replied the latter. "Percy Darrow. Do you know him?"

"Who in Kamchatka is Percy Darrow?" demanded Forsythe.

"Why, he's the assistant. It's a long story"—

"Of course it's a long story. There's a lot we want to know," interrupted Captain Parkinson. "Quartermaster, head for the volcano yonder. Mr. Slade, we want to know where you came from, and why you left the schooner and who Percy Darrow is. And there's dinner, so we'll adjourn to the messroom and hear what you can tell us. But there's one thing we're all anxious to know—how came you in the dory which we found and left on the Laughing Lass later than two days ago?"

"I haven't set eyes on the Laughing Lass for—well, I don't know how long, but it's five days anyway, perhaps more," replied Slade.

They stared at him incredulously.

"Oh, I see!" he burst out suddenly. "There were twin dories on the schooner. The other one's still there, I suppose. Did you find her on the stern davits?"

"Yes."

"That's it, then. You see, when I left"—

Captain Parkinson's raised hand checked him. "If you will be so good, Mr. Slade, let us have it all at once, after mess."

At table the young officers at a sharp hint from Dr. Trendon conversed on indifferent subjects until the journalist had partaken heartily of what the physician allowed him. Slade ate with keen appreciation.

"I tell you, that's good," he sighed, when he had finished. "Real, live, after dinner coffee too. Why, gentlemen, I haven't eaten a civilized meal, with all the trimmings, for over two years. Doctor, do you think a little of the real stuff would hurt me? It's a pretty dry yarning."

"One glass," growled the surgeon, "no more."

"Scotch highball, then," voted Slade, "the higher the better."

The steward braught a tall glass with ice, in which the newcomer mixed his drink. Then for quite a minute he sat silent, staring at the table, his fingers aimlessly rubbing into spots of wetness the water beads as they gathered on the outside of his glass. Suddenly he looked up.

"I don't know how to begin," he confessed. "It's too confounded improbable. I hardly believe it myself, now that I'm sitting here in human clothes, surrounded by human beings. Old Scrubbs and the nigger and Handy Solomon and the professor and the chest and the—well, they were real enough when I was caught in the mess. But I warn you you are not going to believe me, and hanged if I blame you a bit."

"We've seen marvels ourselves in the last few days," encouraged Captain Parkinson.

"Fire ahead, man," advised Barnett impatiently. "Just begin at the beginning and let it go at that."

Slade sipped at his glass reflectively.

"Well," said he at length, "the best way to begin is to show you how I happened to be mixed up in it at all."

The officers unconsciously relaxed into attitudes of greater ease. Overhead the lamps swayed gently to the swell. The dull throb of the screw pulsated. Stewards clad in white moved noiselessly, filling the glasses, deferentially striking lights for the smokers, clearing away the last dishes of the repast.

"I'm a reporter by choice and a detective by instinct," began Slade, with startling abruptness. "Furthermore, I'm pretty well off. I'm what they call a free lance, for I have no regular desk on any of the journals. I generally turn my stuff in to the Star because they treat me well. In return it is pretty well understood between us that I'm to use my judgment in regard to 'stories' and that they'll stand back of me for expenses. You see, I've been with them quite awhile."

He looked around the circle as though in appeal to the comprehension of his audience. Some of the men nodded. Others sipped from their glasses or drew at their cigars.

"I loaf around here and there in the world, having a good time traveling, visiting, fooling around. Every once in awhile something interests me. The thing is a sort of instinct. I run it down. If it's a good story, I send it in. That's all there is to it." He laughed slightly. "You see, I'm a sort of magazine writer in method, but my stuff is newspaper stuff; also the game suits me. That's why I play it. That's why I'm here. I have to tell you about myself this way so you will understand how I came to be mixed up in this Laughing Lass matter."

"I remember," commented Barnett, "that when you came aboard the North Dakota you had a little trouble making Captain Arnold see it." He turned to the others with a laugh. "He had all kinds of papers of ancient date, but nothing modern—letter from the Star dated five years back, recommendations to everybody on earth except Captain Arnold, certificate of bravery in Apache campaign, bank identifications and all the rest. 'Maybe you're the Star's correspondent and maybe you're not,' said the captain, 'I don't see anything here to prove it.' Slade argued an hour. No go. Remember how you caught him?" he inquired of Slade.

The reporter grinned assent.

"After the old man had turned him down good Slade fished down in his war bag and hauled out an old tattered document from an oilskin case. 'Hold on a minute,' said he, 'you old shellback. I've proved to you that I can write and I've proved to you that I have fought, and now here I'll prove to you that I can sail. If writing, fighting and sailing don't fit me adequately to report any little disturbances your antiquated washboiler may blunder into I'll go to raising cabbages.' With that he presented a master's certificate! Where did you get it anyway? I never found out?"

"Passed as 'fresh water' on the great lakes," replied Slade briefly.

"Well, the spunk and the certificate finished the captain. He was an old square rigger himself in the civil war."

"So much for myself," Slade continued. "As for the Laughing Lass"—

CHAPTER VIII.

A COINCIDENCE got me aboard the Laughing Lass. I'll tell you how it was. One evening late I was just coming out of a dark alley on the Barbary Coast, San Francisco. You know—the water front, where you can hear more tongues than at Port Said, see stranger sights and meet adventure with the joyous certainty of mediaeval times. I'd been down there hunting up a man reported by a wharf rat of my acquaintance to have just returned from a two years' whaling voyage. He'd been "shanghaied" aboard, and as a matter of fact was worth nearly a million dollars. Landed in the city without a cent, could get nobody to believe him nor trust him to the extent of a telegram east. Wharf rat laughed at his yarn, but I believe it was true. Good copy anyway—

Just at the turn of the alley I nearly bumped into two men. On the Barbary Coast you don't pass men in narrow places until you have reconnoitered a little. I pulled up, thanking fortune that they had not seen me. The first words were uttered in a voice I knew well.

You've all heard of Dr. Karl Augustus Schermerhorn. He did some big things and had in mind still bigger. I'd met him some time before in connection with his telepathy and wireless waves theory. It was picturesque stuff for my purpose, but wasn't in it with what the old fellow had really done. He showed me—well, that doesn't matter. The point is, that good, staid, self centered, or rather, semicentered, Dr. Schermerhorn was standing at midnight in a dark alley on the Barbary Coast in San Francisco talking to an individual whose facial outline at least was not ornamental.

My curiosity or professional instinct, whichever you please, was all aroused. I flattened myself against the wall.

The first remark I lost. The reply came to me in a shrill falsetto. So grotesque was the effect of this treble from a bulk so squat and broad and hairy as the silhouette before me that I almost laughed aloud.

"I guess you've made no mistake on that. I'm her master and her owner too."

"Well, I haf been told you might rent her," said the doctor.

"Rent her!" mimicked the falsetto. "Well, that—yes, I'll rent her!" he laughed again.

"Doch recht." The doctor was plainly at the end of his practical resources.

After waiting a moment for something more definite, the falsetto inquired rather dryly:

"How long? What to? What for? Who are you anyway?"

DID YOU EVER FIGURE THE COST of a single day's baking—the material, fuel, time and labour—and consider that it is all wasted if the baking is a failure?

Results are usually satisfactory or otherwise according to the flour you use. Is it economy, then, to use a flour of uncertain quality when a few cents more will buy a flour that you can depend upon to produce light, crisp and wholesome bread or pastry?

Royal Household Flour

Royal Household flour does not vary in quality—does not disappoint. It is made from selected hard wheat, milled by a most modern process which guarantees absolute purity. And purity in flour is a matter of the very greatest importance.

Sample Boxes Free!!

The most powerful healer in the world is Zam-Buk, and we offer you a free trial box. Zam-Buk combines the knowledge of the ancients with the science of the moderns. The charioteers, gladiators, and wrestlers of ancient Greece seldom emerged from their contests without some gaping wound or severe bruise, and to anoint their injuries with secret balms was part of the day's program. In Zam-Buk you have the modern representative of these ancient healers. Ordinary ointments contain mostly rancid animal fat or poisonous mineral substances. Leave the lid off these ointments for a few days and note the result. Zam-Buk, on the contrary, is absolutely free from any trace of animal fat or mineral poison. It is made from purely herbal essences, is so concentrated and purified that it is suitable for the delicate skin of children, and yet so powerful as to be equal to the most stubborn sore, ulcer, or chronic wound. Zam-Buk never goes rancid. It always keeps clean, fresh, and sweet.

Nature has given man the instinct to rub a place that hurts. She has also given him Zam-Buk, Nature's own herbal healer, with which to rub.

Apply Zam-Buk to a sore, a cut, a scratch, a poisoned wound, a patch of eczema, and at once the healing process begins. It Prevents suppuration, blood poisoning, etc. It draws out inflammation, ends pain and smarting, and heals. The best test is a personal test. Send in for a free box and let Zam-Buk prove its own case. See coupon below.

POISONED WOUND COMPLETELY HEALED!

MR. WILLIAM MUMFORD of 12 Louise Street, Stratford, writes: "While walking about in sock feet I trod on a rusty nail which penetrated the flesh deeply, leaving an ugly wound. I bathed this well and applied a lotion, but next morning my foot was in a shocking condition, very much inflamed and swollen, and I suffered acute pain. I had to lay off work, as I could not bear to put my foot on the ground. I feared blood-poisoning. For six days I suffered intense pain. Just at this time a friend brought me some Zam-Buk, and after using it a few days my foot was wonderfully improved. I persevered with Zam-Buk, and it soon worked a complete cure. It is a wonderful balm."

Zam-Buk heals sores, eczema, skin eruptions, ulcers, ringworm, itch, barber's rash, blood poison, bad leg, salt rheum, abrasions, abscesses, cuts, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries and diseases. Of all stores and druggists, 50c box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

A DRUG STORE DEAL.

Involving an Actress, the Soda Water Man and an Accident.

Josephine Cohan, the actress, ordered a chocolate sundae, or some similar abomination, at a drug store uptown the other day. When she sat down to drink it, one of the long feathers on her hat touched a cigar lighter. Naturally they blazed up. The clerk, being a thoughtful young man, wrested the glass of ice cream soda away from Miss Cohan and poured it on her hat, completely extinguishing the flames. Miss Cohan, uttering unstudied exclamations as the congealed sweetness trickled down the back of her fair young neck, rose and did a few rough steps. Then she started to go away. "One minute, miss," said the clerk. "Haven't you forgotten something?"

Miss Cohan said yes, she had forgotten a lot of things. She had forgotten the sense she was born with, for one thing, going into a place where they first set fire to her and then emptied a half portion of frozen garbage down her lingerie waist to suppress the fire demon. "You'd be a star at Coney, young man," was her decision. "I'm for you in the 'Fighting the Flames' cast any day."

But the clerk said he wanted a dime for the soda. Miss Cohan peevishly inquired what soda he was talking about. "I have had no soda here," said she. "You handed me one, and then before I got the connection with an arid palate established you tore it away to dump on my new hat."

But the clerk said he wanted a dime, just the same. Miss Cohan said she'd pay a dime for a soda in that dump the day following her commitment to Matteawan. "Whenever you see me breezing in here and demanding a platter of your best fire extinguisher, blow the whistle," said she. "I'm off for the funny house."

But the clerk said he wanted a dime for that soda. He said it in such a nasty way that Miss Cohan got real mad.

"My hat cost $50," said she, "and you've ruined it. Give me $49.90 change and let me go." And that's the way the matter stands.

Miss Cohan walks blocks out of her way now to make a false start through the drug store door and then, as if suddenly recollecting, turns away with a scream of terror. The clerk goes behind the prescription counter and makes faces in a mirror.—New York Letter to Cincinnati Times-Star.

A Small but Welcome Act.

"If people who travel on steam railroads were as thoughtful as they should be, instead of throwing their newspapers down on the floor of the car after finishing with them they would wait until they saw a gang of section hands and then toss their papers to the workingmen," said Mr. A. R. Webb of St. Louis.

"These men, even if humble wage earners, are endowed with a desire to know what is doing in the world, and it is an act of the greatest kindness to help them to this source of pleasure and education. Some of our western dailies have taken up this cause and are printing short notices asking railway passengers to give their newspapers to the toilers along the road."

Big Writers.

London Tit-Bits has recently been publishing some facts about the stature of well known English authors. In one of its articles it says: "Of past giants in literature, in two senses of the term, we have Thackeray, who was six feet three inches in height. Coming to the present time, we have Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who is six feet two inches high, but doesn't look it on account of his stalwart build. Then there is Cutcliffe Hyne, who is six feet three inches in height, while Hesketh Prichard is even a shade taller. Keble Howard runs to six feet one and one-half inches in height, while his brother, R. S. Warren Bell, who at once ends and tops our list, is close to six feet five inches."

End of the Madstone.

The government has put the madstone out of business. It will be distressing news to many old families in which madstones have been handed down from generation to generation and guarded as carefully as any heirloom to hear that a government scientist, as reported in the Boston Transcript, says the specific value of one of these stones against rabies "is no greater than that of a piece of blotting paper applied in the same manner." By way of warning he says, "The application of madstones gives the unenlightened public a false sense of security, and their use should be discouraged by all possible means."

Towns Named Taft.

Since the nomination of Secretary Taft the newspapers of the country have been discovering villages and hamlets bearing the name of the presidential candidate. According to the Chicago Tribune, there are eleven places in this country bearing the name of Taft, besides any number of Taftvilles, Taftons, Taftvales and Taftdales. The states that have Taft on the map at present are Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oregon, Texas, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina and Oklahoma.

The Czar's Table.

The czar's table is financed on a scale of enormous extravagance. Each dish provided is put down at 10 rubles—a ruble is worth about 3 shillings—and each single article of food counts as a dish, though it may be only a few olives or a bunch of celery. At great state dinners the figuring is still higher.—London P. T. O.

ROSLIN.

Jessie Spence, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Spence, died at their home on Monday of last week, aged 16 years. She had been sick for about four months, and death was not unexpected. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. J. A. McConnell, in the Presbyterian Church here, of which she was a member.

Mr. David Halstead, of Carnduff, Assa., called on friends in and around the village one day last week. Mr. Halstead used to live here and is now attending Queen's College at Kingston.

Mrs. McNicol, from Western Ontario, is visiting her brother, Mr. W. Shillabeer in the village.

Miss Elda Haight, of Canifton, is visiting her cousin, Miss E. Duncan.

Some repairs are being made in the village property. Mrs. Cornish is putting a cement walk around her lot, and a cement platform is being built in front of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches.

Mrs. Wm. Fargey, of Tweed, spent Sunday in the village, the guest of her brother, Mr. E. Leslie.

Mr. Jim Rutherford and Miss Helen Rutherford attended Roblin's Mills fair on Saturday.

Mr. John Fargey was at Bancroft fair on Friday last.

THIRD LINE THURLOW.

Miss Frankie Latta is visiting relatives at Tweed.

Mr. R. B. Cooley has returned to the Ontario Agr. College, Guelph, for the completion of his B. S. A. degree.

Mrs. Frank Elliott has returned home after spending a week with her brother in Watertown.

HAROLD.

A large number from here took in Bancroft fair.

Mrs. Harry Heath spent last week with her mother, Mrs. Robt. Scott.

Mrs. McConnell of Mount Pleasant, has returned home after spending a couple of weeks with her sister, Mrs. S. Armstrong.

Sunday, Oct. 4th, was rally day for Harold Sunday school. A large number of pupils were present, also a number of visitors. A programme had been prepared, in which the little folks deserve great credit for their beautiful solos and songs.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirk, of Chapman, were guests of Geo. Bailey on Sunday.

The little daughter of Mr. Geo. Bailey is very ill with typhoid fever.

Miss Gladys Runnolls was the guest of her friend Miss Beatrice Martin on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Stone and his son have returned from a trip to Lindsay.

Miss Frankie McDonald, of Stirling, was the guest of her parents on Sunday.

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers, of Kalamazoo, Mich., relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, went to Mt. Clemens for baths, but received little benefit. While at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

MISS M. CAMPBELL

Smart Murder Trial Has Been Traversed To Spring Assizes.

Many Civil Cases Settled and Others Laid Over--Madoc Man on Trial for Rape--Grand Jury Brought in Five True Bills.

The civil docket in the High Court of Justice, to use a legal phrase, has fallen through, as most of the cases entered for trial were settled before coming to court. Those settled or laid over were as follows:

John Blackburn vs. the G. T. R. has been settled by the payment of $1000 to the plaintiff; W. H. Biggar for defendant

Wrennick vs. G.T.R. is laid over until next court, owing to the absence of important witnesses. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; W. H. Biggar for defendants.

Thomas vs. Marsh & Heathorne was settled between the parties by the defendants paying compensation, doctor bills, hospital bills, etc. Porter and Carnew for plaintiff; DuVernet Raymond and Co. for defendants.

James E. Trotter, vs. J. O. Dale and Co., Roderick McKenzie and Charles St. Charles has been postponed owing to the absence of material witnesses. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; D. E. K. Stewart for defendants.

The non-jury case of Edith May Palmateer against the City of Belleville has been settled by the payment of compensation as well as costs of doctor bills. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; W. C. Mikel for the defendants.

COMPENSATION CLAIMED.

The court was occupied yesterday afternoon in hearing the case of Manley Herrington vs. Edward Demille, an action brought by the plaintiff to recover a certain sum for the use of a threshing engine, which plaintiff claimed was his property, and which the defendant used without paying him. The evidence showed that the defendant had a right to the use of the engine and the case was dismissed with costs to the plaintiff. W. C. Mikel, K. C., for plaintiff; W. Cross and W. S. Morden for the defendant.

FIVE TRUE BILLS.

The Grand Jury yesterday afternoon did considerable business, as within three hours after being charged by Justice Teetzel they returned with no less than five true bills, as follows:

Thomas Smart, true bill for murder.

Richard Simpson, true bill for rape.

Earle Fox, two true bills; one for shooting with intent and one for assault and inflicting grievous bodily harm on one Wm. Day.

Mrs. Wm. Day, true bill for aiding and abetting in the assault upon her husband.

LAWYERS ASK DELAY.

In the case of Thomas Smart, an application was made by Mr. Carnew, for the accused, for a postponement of the trial until the spring assizes, as the offence was of such recent occurrence that the defence had not not time to prepare its case. His Lordship postponed judgment until this morning, when he requested counsel for the defence to put in certain affadavits giving reasons why the trial should be postponed. This Mr. Carnew promised to do and the prisoner upon being arraigned pleaded not guilty and stated he was not ready for trial. He was then removed to his cell below.

SERIOUS CHARGE, THIS.

A young man, named Richard Simpson was this morning placed on trial on a charge of rape. It is alleged that the offence was committed on the 31st of July, upon a young married woman named Mrs. Celestine Deniko. Both parties reside in Madoc Township. Simpson pleaded not guilty to the charge. Mr. Arnoldi, K. C., of Toronto, was Crown prosecutor, and Messrs. W. J. Moore, of Madoc, and Mr. Wm. Carnew, of this city, appeared for the accused.

The case was on all day to-day, and the Crown Prosecutor's address was finished about 3 o'clock this afternoon. A verdict is not looked for before late this evening.

MURDER TRIAL TRAVERSED.

At 3.40 this afternoon the jury in the rape case retired to their room to deliberate, and the Judge announced that the Smart murder case was traversed to the Spring Assizes.

Harry Lane Buried

The funeral yesterday of the late Mr. Harry Lane was largely attended, evincing the esteem in which the deceased was held. Services at St. Michael's church were conducted by Rev. Father Meehan, after which interment took place at St. James' cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. M. Lane, T. Lane, W. Lane and L., T. and W. Hebert, relatives of the deceased.

Death Resulted From a Runaway.

About three weeks ago Mrs. James Gallagher, who resided on the Caniffton Road was the victim of a runaway accident, and the injuries which she received proved fatal, she passing away at the hospital at an early hour this morning. Deceased, was 40 years of age, and was born in the Township of Thurlow. Her maiden name was Miss Margaret Donovan. She was a lady who was highly esteemed by all who knew her. Mrs. Gallagher was a member of St. Michael's church. No family survives. Mrs. Geo. Hamilton, of Thurlow, is a sister of the deceased, and Messrs. Michael, John and Cornelius Donovan, of Thurlow, are brothers.

County Court-- Non-Jury Sittings.

Aspegren & Co. vs. Polley & White. —This was the only case set down for hearing. Judge Deroche ordered the trial to stand till the end of October. The action is for alleged non-delivery of two cars of apples in New York. William N. Ponton, K.C., for plaintiff; E. Guss Porter, K.C., for defendants.

Died in Hospital.

Joseph Barbeau, an unmarried man 26 years of age, died at the hospital this morning from an attack of typhoid fever. Deceased was brought to the hospital from Trenton, where he was employed as a lineman for the Bell Telephone Company. His home is said to be in the United States. Barbeau was a member of the Roman Catholic church.

Died in Sidney.

MRS. MARTIN BUTLER.

Mrs. Martin Butler, a well-known lady residing in Sidney Township, died this morning. Deceased, who was 53 years of age, was born in Sidney, her maiden name being Treverton. She had lived all her life in Sidney. Mrs. Butler had been for many years a member of the Methodist church, and took an active part in church work. In addition to the sorrowing husband, one daughter, Mrs. Deselet, of Sidney, survives. Messrs. Charles and Samuel Treverton are brothers of the deceased.

WHERE SAVAGES BEAT US

The rude, uncultured savage did not sit most of the day in a padded office chair, a carriage or car. His food was not prepared by a chef. He had to hunt for something to eat. And dinner, when he got it, was none too rich.

But the rude, uncultured savage did not suffer from indigestion, constipation, billousness, headaches, as we civilized beings do. Exercise and the amount of fruit and fresh vegetables in his diet, kept liver, bowels and kidneys working right.

None of us want to go back to the days of wigwams and tomahawks but a lot of us certainly would like to have the digestion of the savages

We can, by taking "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" act directly on the stomach, liver, kidneys and skin, and keep these organs in perfect condition. "Fruit-a-tives" bring back lost appetite and sound digestion to the Dyspeptic—regulate the bowels of those who suffer from Constipation — and build up the whole system. Trial size 25c. Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market were 83 carloads, composed of 1248 cattle, 1648 hogs, 2490 sheep and lambs and 88 calves.

Exporters.

None on sale and apparently none wanted.

Butchers.

The quality of the butchers' cattle on sale was not as good as those offered at the Junction, consequently the prices paid were not as high as quoted for that market. Choice picked lots sold at $4.50 to $4.75; loads of the best on sale, $4.20 to $4.45; medium, $3.90 to $4.15; common, $3.50 to $3.75; cows, $2.75 to $3.75; canners, $1 to $2.

Feeders and Stockers.

Supplies were fairly large in both classes, but good quality steers are scarce. H. & W. Murby report prices unchanged from our last quotations, as follows: Best feeders, 950 to 1050 lbs. each, at $3.50 to $3.90 per cwt.; best feeders, 800 to 950 lbs. each, at $3 to $3.50; best stockers, 650 to 800 lbs. each, at $2.50 to $3; medium stockers, 600 to 800 lbs. each, at $2.25 to $2.60; common stockers, 500 to 700 lbs. each, at $2 to $2.25; distillery bulls, $2.25 to $2.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Choice milkers and springers are at a premium. The best cows sell readily at $50 to $60, and an odd cow now and again reaches $65; common to medium cows sell at $30 to $40 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts moderate; prices firm at $3 to $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were large, 2150 being on sale, which caused a little easier feeling. Export ewes, $3.25 to $3.50 per cwt.; rams, $2.50 to $3 per cwt.; lambs, $4.25 to $4.90 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reports hog prices 10c lower than yesterday, or selects at $6.40 and lights at $6.15 per cwt.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 6.—Cattle—Receipts, 150 head; fairly active and steady; prime steers, $5.85 to $6.25.

Veals—Receipts, 100 head; active and 25c lower; $5 to $9.25.

McINTOSH BROS

TO SUCCEED MONTEITH

James S. Duff, M. P. P., Is Now Ontario Minister of Agriculture.

Sir James P. Whitney Announces Choice of Man to Take Place Made Vacant by Former North Perth Member's Resignation — Is Keen Agriculturalist and Has Had Considerable Experience.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—Hon. James S. Duff, M.P.P. for West Simcoe, is the new Minister of Agriculture in succession to Hon. Nelson Monteith.

Mr. Duff was sworn in yesterday and at once turned his attention to his new duties, in which he will have the assistance of Hon. Mr. Monteith, his predecessor, for a few days.

Sir James P. Whitney, in making the announcement yesterday evening, stated to the press that Hon. Mr. Monteith offered his resignation on June 25, consequent on his defeat in North Perth.

"The resignation was not accepted, but stood over till to-day," said the Premier. "I have all along regretted the coming severance of our official relations, which I have expressed in a letter accepting Mr. Monteith's resignation."

HON. JAMES S. DUFF, M.P.P.

"Mr. Duff, the member for West Simcoe," proceeded Sir James, "has been sworn in as Minister of Agriculture in succession to Mr. Monteith. He has been all his life a prominent and active agriculturist. He has had considerable experience in the House, and we anticipate that he will be a successful Minister.

"The nomination for Mr. Duff's constituency will take place on Friday; the 23rd, and the election on the 30th, should there be a contest."

Sir James also intimated that he hoped to have the advantage of Mr. Monteith's experience and advice as required. In the meantime Mr. Monteith returns to his farm near Stratford, where he is more at ease than in the garish career of politics.

It is not believed that Mr. Monteith would be willing to undertake the duties of agent-general of immigration for Ontario, but the lights of the great city have lured the farmer's boy before now, and Mr. Monteith may yield.

Mr. Duff is one of the most popular members of the House, utterly without pretension, good humored and genial, full of good sense and the valuable experience of a hard-headed Canadian farmer, which Mr. Duff has been all his life. He is of Irish extraction, born on the farm near Cookstown, Ont., June 20, 1856. He has had considerable municipal experience, and has been in the Legislature since 1898.

Findlay G. Macdiarmid, and J. H. Carnegie were both mentioned for the position, and it is now rumored that Mr. Macdiarmid may be given a seat in the Cabinet without portfolio, but no solid grounds appear to exist for the report.

A Manitoba Tornado.

Winnipeg, Oct. 7.—A tornado swept over sections of country surrounding Winnipeg Monday night and did considerable damage. At Bird's Hill, six miles east, the general store of M. Heikoff was wrecked, and the contents were distributed over about a mile of country. A number of shacks were also destroyed, and in one case a building was picked up off the ground, leaving the family sitting in the rain but uninjured. A section of the C.N.R. track was destroyed, and telegraph poles were blown down.

De Wolf Hopper Hurt.

Syracuse, Oct. 7.—De Wolf Hopper, who was giving the first performance of "What Happened Then" in this city Sunday night, fell 12 feet to the stage. It was manifest that the popular comedian was badly hurt and the audience was dismissed.

Physicians found that Mr. Hopper was suffering from concussion of the brain.

Child Crushed In Street.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 7.—The seven-year-old son of B. Lynghelt was found on the street yesterday afternoon with his head crushed. It is presumed he attempted to climb on a heavily-laden wagon and fell under the wheels without the driver knowing it.

Negro Lynched.

Glenflora, Kas., Oct. 7.—Ben Price, a negro, was seized by a mob here, taken to the centre of the town and hanged to a tree yesterday. He was charged with criminal assault on his own daughter. The mob broke in the jail in order to capture the negro.

Scotland Wins Shield.

London, Oct. 7.—Because F. Jones, who made the top score of 220 for England in the Elcho shield competition at Bisley, used a Ross rifle barrel, which was not the authorized weight, the shield has been awarded to Scotland.

Planted by King Edward.

New York, Oct. 7.—The big English oak, known as the Prince of Wales' tree, which grew from an acorn planted in the Mall in Central Park in 1861 by the then Prince of Wales, now King Edward, has been cut down by a park foreman under the order of Park Superintendent Beatty. The stump was pulled out and the spot covered with sod.

Several attempts have been made to save the oak by filling the rotted places with paraffin.

The acorn from which the tree grew was brought by the Prince of Wales from England.

Father and Son Dead.

Wingham, Oct. 7.—John Hanna, formerly a well-known merchant and one of the earliest settlers here, died early Monday morning, in his 73rd year. The end was hastened by the shock of his son's death in the same house from typhoid. The body of the latter, George C. Hanna, had not yet been carried out when the father passed away.

Mr. Hanna, Sr., was three times mayor of Wingham, and at one time won a valuable prize as the most popular man of the town.

Settling Out of Court.

London, Ont., Oct. 7.—The Reid damage suit, involving claims aggregating over $110,000, may not come to trial. The action brought by Jas. Clugston has been settled out of court and others will follow. Geo. C. Gibbons, K.C., counsel for Mr. Reid, stated that the defence is willing to settle if the plaintiffs will accept a reasonable amount.

Boys, I'm Gone.

Kingston, Oct. 7.—"Boys, I'm going to die," exclaimed William Darby, aged 55, in a Princess street store last night, and then he fell dead.

He had been in poor health for some time and was an old resident.

A widow and family survive.

Swindled Winnipeg Merchants.

Winnipeg, Oct. 7.—A smooth-working Hebrew sharper has been cleaning up retailers, including the T. Eaton Co., for nearly $2,000 through a commission scheme he worked on them. He has so far eluded arrest.

Parted From Child Fifteen Years.

New York, Oct. 7.—Mrs. Flora Avery of Spearfish, N.D., met her fifteen-year-old daughter, Myrtle Barber, for the first time in nearly fourteen years, in the Supreme Court yesterday, where the child had been produced on a writ of habeas corpus. The child, for two years, has been an inmate of the Roman Catholic Protectory in Westchester, to which the girl had been committed by Magistrate Fitzgerald of Brooklyn.

Mrs. Avery's discovery of her daughter's whereabouts followed the arrest in this city of Charles Barber, father of the girl and former husband of Mrs. Avery.

A Colossal Robbery.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 7.—It came out yesterday that the proceeds of the train robbery that occurred near Vilna eight days ago were very much higher than was at first estimated. The robbers got away with a little over $380,000. Of this amount $150,000 was in registered letters, mostly bank correspondence.

Should there be another robbery the railroad will be placed under martial law.

Seats Come High.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—Frank Weir bought a seat on the Montreal Stock Exchange yesterday for $19,500.

The seat was bought for F. T. Buchanan, and it is said that the previous owner was the late Dumont Laviolette. It was sold through L. J. Forget & Co.

After the sale was made $20,000 was bid for a seat by a member of the exchange.

This woman was ill, blue, and discouraged. Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. R. Gentleman, 1093 St. James Street, Montreal, Quebec, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered from a severe female weakness, and extreme nervousness, and was blue and utterly discouraged.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended, and after taking several bottles, I am not only cured, but am an entirely different woman, and on the whole a healthier woman than before taking your valuable medicine.

"Every woman who suffers from any form of female ills should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

LEAVES IT TO POWERS

Turkey Will Let Conference Settle Bulgarian Affair.

European Diplomats Spend Day of Waiting For Development In Balkan Trouble—Congress of Countries Will Probably Meet to Assure Provisions of Treaty of Berlin—Austria Denies Mobilization of Troops.

London, Oct. 7.—The attitude of all the powers concerned in the Balkan difficulty was yesterday one of waiting. No hostile move has been made by any one of the three nations most intimately concerned — Austria, Turkey and Bulgaria. Austria denies that she is mobilizing troops, and has, in fact, withdrawn her forces from the sanjak of Novi-Bazar. The Bulgarian monarch has ordered his reservists to disperse on Oct. 14 as had been previously arranged. The Porte, holding that Bulgaria's action has been directed against the powers as well as against Turkey, looks to the powers to defend their own interests and protect the provisions of the treaty of Berlin. Servia, deeply resenting the annexation of Herzegovina and Bosnia, by Austria, seems to be most anxious for war.

According to a statement made at Paris last night, an international conference on the Bulgarian situation is now assured. It will be proposed by Great Britain, France and Russia acting together instead of by one power. These three powers are in complete accord on the principle of an immediate conference; Italy is in favor of it, and even Germany is expected to adhere to the proposal. Furthermore, the latest advices from Constantinople indicate that the Porte will accept the advice of France and Great Britain and await the result of this congress.

Constantinople, Oct. 7.—Immediately upon receipt of the news that Bulgarian independence had been proclaimed the Turkish Foreign Minister summoned all the Ambassadors, except the Austrian Ambassador, and sought their advice.

It is the general desire of the Government to avoid war, and suggestions have been made that a tariff war be inaugurated against Austria and Bulgaria in the way of retaliation. The people, however, are in a belligerent mood and may force the Government into taking extreme measures.

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 7.—A mass meeting of 10,000 persons was held in the public square last night, the mayor of the city presiding. The leaders of all political parties made addresses, and resolutions were adopted calling upon the Government to induce the powers to save Bosnia and Herzegovina from annexation and pledging the lives of the Servian people for the cause. Copies of the resolutions were taken by all the foreign Ministers, with the exception of the Austrian representative. Shops have been closed in Belgrade and processions fill the streets. The newspapers demand war. The majority of the people of Bosnia are Servians and utterly opposed to annexation.

A ukase has been issued calling out all the army reservists of the first class. The reservists total about 120,000 men.

Canada's Richest Woman Buried.

Victoria, Sept. 7.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Jean Dunsmuir, Canada's richest woman, attracted a large gathering of pioneers, one old man walking from Nanaimo to be present. Hon. John Dunsmuir, her son, who was made the defendant in a suit brought to ask for an accounting of the estate which he was stated to have secured by misrepresentation, was not expected to be present owing to the family disagreement, but at the last moment he decided to attend, and broke down during the service. The daughters will continue the lawsuit.

Mrs. Dunsmuir's will disposes of an estate of $2,000,000, of which $85,000 goes in legacies to more distant relatives, and the residue is divided equally between the five daughters.

Foretold Her Death.

Toronto, Oct. 7—Having foretold her death weeks ago, Mrs. Leah Taylor, wife of Asher Taylor, Chestnut street, was buried yesterday.

She was 35 years of age and death occurred after giving birth to a seventh child (still-born). Her mother had died in giving birth to a seventh child, and Mrs. Taylor was so certain that she would not survive that weeks ago she made known her belief to her friends. She leaves a family of five children from 3 to 10 years of age.

White Star Undecided.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—The White Star line has not decided if they will bring the Laurentic and the Megantic to Montreal. Both these vessels are newly built for the St. Lawrence route and will be the biggest passenger ships that ever came to Canada. The company has sent Capt. Macaulay to Montreal to look over the ground.

Peake Inquest.

Stratford, Oct. 7.—The adjourned inquest into the Peake murder case will be held in the city hall, Stratford, on Thursday afternoon.

The adjournment from Sebringville to Stratford will permit the attendance of the prisoner Roghmond without involving possible danger.

A Fatal Spot.

Glace Bay, Oct. 7.—John Dunphy, a young miner, was killed by a fall of coal in the Dominion Coal Co.'s pit.

The place in which he was killed was the same at which another man met death two weeks ago.

Collision at Peterboro.

Peterboro, Oct. 7.—As a result of a rear-end collision on the C.P.R. yesterday several cars were wrecked and one man, George Carey, was injured. The damage was not extensive.

CRETE JOINS GREECE.

land Throws Off Rule of Turkey and the Powers.

Canea, Island of Crete, Oct. 8.—A cree announcing the union of Crete th Greece was published last even- g.

Events leading up to the climax fol- wed each other throughout the day th dramatic rapidity. The town was decked, and early in the morning ople began flocking in from all di- ctions. There was much firing of ns and revolvers, together with enty of cheering, but perfect order evailed, Mussulmans mingled with ristians freely and unmolested.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon a great monstration in favor of union with eece occurred on the military re- ew grounds. More than 10,000 peo- , one of the largest crowds ever en here, gathered at this place. All prominent revolutionary leaders, ch with his banner flying, appear- , and they were supported by the ds of the different political parties, mayors of the town, the clergy d others influential in the councils the island.

Crete is an island in the Mediter- nean, lying to the south of the Aeg- Archipelago, which a population something over 300,000. The island s conquered by the Turks in 1869, never really submitted, and con- ually rose in insurrection against m. In 1898 the powers set up an tonomy under the nominal suze- nty of the Sultan, and Prince orge of Greece was appointed high nmissioner. The prince has since n superseded by M. Zaimis, for- rly Prime Minister of Greece. A ge proportion of the population is ristian.

London, Oct. 8.—Great Britain uld much prefer that the Balkans tters be settled without reference he signatories of the Berlin treaty, she is advising Turkey to try to ne to some terms with Bulgaria Austria-Hungary.

The attention of the Austria-Hun- ian Foreign Office has been called he protocol of Jan. 17, 1881, which ttached to the treaty of 1871, and which Austria-Hungary adhered. this protocol it is laid down that power could break its treaty en- ements or modify the stipulations the treaty without entering into ndly agreement with the contract- powers and obtaining their assent. he British Government, therefore, ifies the Austria-Hungarian Government that it is unable to sanction any infringement of the treaty of Berlin.

Turkey's unexpectedly restrained policy minimizes the possibility of war, which now is considered out of the question, unless some of the minor Balkan states open hostilities.

The English papers unite in praising Turkey's moderation, and in denouncing Austria. The Standard, in a typical utterance, says:

"We are sorry for the aged Emperor. We regret that so late in his long and honorable career he has chosen to sully his name with a deed which will go down in history alongside of the partition of Poland."

Several of the London newspapers question whether or not Emperor Francis Joseph is acting against his will.

Auction Called Off.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 8.—It is learned that the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway management, in response to powerful influences brought to bear, has reconsidered the plan of selling lands at Prince Rupert by public auction and will in all probability dispose of them by private sale.

It is understood that the sale will [illegible] place in June next. The majority of the selling will probably be done in Montreal and Toronto.

Veiled Milner's Portrait.

London, Oct. 8.—(C.A.P.)—According to a Durban despatch, the Government gave instructions that Milner's portrait in the room wherein the National Convention for Closer Union sits on the 12th, should be veiled by a curtain, supposedly not to offend some of the Dutch delegates. The response was indignant protests by leading citizens. The curtain has been removed.

Broker Disappears.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 8.—C. J. Gwynn of Vancouver, a well-known stock broker, has disappeared. The last heard of him was in San Francisco, intending to leave there Sept. 23 for Vancouver. He had about $1,000 in cash with him and may have met with foul play.

His affairs here are perfectly straight.

Object to Tuberculosis Hospital.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—The civic authorities are meeting with further opposition in their efforts to establish a tuberculosis hospital.

Yesterday an injunction was taken out on behalf of the ratepayers and property owners of Bayswater, to prevent the erection of the hospital in that suburb.

Big Chinese Loan.

Pekin, Oct. 8.—A loan of $25,000,000 for the redemption of the bonds of the Pekin-Hankow Railroad has been provisionally decided upon. The final decision, however, is dependent upon the situation in Europe. The new loan will be issued equally in London and Paris, and the term is to be 30 years.

No Appeal In Czar's Case.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—The Supreme Court yesterday morning granted a motion to quash the appeal in the case of the Czar of Russia against Priadoriakoff, but refused that in the case of the Northeastern Banking Co. of England v. Royal Trust Co., arising out of the sale of the Baie des Chaleurs Railway.

Mr. Fielding Is Shown Up.

Mr. Borden Vigorously Scores Him at Kingston Meeting.

Finance Minister Has Used Public Domain for Party Purposes More Than Any Man in Public Life—Enthusiasm of Meeting Transcends Many Previous Gatherings and Utterly Outdoes Fielding Rally.

Kingston, Oct. 8.—Kingston gave the Conservative leader last night a welcome which for genuine enthusiasm even excelled many of the warm and demonstrative receptions of his Ontario tour.

At the Fielding meeting in the opera house Tuesday night the house was not filled, and the audience was unsympathetic; but last night hundreds were unable to get within the City Hall, and many more stood in the aisles.

Kingston has been strongly Liberal, Hon. Wm. Harty had a majority of nearly 590, yet to-day Mr. Harty concedes that his opponent, Mayor Ross, is making a great fight, and that it is anyone's victory.

Mr. Borden was accompanied by A. Claude Macdonell of Toronto. In the afternoon he visited Sir John Macdonald's grave in Cataraqui cemetery, and afterwards rested at the residence of Hugh C. Nickle. The public meeting last night was presided over by Ald. Rigney and on the platform were many ladies and a number of clergymen.

Mr. Borden was more aggressive than he has been in dealing with campaign issues. He sharply attacked Mr. Fielding's professions of virtue, declaring that no man in public life had used the public domain and public revenues for the party cause to a greater extent than he, and that he has maintained a condition of affairs discreditable to the country.

Mr. Fielding's statement, that the scandals levelled against the Government were due to Tory officials, was untrue, and he knew it to be false when he made it. Four hundred thousand dollars had been paid to a bogus immigration company. Was this money paid to Tory officials? Yet Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with his scenery and his manufactured enthusiasm had been parading this country without entering into any defence of transactions such as this.

"No man," said Mr. Borden, "has used the public domain and the public revenues like Hon. W. S. Fielding. In 1900 Mr. Fielding told the people of Halifax that if they would elect two Liberals the City of Halifax would receive what it is entitled to. This is the jurist that holds himself up to the people of Kingston. This is the man who in Nova Scotia and in the Dominion Parliament has maintained a condition of affairs discreditable to the country."

D. M. McIntyre, Mayor Ross, Ald Ragney and A. Claude Macdonell also spoke.

Attacked Y.M.C.A.

Port Arthur, Oct. 8.—Police Magistrate Dobie and Crown Attorney Langworthy returned yesterday morning from Schreiber, where they were called to conduct the case growing out of a riot alleged to have been the work of C.P.R. strikers ad strike sympathizers. As a result of their investigation, two rioters—F. Rhead and John Randall—were fined $100 each or given six months in jail.

Last Saturday evening the railroad Y.M.C.A. building, where a number of strike-breakers boarded, was assailed by sympathizers. Rocks were thrown through the windows and other damage done.

Assaulted Girl.

Parry Sound, Oct. 8.—The charge of assault by a married man named Ford on the person of a girl under 16 years of age, resulted in a verdict of guilty, but on the motion of Mr. Godson, the crown prosecutor, in the Assizes, and in view of the fact that the prisoner had contributed toward the maintenance of the child of the girl, and had a delicate wife and small family, the sentence of the court was extremely lenient, being imprisonment in the district jail for six months.

Chinaman Deported.

Halifax, Oct. 8.—A Chinaman named Woo Jin, who claims to belong to Montreal, and who was taken out of jail at North Sydney and put on board a steamer for Mexico belonging to the line by which he is alleged to have been smuggled into Canada, was before Judge Drysdale on habeas corpus proceedings yesterday, but was ordered back on board. He was being deported on an order from the Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Says Thaw Tried Suicide.

White Plains, N.Y., Oct. 8.—After charging that Thaw was still a dangerous paranoiac and recently had threatened to kill himself, District Attorney Jerome withdrew from the case yesterday when Justice Mills refused to transfer the hearing question of Thaw's sanity to New York County.

Thereupon Justice Mills declared that he would name two experts to examine Thaw as to his sanity.

Boy Kicked by Horse.

Stratford, Oct. 8.—George Cotterel, aged 12 years an English lad, whose father, George Cotterel, resides in Toronto, was kicked on the head by a horse in a runaway yesterday and perhaps fatally injured.

C. W. Webb, B.A., of Medicine Hat, has received the appointment of junior English master at the Collegiate Institute as a salary of $1,000.

WAITED ON MAYOR.

Montreal, Oct. 8.—A large deputation of C.P.R. strikers called upon Mayor Payette yesterday, and told a pitiful tale. They say that, notwithstanding the announcement made in the paper, when they applied for positions yesterday morning at the C.P.R. Angus shops for reinstatement, they were told that their places were all filled.

They asked the mayor to intercede on their behalf with the C.P.R. They said they had been deceived by the labor leaders, who told them that unless they struck their wages would be reduced. They say they are entirely upon their uppers and that there are hundreds like them, whose families will starve unless they get work at once. Some of the deputation broke into tears, and Ald. J. B. A. Martin was so affected that he broke down himself, and had to leave the mayor's room.

Winnipeg, Oct. 8.—A large number of Canadian Pacific mechanics returned to work yesterday. The men began to register early in the morning. At 8 o'clock a crowd of 200 men gathered at the two offices the company had opened for strikers. Many went in to work immediately their names were placed in the books. A number of strike-breakers left yesterday.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—The local C.P.R. striking mechanics have not yet definitely decided whether or not they will accept the strike settlement. At a meeting here yesterday it was stated that no official announcement had been received of a settlement. The body of strikers here has remained intact, and the announcement of the settlement is not pleasing to them.

ACCIDENT AT CROSSING.

One Woman Dead and Three Others Hurt In Toronto Collision.

Toronto, Oct. 8.—An eastbound Bathurst car yesterday morning crashed into a G.T.R. freight car at Front and John streets, as a result of which Miss Belle Cummings is dead and three other women are injured.

The car struck the train a glancing blow, as the tracks cross diagonally. Neither car nor train was going fast, but the front of the light, single-truck open street car was demolished.

Of the twenty passengers on the car Miss Cummings died last evening from shock in the Western Hospital. Three others were taken home with lesser injuries.

The injured are: Miss Irene Early, 231 Ossington avenue; Miss Diggans, 455 Euclid avenue; Miss Hannah Tracy, 15 Fenning street.

Road Can't Pay, Says Report.

New York, Oct. 8.—From London comes a report that the English board of managers of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. is planning to slip out of its Grand Trunk Pacific projection in view of a recent alleged discovery that the road can never pay its fixed charges. The situation is so desperate, according to the London report, that all news concerning the remarkable predicament of Premier Laurier is being suppressed in the Canadian newspapers lest votes be influenced.

Feared Arrest; Takes Poison.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 8.—John Campbell, aged 61, committed suicide yesterday by drinking carbolic acid. The man had quarrelled with his employer's son, and there were blows struck. Following this he went home and took the fatal dose. He leaves a widow and four small children. During the quarrel Campbell hit Shirley Peters over the head with a shovel, and fear of arrest is said to have caused the suicide.

Evading the Issue.

"Did you break this dish, Mary?"

"No'm; I only dropped it.—St. Louis Times.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The Conservative campaign in this district opens with a meeting to-morrow night in the Conservative Auxiliary rooms. Only a little over two weeks now to election. Roll up your sleeves and do what you can to give Canada good and honest Government.

A Yankee publication, discussing Canadian affairs, says that Liberalism holds power in the Dominion simply because the Quebec French stand solidly by Laurier—a fellow-Frenchman. The question of fitness, or honesty, or patriotism, does not enter into the question at all, this shrewd Yankee editor thinks. It is simply a case of "We will vote for Laurier because he is of our race and creed." The wonder is, this unbiased critic thinks, that the English-speaking people of Canada have allowed themselves to be so "jollied along" for twelve years.

And it is rather odd, too, when you come to sit down quietly and think it over. Canada is practically ruled by men who speak a foreign tongue, and whose only regard for the Union Jack is that it gives them greater freedom than any other flag on earth would. So, while they accept benefits from the Union Jack they cheer for the Tricolor. And Canadians, who pride themselves on being Britons, stand for a French Premier, who is on record as saying that the dearest wish of his heart is to see Canada independent of Great Britain; who hob-nobbed in Ottawa with Boer sympathizers, and who only sent the Canadian contingent to South Africa when public opinion compelled him to. Yes, indeed, Canadians MUST have some queer streaks in them if they are not satisfied with twelve years of that sort of thing.

Aeroplanes, it is said, will soon be placed on the market at $4000 each. The undertaking business should soon be looking up.

The Assizes petered out with very little excitement, after all the imposing looking docket.

Grit convention for East Hastings will meet in Tweed to-morrow. Will they rather have Than than Butler or Butler than Than? Dear me, this is confusing. Well, it doesn't make much difference who they choose; he'll be pulverized, anyhow.

• • •

New Jersey farmer says squirrels are ready to fight for nuts this fall, thus proving it will be a hard winter. The goosebone prophet has yet to be heard from.

• • •

Grit paper, reporting the Roblin's Mills political fiasco, says: "After speaking for over an hour, Hon. Sydney Fisher was BADLY cheered." He deserved it, all right.

• • •

Married C.P.R. strikers are getting their jobs back before the single men. This is a case of father getting a chance to work first.

With war threatened in Bulgaria, Stratton writing sermonettes in Peterboro, Foster and the editor of the Globe making faces at each other in Toronto, and Messrs. Butler and Vermilyea wrestling collar and eyebrow to see who will be the Grit victim in East Hastings, who can say there is not something doing every minute in the old world at present?

The best-informed Liberals look for a majority of 23 for Laurier. The best-informed Conservatives look for a majority of 21 for Borden. Things must be pretty serious with the Liberals when they admit that a majority of 66 will be cut to 23. Ominous figures, those. By their own admission it will be skidoo for Sir Wilfrid.

It's in the air. The Grits are on the run. Laurier will get what Ross got in 1904.

Still they come. Every day we read of "prominent Reformers" who are deserting their party. And no wonder. Surely people who claim to be "Reformers" have plenty to do now in reforming their own party. Looks that way, doesn't it?

• • •

There is a rapidly growing and strong belief that Laurier will finish his work—and will do it between now and October 26th.

GOING SOME, SURE.

(Brockville Times)

An enthusiastic admirer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, writing to a Montreal paper, says, among other good things, to the credit of the Premier:

"He has been the means of increasing the population of the country by nearly a million and a half in his twelve years of office."

Well, that's going some, isn't it?

Ralls, the Postmaster of Fenalla, a village in West Northumberland, has been arrested for destroying letters containing Conservative campaign literature. Is there anything that Grits will not do for party purposes?

Word comes to us that the circular issued by the officials of the Liberal Association of East Hastings, calling a convention in Tweed on Friday next, appeals to the Liberals and Independents to congregate. Has the Liberal party sunk so low in public confidence that it is necessary to call others to their aid? How have the mighty fallen!

• • •

All the Toronto dailies to-day contain an account of the arrest of a Grit Postmaster for destroying letters containing Conservative campaign literature, except the Globe. Why? The Globe never exposes the crimes of members of its party. To-morrow, probably, it will have an excuse for the criminal.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Mr. Burton Asselstine left on Saturday for Kingston, to resume his studies at Queen's.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Miss Annie L. Graham, only daughter of Mr. James Graham, Carman, Manitoba, to Mr. William Simpson Murray, of Carman, to take place Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 14, at 2 o'clock, in All Saints Church, Greysville.

Mr. R. M. Harris left to-day for Quebec, where he will meet his wife who is on route to this country per steamer Empress of Britain. He was accompanied by his nephew, Master Lionel Harris.

Mr. Lisle Canniff left to-day for Rivers, Manitoba, where he has secured a position on the G.T.P. railway, and on Tuesday evening was presented with a beautifully engraved locket from the Holloway Street Sunday School.

At the Quinte: H. V. Fralick, Napanee; R. McKinnon, Guelph; W. K. Morley, J. F. Miller, H. LeBoutillier, T. Armstrong, P. Lafayt, T. E. Cunningham, H. A. Mattinson, J. Levinson, Jr., W. Earl, F. L. Barlow, T. L. Vineberg, J. F. Bowden, F. S. Arntfield and wife, A. D. Hodgins, W. H. Seed, E. Shepherd, E. McKay, J. B. Nixon, I. Pratt, H. Blackstock, E. Crabtree, Montreal; M. D. Hamilton and wife, A. J. Doke, H. Logan, J. R. MacNicol, T. H. Carter, P. H. Sims, J. A. Aycearst, H. B. Stock, G. Campbell, M. E. Gilbert, R. Dickson, Toronto; S. C. Dutton, Quebec; J. G. Murray, Ottawa; Thos. Donnelly, P. J. Johnson, Deseronto; J. J. Powers, Rochester; J. A. Wilson, Moose Jaw, Sask.; Mrs. Alfred Brignall, Vancouver, B.C.; T. L. Armstrong, Waterloo; J. J. Eagan, J. F. Ferguson, Buffalo; A. Lindsay, Niagara Falls; C. H. Shield, Peterboro; W. B. Skinner, Kingston; E. B. Fielding, Hamilton.

The Children's Aid.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society, held last Monday, it was decided to hold their annual meeting on the 20th inst. Please keep that evening open. The Agent had an attack of lumbago last week, and on making an attempt to resume his duties on Saturday last was obliged to beat a hasty retreat from the arena of activity and again be submissive to the powers that be, which will explain why the money has not been collected from the boxes for the past month.

At the meeting it was mooted that owing to the shortness of funds it may be necessary to dispense with the services of the Agent.

If every one of half the population of Belleville will put 1c per week into the collection boxes provided for that purpose, (at some of the stores banks, and Post office) it will not be necessary to mention dispensing with the Agent again.

The Agent hates begging either for himself, or for others, and he wishes to acknowledge and thank those merchants who have so generously volunteered gifts of clothing, boots, etc., which enables him to help some to education and self respect. He is endeavoring to do a work for the benefit, not only of the present generation, but also of generations to come, and if the people of Belleville will uphold him he will certainly not spare any effort to bring about good for the children. It may be your boy or girl who will need his help. Who can tell?—Com.

Died in Albury.

MRS. JOHN PHILLIPS.

Mrs. John Phillips, a resident of Albury, Prince Edward County, died this morning. Deceased, who was 45 years of age, was a daughter of Mrs. S. Sinfield, of this city, and lived for many years in Sidney township. Four years ago the family removed to Albury. The deceased was a lady highly respected and had a large circle of friends. She was a member of the Methodist Church. A husband and seven children survive.

Painful Experience Of Deseronto Bride

Peterboro, Oct. 7.—To have his bride become ill with appendicitis and removed to the hospital, was the unpleasant experience of a Deseronto man who was spending his honeymoon in Peterboro.

The couple came here a few days ago and have been married less than a week. They had only been in the city three days when the bride was taken ill and the doctor who was called pronounced it a case of appendicitis. She was removed to the hospital and underwent an operation and is getting along nicely.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

Becoming Abusive.

The editor of the Globe has not yet recovered from the castigation he received at the hands of the Hon. R. P. Roblin, as is shown by his ravings in the Globe of the 5th inst.

Commenting upon the character and reputation of those who have appeared on the platform with Mr. Borden, urging the rejection by the people of Laurier candidates, he thus refers to them: "The vulgarity of speech of "a man like Hon. R. P. Roblin is not "half so objectionable as is the no"torious political character of the "man himself."

"If," continues this meek and gentle dove, "Mr. Borden were ignorant beforehand, and yet failed at the first meeting to size up such a man, he is lacking in the intellectual and moral penetration needful to the leader of a Government."

Fancy a man who is supporting those by whom Sir Wilfrid is surrounded, writing about any one's "moral penetration." Is it not, to use a favorite expression of the late John Sandfield Macdonald, "enough to make a horse turn from his oats."

This style is continued, and Mr. Borden is denounced for associating with Roblin, whom he describes as a "discredited politician," adding "and his still more disreputable colleague, Hon. Robert Rogers." "Corrupt politicians like these," who never did run a clean election, but whose history is "most marked by shameless corruption, in the politics of Canada, whether Provincial or Federal."

He next turns his attention to Mr. Bowser, Attorney-General of British Columbia, and characterizes him as a "profane babbler."

Such are the charges and choice epithets thrown at the members of the Manitoba and British Columbia Governments. There never was a more apt illustration of "Old Nick reproving sin" than in this tirade of abuse by the Rev. editor of the Globe.

It is well for the Globe's editor that Mr. Roblin has left Ontario for Manitoba, or there would be "wigs on the green."

Sudden Death of Bright Young Lady.

At about 10 o'clock Sunday morning, the 27th ult., the angel of death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Huffman, at Frankford, and claimed their only daughter, Eva Susan. Her demise was very sudden and came as a severe shock to her many friends, having been confined to her bed only since Wednesday, with an attack of tonsilitis. Deceased, who was in her 20th year, had not been enjoying the best of health since early summer, when in June last, she was obliged to give up her position at the office of the Trent River Paper Co. Miss Huffman was an estimable young lady, highly esteemed by all who knew her. She leaves a father, mother, and two brothers, Ernest and Floyd, to mourn the loss of a kind and loving daughter and sister. The funeral took place on Tuesday from her father's residence to Frankford Methodist Church, where a very impressive service was conducted by Rev. J. S. McMullen, thence to Frankford cemetery for interment. The floral tributes were many, including three beautiful designs from the young people of the village and Methodist Sabbath School. The bearers were Messrs., A. Dewey, O. Tripp, J. Hendricks, H., W., and B. Bush.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

J. S. McKeown desires to announce to the readers of The Intelligencer that they have secured the agency for Parisian Sage, the marvellous dandruff cure and delightful hair dressing.

J. S. McKeown is glad to state that Parisian Sage is a rigidly guaranteed hair restorer.

It cures dandruff in two weeks by killing the dandruff microbes; it stops falling hair; it cures all scalp diseases, or money back.

It is a most pleasant hair dressing, especially for ladies, as it makes the hair soft and lustrous. The price is only 50 cents a large bottle at J. S. McKeown's, or by express, all charges prepaid, from Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

A Worthy Project.

A few months ago our readers were informed through our columns of a project on foot to commemorate in a unique way the fortieth anniversary of Dr. A. L. Crouter's connection with the Mt. Airy school for the Deaf. Dr. Crouter is a Belleville boy who went to the United States when a young man and, like thousands of other Canadian boys who crossed the lines, he has "made good" in such a way as to reflect great honor upon himself and upon his native country. He has been for forty years associated with the Institution at Mt. Airy — during a large part of the time as Superintendent—and he has, by his conspicuous energy and ability, raised it to a front rank among schools for the deaf; in fact it would not be too much to say that it is generally recognized as the leading Institution on this continent and second to none in the world. A year or so ago Dr. Crouter visited a number of the European schools for the deaf, and, among others, that at Margate, England, and, on his arrival there, he was surprised and delighted to see the Stars and Stripes floating from the flag staff. On mentioning his appreciation to the Superintendent he was told the story of "the only endowed flag staff in the world," and its collection of foreign flags. Dr. Crouter was so much impressed with it that his friends conceived the idea of erecting a similar flag staff in his honor at the Mt. Airy Institution. The appeal for funds for this purpose met with a hearty response, and on June 15th last the formal presentation of the flagstaff was made with suitable ceremonies. It is the intention to provide an endowment, such as the staff at Margate has, that its care may be assured for years to come. It is also intended to supply a collection of about twenty flags, to include those of all the principal nations of the world. These will be used to honor foreign guests, as is done at Margate. In addition to this the appropriate flags will be flown on the birthdays of rulers, on national holidays and on the anniversaries of great events in history, and thus serve to instil in the pupils the lesson of the universal brotherhood of man, and at the same time provide an opportunity for informal lessons in geography, history and government. The Canadian flag we might add, has already been provided, this being the contribution of our Institution at Belleville.

Left Arm Taken Off at Hospital.

A man named Leslie Ogden was brought to the city at an early hour this morning, from Port Hope, and taken to the hospital, where his left arm was amputated at the elbow. Ogden is a moulder by trade, and last evening, at Port Hope, was upon the G. T. R. track when he was struck by an engine. The result was that his left arm was fractured to such an extent that amputation was found necessary.

Bench And Bar Dined Together.

The local Bar Association last night gave a dinner at Hotel Quinte in honor of Mr. Justice Teetzel, at which other visiting gentlemen, as well as the local barristers, were present. Col. Ponton presided. A feature of the evening was the presentation of three medals to Drummer John Swan, a veteran of the British army. A full report of the dinner will appear to-morrow.

The first two stretch wretched minutes into hours of misery for the modish fat woman these days. Her daily programme is slow strangulation from 3 p.m. to bedtime.

But this (to others) comical anguish of the well-dressed fat woman in hot weather may be avoided. Let her reduce ten or fifteen pounds and she can wear her stylish garb with comfort at 90 in the shade.

All she needs to do is to ask her druggist for 1-2 ounce Marmola, 3-4 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 4 3-4 ounces Syrup Simplex, take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime, and in a little while she should be losing from one-half to a pound of fat a day. At that rate she can soon get down into the comfort belt and do it without exertion, disturbance of her habits, or injury of any sort. For, understand, this is a harmless home mixture that doesn't cause wrinkles, cost much, or require any assistance from exercising or starvation methods to help it get results.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

TO-NIGHT.

The type introduced in the above drama, which comes to the Carman to-night, are familiar; they suggest in a delightfully entertaining way our own cousins and aunts or neighbors down the street. Parbury, the noted novelist, studious and amiable, his pink-and-white ruler; wordly wise cunning; the club man; the rejuvenated Colonel Armitage; the piquant girl secretary, and altogether the play affords a delightful evening's entertainment. Mr. Robert Ganthony, the noted English actor and entertainer will play the role which was played by Sir Chas. Wyndham and Mr. John Drew.

Prices 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1.

"BABES IN TOYLAND" MAKES RETURN VISIT.

"Babes in Toyland" comes to the Carman opera house on Wednesday, October 14, with all the original elaborate production of this great metropolitan success, which played consecutively for one year and a half in New York and over one year in Chicago. While described as an operatic extravaganza, "Babes in Toyland" is a name which indicates admirably by its vague suggestion that something unusual will occur in the course of the entertainment. Despite the indefinite character of the character of the title there was no question as to the definite nature of the hit made by the clever company of capable comedians. The principals and chorus are combined in an amusing and at times brilliant combination of jest and jollity, fun and frivolity, which not only gives all a "good chance" but also shows the remarkable skill of Mr. Julian Mitchell in designing and presenting song and dance ensembles highly artistic in color scheme and execution. The book and lyrics are the work of Glen MacDonough, both are replete with clean, clever humor. Mr. Victor Herbert, who gave us "The Wizard of Oz" and other tuneful operatic successes, has even exceeded his former work, and contributed some very ambitious music of a very charming character, of a light and spirited nature yet extremely tuneful and pleasing. The mountings are very handsome and the costumes, groupings and stage pictures in the best of taste, the dresses being notably picturesque and artistic in design. The entire original production will be given here as used in the New York and Chicago productions. Prices 25c, 50c, 75, $1 and $1.50. Plan opens Monday morning.

PANDORA

RANGE

Train up a girl in the way she should bake, and when she is married she will not depart from it.

"My mother taught me how to bake, and told me why she always used a McClary Range.

"Now I have a 'Pandora', and, as with mother, my troubles are few. After fire is started, I simply bring thermometer to desired heat and leave the oven in charge of the baking. It's built for faithful service.

"While housewives with other ranges are poking fire and changing dampers, I sit and read the 'Joy of Living'."

Twain's Emancipation.

An honorary degree was once conferred on Mark Twain by a humble institution in a Missouri town that had known him when he was playing Tom Sawyer there in real life.

It happened that the degree conferring cermonies took place one lazy day in June when newspapers generally were suffering from a total collapse of everything in the way of news.

One New York news editor raked the land with a figurative fine tooth comb and got a dry haul for his pains. Then, recalling that Mark Twain was getting his honorary degree that very day, it occurred to him that a message direct from the famous author might relieve the situation in the news. After much scratching of the editorial idea factory he evolved this query, which was transmitted to Mark Twain by wire:

How does it feel to be a doctor of laws? Please wire answer at our expense.

After a wait of several hours this characteristic response came hot over the wire from Missouri:

It feels like emancipation from ignorance and vice. MARK TWAIN.

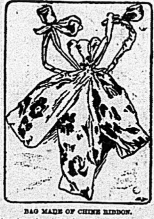
A TRINITY BAG.

Useful Receptacle For Holding Odds and Ends.

This pretty little bag is a very simple affair to make and is useful for containing the various odds and ends in the way of cottons, etc., one must always be provided with.

It is formed of wide chine ribbon; about one and a half yards being required for a small affair. The size and width, however, depend on one's taste and fancy and the purpose for which the reticule is required.

To make it, fold over the two ends evenly to form bags of equal length, leaving the central portion to form the third, which it will be noticed is rather longer than the others.



BAG MADE OF CHINE RIBBON.

Sew up the sides of the ribbon bag thus formed, run a narrow ribbon casing round all three, making a beading for the two outer ones, and run two ribbons through from each end and finish off each with a bow or tie the ends of the ribbon into a bow.

Elevator In Cathedral? Shocking!

All London is laughing at the utterance of a young American girl that any one who had false teeth would soon lose them on a motor bus, and then he wouldn't be going very fast. It seems hard for the Britishers to take the American point of view. The girl in question is one of a large party of young women sent abroad by an Indianapolis newspaper. There was merriment over the apt bus criticism, but the British bump of veneration received a shock when another of the girls said there should be an elevator to the top of the dome of St. Paul's cathedral. For an American, even an American girl, to suggest an elevator in Wren's monument was equal to deriding one of their most cherished institutions.

CANADA.

O Canada! vast Empire of the North!
Dominion fair, that spans from sea to sea,
Thy star 'mong nations now shines proudly forth,
Thy land's the chosen land of Liberty.

The loud Atlantic hails thy Eastern shores,
Blue deeps roll on thy South swelled by the breeze;
Waves from Japan break at thy Western doors,
Thy stern North-capes stand guard mid Polar-seas.

Huge wealth in forest, mine and field is thine,
Thy sons glean wealth from wild seas, unafraid;
Thy climate's rounded full with days divine,
The very winds of heaven lend thee aid.

Thy Spring's an odorous, joyous birth, and song,
Sweet Summer brings a pageant growth unfurled;
Keen Winter thrills, and makes thy people strong,
Thy Autumn yields a granary for the World.

Thou'rt clothed in trailing glory of attire,
Great plains, lakes, rivers, hills, disclose thy might;
Communion in thy temples doth inspire,
Thy scenic grandeur moves, and gives delight.

Lo yesterday, they called thee: "Great Lone Land!"
Now, prairie paths are gleaming belts of steel!
The musk-ox roamed, but late, where cities stand,
Thy building sons a quickening ardor feel.

Thy children's blood comes down through lines of kings,
Empire is thine, enriched by Britain's power;
Thy spirit to the Old-land homage brings,
Thou art Britannia's fair and shining flower.

O queen! who gave a Northern nation birth—
Rose, thistle, shamrock and the fleur-de-lis—
Thy flag flies out in splendor through the Earth,
Thy name is Canada! O God speed thee!

FIRST STEEL SHIP.

Maritime Provinces Begin to Recover Their Former Industrial Glory.

An event that marks the beginning of a new Canadian industry which may restore to the Maritime Provinces their former prominence in shipbuilding was the launching at New Glasgow, N.S., of the three-masted steel schooner James William—the first steel sailing ship ever built in the Maritime Provinces. The James William has a length over all of 1?? feet and depth of hold 14 feet 6 inches. She is rigged as a three-topmast schooner, is equipped with steam-hoisting gear and is classed as 100-A1 at Lloyds. The registered tonnage of the vessel will be in the vicinity of 500 tons. It is interesting to remark that the material used in construction was largely made in the Province of Nova Scotia, the larger plates and beams only being imported. Many of the plates were rolled at the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co.'s works, New Glasgow. The rivets made of Nova Scotia steel, as well as the rope, were manufactured in Dartmouth, N.S., and the canvas at Yarmouth, N.S. The lumber used for decks, masts and cabin is all native, except the main spars, which were brought from Oregon, and a small quantity of East Indian teak. Most noteworthy, however, is the fact that the labor employed in building the James William was entirely native. It is worth adding that the model of the vessel was also a product of Nova Scotia. The day on which the ship was launched was one of great rejoicing at New Glasgow.

The Disappearing Smock.

Time in its progress has had a very curious effect on the dress of Great Britain, and it is noticeable that, while fashion among the richer classes is continually striving to reproduce beautiful old forms, there is no revival of distinctive costumes among the masses. Any characteristic dress possessed by them in the past, once lost, has never been regained; they have no longer distinctive costumes of their own, a fact greatly to be deplored whatever the cause from which it arises. Especially is this to be regretted in the case of the beautiful old smocks, now almost discarded, but once so generally worn by countrymen and milkmaids alike.

Indians Quieted.

The difficulty with Indians of Salmon Arm has been settled by Superintendent of Provincial Police Hussey without appeal to force, and a dangerous situation has been averted through the tact and skilful handling of the veteran police officer. Rescued by their followers when sent to jail for an infraction of some laws, the Indians of the district assumed a threatening attitude. The chiefs have agreed to pay the fine. The braves implicated in the rescue surrendered themselves to the law, and have all promised to respect the fishery regulations in future. The Indians who effected the rescue will not be prosecuted.

How Should He Know?

A story is told of an eminent Ontario judge who, when traveling a few days ago in a Pullman car, arrived at the station where he had to get down to reach his country residence. Hurriedly seizing his handbag he hailed to the porter.

"Porter," he called, "do you suppose my carriage will be awaiting me here?"

The porter gasped and queried:

"I dunno, sir!" he said. "I ain't no spiritualist."

A TUTTI FRUTTI JAR.

Different Kinds of Fruits Are Added as They Ripen.

A most delicious preserve is tutti frutti jar. It is easily put up. All that is necessary is to have a gallon or larger jar, if one wishes, clean and dry. Put into it a quart of best French brandy or fine alcohol and a pound of sugar. Pick and look over carefully a quart of large berries, discarding all that are soft or imperfect. They should not be washed unless gritty and must then be placed in a colander and held under running water a moment, drained and allowed to dry.

To the berries add two sliced lemons, two oranges, first washing and wiping dry, but not peeling. Remove the seeds and slice rather thin.

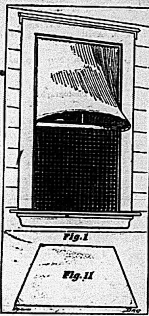
As other small fruits ripen add a cupful or a pint, with a cup of sugar each time. The lemons need two cups. Keep the jar covered and when peaches come pare, stone and slice a dozen; also plums, cherries, crab apples, currants. Almost every known fruit may be added except bananas, which are too soft, and only pears that are firm and good. No more alcohol will be needed, only sugar according to the acidity of the fruit added.

As the fruit goes in the strength of the spirits is so diffused that none of the fruit gets too much, and by next winter one has a jar of delicious, rich sweetmeat to serve with ices as well as with meats that are good with spiced sauce.

WINDOW AWNINGS.

A Homemade Invention to Keep Out Summer Heat.

A simple way to make awnings for windows to keep out the heat of summer is shown in Fig. 1. All the frame that is used is a stout hoop of wood or iron attached to each side of the window casing on the outside, with a piece of cloth, cut in the shape as shown in Fig. 2, tacked to the edges of the window casing, as shown, and to the hoop. If the hoop is iron the edge of the cloth can be sewed about it.



AWNING IN STAGES OF CONSTRUCTION.

A Case of False Pride.

How many girls are prevented from earning their own living by that false pride of either themselves or families!

It is astonishing how many girls will be "stay at homes" and grow stupid on account of this foolish fancy, which no one respects them for nor admires.

Once a young lady wanted to be a trained nurse, but her uncle objected to her being a "wage earner." She was a girl well adapted to take up this line of work, and how much good she might have done in the world if she had only listened to herself instead of this uncle no one knows.

He meant well in not wanting his niece to go out into the world, but she had no brothers, none too much money, and so she failed to marry well, was left on her own resources, not knowing how to do anything well, and her struggles were pitiful.

Sometimes it is the girl's duty to stay at home with her parents if they wish her and need her, but when there is no real excuse for her to stay home and she is anxious to learn how to work don't stop her.

A Novel Prize.

An odd little prize, which may easily be made, is a hanging pincushion formed of gilded mussel shells in which have been pasted small pincushions covered with bits of soft, bright silk flowered ribbon or velvet.

Each of these tiny shells is then attached to a ribbon cut in different lengths and the lot of them fastened together at top with a gay rosette, with crocheted or gilt ring for hanger.

These make attractive little prizes for hostesses who wish to entertain at cards or game parties at seashore hotels or cottages.

To Remove Ink Stains.

Hot tartaric acid will take ink stains out of white cloth.

It is not generally known, but to prevent cakes from burning place a little bran at the bottom of the tins. This will save a lot of grumbling and vexation.

A thin coating made of three parts lard melted with one part resin and applied to stoves and grates will prevent their rusting when not in use.

Hot sunshine will remove scorch.

ter laid eyes on 'em before. Old chap looked like a sort of corn doctor or corner spellbinder. Other was probably one of these longshore abalone men."

"Thanks," I muttered and dodged out again, leaving the beer untouched.

I cursed myself for a blunderer. When I got to the street the two men had disappeared. I should have shadowed the captain to his vessel.

The affair interested me greatly. Apparently Dr. Schermerhorn was about to go on a long voyage. I prided myself on being fairly up to date in regard to the plans of those who interested the public, and the public at that time was vastly interested in Dr. Schermerhorn. I, in common with the rest of the world, had imagined him anchored safely in Philadelphia, immersed in chemical research. Here he bobbed up at the other end of the continent, making shady bargains with obscure shipping captains and paying a big premium for absolute secrecy. It looked good.

Accordingly I was out early the next morning. I had not much to go by. Schooners are as plentiful as tadpoles in San Francisco harbor. However, I was sure I could easily recognize that falsetto voice, and I knew where the supplies were to be purchased. Adams & Marsh are a large firm and cautious. I knew better than to make direct inquiries or to appear in the salesroom. But by hanging around the door of the shipping room I soon had track of the large orders to be sent that day. In this manner I had no great difficulty in following a truck to pier 10 nor to identify a consignment to Captain Ezra Selover as probably that of which I was in search.

The mate was in charge of the stowage, so I could not be quite sure. Here, however, was a schooner—of about 150 tons burden. I looked her over.

You're all acquainted with the Laughing Lass and the perfection of her lines. You have not known her under Captain Ezra Selover. She was the cleanest ship I ever saw. Don't know how he accomplished it, with a crew of four and the cook, but he did. The deck looked as though it had been holystoned every morning by a crew of jackies. The stays were whipped and tarred, the mast new slushed and every foot of running gear coiled down shipshape and Bristol fashion. There was a good deal of brass about her. It shone like gold, and I don't believe she owned an inch of paint that wasn't either fresh or new scrubbed.

I gazed for some time at this marvel. It's unusual enough anywhere, but aboard a California hooker it is little short of miraculous. The crew had all turned up apparently, and a swarm of stevedores were hustling every sort of provisions, supplies, stock, spars, lines and canvas down into the hold. It was a rush job, and that mate was having his hands full. I didn't wonder at his language nor at his looks, both of which [illegible] somewhat mussed up. Then almost at my elbow I heard that shrill falsetto squeal and turned just in time to see the captain ascend the after gangplank.

He was probably the most disheveled and untidy man I ever laid my eyes on. His hair and beard were not only long, but tangled and unkempt and grew so far toward each other as barely to expose a strip of dirty brown skin. His shoulders were bowed and enormous. His arms hung like a gorilla's, palms turned slightly outward. On his head was jammed a linen boating hat that had once been white. Gaping away from his hairy chest was a faded dingy checked cotton shirt that had once been brown and white. His blue trousers were spotted and splashed with dusty stains. He was chewing tobacco. A figure more in contrast to the exquisitely neat vessel it would be hard to imagine.

The captain mounted the gangplank with a steadiness that disproved my first suspicion of his having been on a drunk. He glanced aloft, cast a speculative eye on the stevedores trooping across the waist of the ship and ascended to the quarter deck, where the mate stood leaning over the rail and uttering directed curses from between sweat beaded lips. There the big man roamed aimlessly on what seemed to be a tour of casual inspection. Once he stopped to breathe on the brass binnacle and to rub it bright with the dirtiest red bandanna handkerchief I ever want to see.

His actions amused me. The discrepancy between his personal habits and his particularity in the matter of his surroundings was exceedingly interesting. I have often noticed that such discrepancies seem to indicate exceptional characters. As I watched him his whole frame stiffened. The long gorilla arms contracted, the hairy head sunk forward in the tenseness of a serpent ready to strike. He uttered a shrill falsetto shriek that brought to a standstill every stevedore on the job and sprang forward to seize his mate by the shoulder.

Evidently the grasp hurt. I can believe it might from those huge hands. The man wrenched himself about with an oath of inquiry and pain. I could hear one side of what followed. The captain's high pitched tones carried clearly, but the grumble and growl of the mate were indistinguishable at that distance.

"How far is it to the side of the ship, you hound?" shrieked the captain.

Mumble—surprised—for an answer.

"Well, I'll tell you, you swab! It's just two fathom from where you stand. Just two fathom! How long would it take you to walk there? How long? Just about six seconds! There and back! You"— I won't bother with all the epithets, although by now I know Captain Selover's vocabulary fairly well. "And you couldn't take six seconds off to spit over the side! Couldn't walk two fathom! Had to spit on my quarter deck, did you?"

Rumble from the mate.

"No, by God, you won't call up any of the crew. You'll get a swab and do it yourself! You'll get a hand swab and get down on your knees! I'll teach you to be lazy!"

The mate said something again.

"It don't matter if we ain't under way. That has nothing to do with it. The quarter deck is clean, if the waist ain't, and nobody but a son of a sea lawyer would spit on deck anyhow!" From this Captain Selover went on into a good old fashioned deep sea "cussing out," to the great joy of the stevedores.

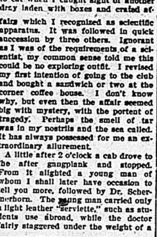
The mate stood it pretty well, but there comes a time when further talk is useless even in regard to a most heinous offense. And of course, as you know, the mate could hardly consider himself very seriously at fault. Why, the ship was not yet at sea and in all the clutter of charging. He began to answer back. In a moment it was a quarrel. Abruptly it was a fight. The mate marked Selover beneath the left eye. The captain with beautiful simplicity crushed his antagonist in his gorilla-like squeeze, carried him to the side of the vessel and dropped him limp and beaten to the pier. And the mate was a good stout specimen of a seafarer too.

Then the captain rushed below, emerging after an instant with a chest which he flung after his subordinate. It was followed a moment later by a stream of small stuff—mingled with language—projected through an open porthole. This in turn ceased. The captain reappeared with a pail and brush, scrubbed feverishly at the offending spot, mopped it dry with that same old red bandanna handkerchief, glared about him and abruptly became as serene and placid as a noon calm. He took up the direction of the stevedores. It was all most astounding.

Nobody paid any attention to the mate. He looked toward the ship once or twice, thought better of it and began to pick up his effects, muttering savagely. In a moment or so he threw his chest aboard an outgoing truck and departed.

It was now nearly noon and I was just in the way of going for something to eat when I caught sight of another dray laden with boxes and crated affairs which I recognized as scientific apparatus. It was followed in quick succession by three others. Ignorant as I was of the requirements of a scientist, my common sense told me this could be no exploring outfit. I revised my first intention of going to the club and bought a sandwich or two at the corner coffee house. I don't know why, but even then the affair seemed big with mystery, with the portent of tragedy. Perhaps the smell of tar was in my nostrils and the sea called. It has always possessed for me an extraordinary allurement.

A little after 2 o'clock a cab drove to the after gangplank and stopped. From it alighted a young man of whom I shall later have occasion to tell you more, followed by Dr. Schermerhorn. The young man carried only a light leather "serviette," such as students use abroad, while the doctor fairly staggered under the weight of a square brass bound chest without handles. The singularity of this unequal division of labor struck me at once.



Dropped him limp and beaten to the pier.

It struck also one of the dock men, who ran forward, eager for a tip.

"Kin I carry th' box for you, boss?" he asked, at the same time reaching for it.

The doctor's thin figure seemed fairly to shrink at the idea.

"No, no!" he cried. "It is not for you to carry!"

He hastened up the gangplank, clutching the chest close. At the top Captain Selover met him.

"Hello, doctor," he squealed. "Here in good time. We're busy, you see. Let me carry your chest for you."

"No, no!" Dr. Schermerhorn fairly glared.

"It's almighty heavy," insisted the captain. "Let me give you a hand."

"You must not touch!" emphatically ordered the scientist. "Where iss the cabin?"

He disappeared down the companionway clasping his precious load. The young man remained on deck to superintend the stowing of the scientific goods and the personal baggage.

All this time I had been thinking busily. I remembered distinctly one other instance when Dr. Schermerhorn had disappeared. He came back inscrutably, but within a week his results on aerial photography were public property. I told myself that in the present instance his lavish use of money, the elaborate nature of his preparations, the evident secrecy of the expedition as evidenced by the fact that he had negotiated for the vessel only the day before setting sail, the importance of personal supervision as proved by the fact that he—notoriously impractical in practical matters and notoriously disliking anything to do with business—had conducted the affair himself instead of delegating it—why, gentlemen, don't you see that all this was more than enough to wake me up, body and soul? Suddenly I came to a definite resolution. Captain Selover had descended to the pier. I approached him.

"You need a mate," said I.

He looked me over.

"Perhaps," he admitted. "Where's your man?"

"Right here," said I.

His eyes widened a little. Otherwise he showed no sign of surprise. I cursed my clothes.

Fortunately I had my master's certificate with me—I'd passed fresh water on the great lakes—I always carry that sort of document on the chance that it may come handy. It chanced to have a couple of naval indorsements, results of the late war.

"Look here," I said before I gave it to him. "You don't believe in me. My clothes are too good. That's all right. They're all I have that are good. I'm broke. I came down here wondering whether I'd better throw myself in the drink."

"You look like a dude," he squeaked. "Where did you ever ship?"

I handed him my certificate. The indorsements from Admiral Keays and Captain Arnold impressed him. He stared at me again, and a gleam of cunning crept into his eyes.

"Nothing crooked about this?" he breathed softly.

I had the key to this side of his character. You remember I had overheard the night before his statement of his moral scruples. I said nothing, but looked knowing.

"What was it?" he murmured. "Plain desertion or something worse?"

I remained inscrutable.

"Well," he conceded, "I do need a mate, and a naval man—even if he is wantin' to get out of sight"—

"He won't spit on your decks anyway," I broke in boldly.

Captain Selover's hairy face bristled about the mouth. This I subsequently discovered was symptom of a grin.

"You saw that, eh?" he trebled.

"Aren't you afraid he'll bring down the police and delay your sailing?" I asked.

He grinned again, with a cunning twinkle in his eye.

"You needn't worry. There ain't goin' to be any police. He had his advance money, and he won't risk it by tryin' to come back."

We came to an agreement. I professed surprise at the wages. The captain guardedly explained that the expedition was secret.

"What's our port?" I asked, to test him.

"Our papers are made out for Honolulu," he replied.

We adjourned to sign articles.

"By the way," said I, "I wish you wouldn't make them out in my own name. 'Eagen' will do."

"All right," he laughed, "I sabe. Eagen it is."

"I'll be aboard at 6," said I. "I've got to make some arrangements."

"Wish you could help with the lading," said he. "Still I can get along. Want any advance money?"

"No," I replied. Then I remembered that I was supposed to be broke. "Yes," I amended.

He gave me $10.

"I guess you'll show up," he said. "Wouldn't do this to everybody. But a naval man—even if he is dodgin' Uncle Sam"—

"I'll be here," I assured him.

At that time I wore a pointed beard. This I shaved; also I was accustomed to use eyeglasses. The trouble was merely a slight astigmatism which bothered me only in reading or close inspection. I could get along perfectly well without glasses, so I discarded them. I had my hair cut rather close. When I had put on sea boots, blue trousers and shirt, a pea jacket and a cap I felt quite safe from the recognition of a man like Dr. Schermerhorn. In fact, as you shall see, I hardly spoke to him during all the voyage out.

Promptly at 6, then, I returned with a sea chest, bound I knew not whither, to be gone I knew not for how long and pledged to act as second officer on a little 150 ton schooner.

CHAPTER IX.

I HAD every reason to be satisfied with my disguise—if such it could be called. Captain Selover at first failed to recognize me. Then he burst into his shrill cackle.

"Didn't know you," he trebled. "But you look shipshape. Come, I'll show you your quarters."

Immediately I discovered what I had suspected before—that on so small a schooner the mate took rank with the men rather than the afterguard. Cabin accommodations were of course very limited. My own lurked in the waist of the ship—a tiny little airless hole.

"Here's where Johnson stayed," proffered Selover. "You can bunk here or you can go in the foc'sle with the men. They's more room there. We'll get under way with the turn of the tide."

He left me. I examined the cabin. It was just a trifle larger than its single berth, and the berth was just a trifle larger than myself. My chest would have to be left outside. I strongly suspected that my lungs would have to be left outside also. For the life of me I could not see where the air was to come from. With a mental reservation in favor of investigating the forecastle I went on deck.

The Laughing Lass was one of the prettiest little schooners I ever saw. Were it not for the lines of her bilges and the internal arrangement of her hold it might be imagined she had been built originally as a pleasure yacht. Even the rake of her masts, a little forward of plumb, bore out this impression, which a comparatively new suit of canvas, well stopped down, brass stanchions forward and two little guns under tarpaulins almost confirmed. Her complement of boats was ample enough. She had two surfboats, a dingey and a dory slung to the davits. In addition another dory—the one you picked me up in—was lashed to the top of the deckhouse.

"They'd mighty near have a boat apiece," I thought and went forward.

Just outside the forecastle hatch I paused. Some one below was singing in a voice singularly rich in quality. The words and the quaintness of the minor air struck me immensely and have clung to my memory like a bur ever since:

"'Are you a man-o'-war or a privateer,' said he.
Blow high, blow low—what care we!
'Oh, I am a jolly pirate, and I'm sailing for my fee,'
Down on the coast of the high Bar-bare-e-e."

I stepped to the companion. The voice at once ceased. I descended.

A glimmer of late afternoon struggled through the deadlights. I found myself in a really commodious space, extending far back of where the forward bulkheads are usually placed, accommodating rows and rows of bunks—eighteen of them, in fact. The unlighted lamp cast its shadow on wood stained black by much use, but polished like ebony from the continued friction of men's garments. I wish I could convey to you the uncanny effect this—of dropping from the decks of a miniature craft to the internal arrangements of a square rigged ship. It was as though entering a cottage door you were to discover yourself on the floor of Madison Square Garden. A fresh sweet breeze of evening sucked down the hatch. I immediately decided on the forecastle. Already it was being borne in on me that I was little more than a glorified bo's'n's mate. The situation suited me, however. It enabled me to watch the course of events more safely, less exposed to the danger of recognition.

I stood for a moment at the foot of the companion accustoming my eyes to the gloom. After a moment, with a shock of surprise, I made out a shining pair of bead points gazing at me unblinkingly from the shadow under the bitts. Slowly the man defined himself, as a shape takes form in a fog. He was leaning forward in an attitude of attention, his elbows resting on his knees, his forearms depending between them, his head thrust out. I could detect no faintest movement of eyelash, no faintest sound of breathing. The stillness was portentous. The creature was exactly like a wax figure, one of the sort you meet in corridors of cheap museums, and for a moment mistake for living beings. Almost I thought to make out the customary gray dust lying on the wax of his features.

I am going to tell you more of this man because, as you shall see, he was destined to have much to do with my life, the fate of Dr. Karl Augustus Schermerhorn and the doom of the Laughing Lass.

He wore on his head a red bandanna handkerchief. I never saw him with other covering. From beneath it straggled oily and tangled locks of glossy black. His face was long, narrow, hook nosed and sinister. His eyes, as I have described them, a steady and beady black. I could at first glance ascribe great activity, but only moderate strength to his slender, wiry figure. In this I was mistaken. His sheer physical power was second only to that of Captain Selover. One of his forearms ended in a steel hook. At the moment I could not understand this; could not see how a man so maimed could be useful aboard a ship. Later I wished we had more as handy. He knew a jam hitch which he caught over and under his hook quicker than most men can grasp a line with the naked hand. It would render one way, but held fast the other. He told me it was a cinch hook hitch employed by mule packers in the mountains and that he had used it on swamp hooks in the lumber woods of Michigan. I shouldn't wonder. He was a Wandering Jew. His name was Anderson, but I never heard him called that. It was always "Handy Solomon" with men and masters.

We stared at each other, I fascinated by something, some spell of the ship, which I have never been able to explain to myself nor even describe. It was a mystery, a portent, a premonition such as overtakes a man sometimes in the dark passageways of life. I cannot tell you of it nor make you believe—let it pass.

Then by a slow process of successive perceptions I became aware that I was watched by other eyes, other wax figures, other human beings with unwavering gaze. They seemed to the sense of mystic apprehension that for the moment held possession of me to be everywhere—in the bunks, on the floor, back in the shadows, watching, watching, watching from the advantage of another world.

I don't know why I tell you this; why I lay so much stress on the first weird impression I got of the forecastle. It means something to me now—in view of all that happened subsequently. Almost can I look back and see in that moment of occultism a warning, an enlightenment— But the point is it meant something to me then. I stood there fascinated, unable to move, unable to speak.

Then the grotesque figure in the corner stirred.

"Well, mates," said the man, "believe or not believe, it's in the book, and it stands to reason too. We have gold mines here in Californy and Nevada and all them states, and we hear of gold mines in Mexico and Australia, too, but did you ever hear tell of gold mines in Europe? Tell me that! And where did the gold come from, then, before they discovered America? Tell me that! Why, they made it, just as the man that wrote this here says, and you can kiss the book on that."

"How about that place, Ophir, I read about?" asked a voice from the bunks.

The man shot a keen glance thither from beneath his brows.

"Know last year's output from the mines of Ophir, Thrackles?" he inquired in silky tones.

"Why, no," stammered the man addressed as Thrackles.

"Well, I do," pursued the man with the steel hook, "and it's just the whole of nothing, and you can kiss the book on that too. There ain't any gold output because there ain't any mines, and there never have been. They made their gold."

He tossed aside a book he had been holding in his left hand. I recognized the fat little paper duodecimo with amusement and some wonder. The only other copy I had ever laid my eyes on is in the Astor library. It is somewhat of a rarity, called "The Secret of Alchemy; or, The Grand Doctrine of Transmutation Fully Explained," and was written by a Dr. Edward Duvall, a most extraordinary volume to have fallen into the hands of seamen.

I stepped forward, greeting and being greeted. Besides the man I have mentioned there were four. The cook was a bullet headed squat negro with a broken nose. I believe he had a name, Robinson or something of that sort. He was to all of us simply the nigger. Unlike most of his race, he was gloomy and taciturn.

Of the other two, a little white faced, thin chested youth named Pulz and a villainous looking Mexican called Perdosa, I shall have more to say later.

My arrival broke the talk on alchemy. It resumed its course in the direction of our voyage. Each discovered that the others knew nothing, and each blundered against the astounding fact of double wages.

"All I know is the pay's good, and that's enough," concluded Thrackles from a bunk.

"The pay's too good," growled Handy Solomon. "This ain't no job to go look at the 'clipse of the moon or the devil's a preacher!"

"W'at you mak heem, den?" queried Perdosa.

"It's treasure, of course," said Handy Solomon shortly.

"He, he, he!" laughed the negro without mirth.

"What's the matter with you, doctor?" demanded Thrackles.

"Treasure!" repeated the nigger. "You see dat box he done carry so cairful? You see dat?"

A pause ensued. Somebody scratched a match and lit a pipe.

"No, I don't see that!" broke out Thrackles finally, with some impatience. "I sabe how a man goes after

PARIS CABBIES.

The War of Words That Comes When They Block Each Other.

There is no more entertaining way to spend an idle hour in Paris than to get into a taxicab and instruct the driver to go along some street where you will be reasonably sure to get into a jam or to bump against another cab. The charm of the experience is, of course, enhanced by your ignorance of what the cabbies say.

Should your driver merely graze the wheels of another cab he will turn on his seat and yell mellifluously at the other driver, who in turn will shout back an assortment of vowels. But the best is a quarrel between two cabbies obstructing each other's way. The conversation, translated as nearly literally as is safe, goes in this wise:

"Sacred name! Why do you?"

"Holly blue! I do not!"

"Stomach on the ground! You have the face of an ox!"

"Blue stomach! Are you in chains?"

"A bas! Name of a dog!"

"Mon Dieu! Name of a pig!"

"Wow (or words to that effect)! Name of a name!"

"A thousand deaths! Name of a name of a name!"

Now you begin to expect some doings. While you have not fully understood, you are satisfied that nothing but pistols and knives will wipe out the insults.

Unfortunately about this time the jam is untangled and you are allowed to drive away, but the other driver yells after yours:

"Aha! You are a little piece of brown soap!"

It seems that this expression is the "fighting name" in Paris. Were it not that your cabby owes a duty to you and must convey you to your destination you know by his facial expression that he would climb down and get that other cabby and muss up the city with him.

He contents himself with turning about and making a face in the direction of his enemy and of going through the motion of spitting at him.

Then he says "Yoop!" to the horse, and the war is over.

THATCHING.

The Ancient Art In the Low Countries and In England.

Once upon a time two amateur botanists were hunting bog mosses on Exmoor, on the confines of the land of Lorna Doone. About the hour of luncheon they found that their enthusiasm had led them far afield, a good hour and a half from the farmhouse which they had made their temporary headquarters. The only place which yielded promise of food was a shepherd's shack half a mile distant, so thither they went. That the shack, or, rather, its owner, a small, wiry, dark man with curly hair, could offer nothing better than brown bread, which was woefully "clit," or heavy, and raw onions is neither here nor there. The point was that the roof of the shack was artistically thatched with layers of plaited reeds.

"Feyther taught I th' way to do un," explained the shepherd, with an upward jerk of his thumb toward the roof. "An' his feyther taught 'im avore that, an' his feyther avore that, an' back an' back twill nobody can think."

"A hereditary art evidently," said one of the moss hunters to his companion. "But I never saw thatches like these outside of the Low Countries. Safe bet that this fellow is of Dutch descent." Then he said to the man of Devon, "And what is your name, may I ask?"

"Well," replied the shepherd, "most volk call I Van, but ma right name be Henry Van Torp. They do say that ma gurt-grandfeyther were a-vitin' against England an' were took prisoner an' married a Devon girl an' settled 'ereabout"—he indicated the southward sweep of the moor—"but these be a lot of voolish tales to ma thinkin'."—Craftsman.

A Town of Macs.

Scotsmen are remarkably successful as colonists. They are also very clannish. There are many prosperous settlements in Greater Britain where Caledonians largely predominate, but the names of these localities do not carry that fact on their face. Nobody, however, can be mistaken as to the prevailing nationality in "Macsville." This is a town in the Cobalt district of Nova Scotia. You will be perfectly safe in accosting anybody there thus: "I say, Mac."—London Chronicle.

In the Depths of the Sea.

The quantity of light emitted by many minute deep sea animals is so great as to supply ever definite areas of the sea bottom a sufficient illumination to render visible the colors of the animals themselves. Some cephalopods are furnished with apparatus which reflects the light from their phosphorescent bodies upon the sea bottom over which they float. This reflecting apparatus is spoken of as "an efficient bullseye lantern for use in hunting through the abysmal darkness."

The Contrary.

"I dropped some money in the market today," announced Mr. Wyss at the dinner table.

"Again?" exclaimed Mrs. Wyss reproachfully.

"No," replied Mr. Wyss mournfully; "a loss."

Objectively Considered.

Ruggles—What horsepower is your new automobile? Ramage—Two, I guess. That's the horsepower it took to haul it to the repair shop when it broke down on a country road the other day.

Won Her a Diadem.

How did the French come into Sicily? A woman did it. At a festive entertainment held at a French court Beatrice, countess of Savoy and wife of Charles of Anjou, the brother of Louis IX. of France, was removed from the superior range of seats occupied by her two younger sisters, the queen of France and the queen of England. Mortified by the humiliation, she returned to her apartments and burst into tears. Upon learning the cause of her chagrin and her saying that she would be able to give up her life to confine her tresses for one hour beneath a diadem Charles embraced her affectionately and said, "Set your heart at rest, countess, for before long I will make you a greater queen than either of your sisters." So he promised her. He defeated Manfred, the last of the Norman kings, and caused Conradino, the great-grandson of the Emperor Frederick, to be mercilessly slain, he himself and Beatrice witnessing the scene. Upon the death of his brother Charles became king of Naples, thus fulfilling the cherished desire of his wife for a diadem.

The Wrist and the Arm.

The real wrist, as one might say, is the elbow joint. It is all hand, practically speaking, from that point to the tips of the fingers. When you turn your wrist it is the whole forearm that makes the twist, and every movement of the fingers is controlled by the muscles of the forearm. The power to turn the wrist to and fro at the elbow joint is possessed only by human beings and monkeys, and even the higher apes are not able to do the trick nearly as well as we can. In this movement the great biceps muscle in the upper arm is importantly concerned, its powerful action in turning the forearm outward being accountable for the fact that we are able to put so much more strength into a twist in that direction than the opposite way. Many of our most familiar tools indeed, such as the screwdriver, are made with reference to the anatomical peculiarity in question. It is for this reason and no other that all screws turn to the right.

Reed and Strout.

Thomas B. Reed served in the navy during the civil war, and in 1865 he returned to Portland to practice law. One of the strongest men at the Portland bar at the time was A. A. Strout. Before beginning the trial of a suit it was Strout's habit to inquire of every juror as to the state of his health and impress each with the idea that the lawyer was solicitous of that juror's personal welfare. Reed and Strout were constantly antagonizing each other, though they were very good friends. In nearly every case of importance Strout and Reed were on opposite sides. It was annoying indeed for the suave Strout to hear Reed drawl out before the opening of a case:

"Well, your honor, Brother Strout having finished his morning task of shaking hands with the jury, we may now, I hope, proceed with the business of the court."

Beating Women.

"If it is true that national adages give an insight into the ideas of a people," says the Berlin Radical, "women must occupy a strange position in Russia. One of these old saws runs, 'Love your wife as much as your mule,' and another tells the good man, 'Shake your wife as you would a fruit tree.' That woman is not considered frail is shown by the adage, 'You may safely beat your wife with a broom handle, for she is not made of porcelain.' Beating must be considered a wholesome pastime, to judge from the saying, 'If your wife deserves a beating in the morning, remind her of her faults by giving her another at noon.' In justification of this kind of attention the Russian says, 'The more a man beats his wife the better his meals will be.'"

The Sea Serpent Myth.

It is possible, even probable, that the sea serpent myth started in all good faith. In the southern seas grow the gigantic algae, the largest of which measure from 400 to 600 feet in length. These when rolled on the beach form enormous cables several hundred feet long and as thick as a good sized tree trunk. Such cables washed out to sea by storms may very easily have given rise to the farfamed but yet undiscovered sea serpent.—New York American.

Nice, Easy Job.

The following advertisement recently appeared in an English newspaper: "Man required for demonstration purpose an old English rack (star chamber pattern); would have to be slightly stretched to show how rack worked; man should be short to start with."

Quite Fortunate.

New Girl (timidly)—I s'pose you are a fine cook, mum? Young Mistress—Bless me, no! I don't know anything about it. New Girl (relieved)—Then we'll get along famously, mum. I don't either.—New York Journal.

The Pearl of Great Price.

"Put disposition above beauty," is the advice of a modern sage to the young man who thinks of taking to himself a wife. But it requires such a long time to discover disposition.—Providence Journal.

Conflicting.

"There is safety in numbers," quoted the wise guy.

"And yet we are told that too many cooks spoil the broth," added the simple mug.—Philadelphia Record.

The brave man may fall, but he cannot yield.—Irish Proverb.

PTOMAINE POISONING.

How to Prevent It In Meat, Fis Crabs.

The reports of cases of pto poisoning from eating crabs s be a warning to housekeepers cooks as to all kinds of pto dangers. A ptomaine is not crobe, but is the product of crobe, as all grain alcohol is product of fermentation, cause the yeast microbe, which ch sugar into alcohol. Alcohol itse therefore, a ptomaine, but as poisonous effects opinions will tinue to differ. Vinegar is an ptomaine, the product of the mi Mycoderma acete. This ptomai not dangerous when properly use

But there are many dangerous maines, the products of va putrefactive microbes. The mic themselves may always be kille boiling, but ptomaines may no so killed, as boiled alcohol is alcohol. The only sure way says Baltimore American, to prevent maine poisoning in meat, fish, or any other article of diet is to the microbes and thus prevent production of ptomaine.

Crabs are not healthy unless by severe and sudden heat, being thrown alive into boiling This practice appears to be but it is just the contrary, as the water causes the crab to lose sciousness instantly and its suff ceases at once. And any crab by boiling water can be eaten perfect safety.

If crabs are kept six hours boiling, they should be boiled for at least a few moments, which they may be kept safely another six hours. Then they sh be boiled again, for the same re as before, to prevent the produc of ptomaine. It is not safe to crabs, fish, meats or any other ed articles of food longer than or eight hours without reboi even if kept on ice.

Ice retards the work of micr but does not kill the microbe or his work. In fact, unless the gre care is taken by the housekeeper ice chest may become a most gerous incubator of microbes.

Water made boiling hot is m best defence against his infinitesi but often fatal enemy, since no crobe can survive contact with i

Climb It.

He had just finished telling elevator boy in one of the buildings about the disadvantag working inside. He called the tention of the lad to his own phys condition and said: "My boy, lived out of doors most of my There is one thing that is nex physical culture for developm and that is climate."

The boy smiled as the healthy completed his discourse.

"Remember, boy," he added, mate!"

He left the building, returning an hour later to find the elevator of order. The elevator boy gre him. "Well, mister, here's w you get a chance to demonst your policy."

"How?" was the question.

"Climb it," said the boy, and healthy one did.

Converted by Medicine.

A woman missionary who was a doctor had a curious experience Burma, where upon her arrival found a village community dying like flies with cholera. She mad house to house inspection, admi tered a specific and, having bro the back of the malady, left beh her several bottles of the medic to be used during her absence. U her return the head man cheered heart by the greeting: "Teacher, have come over to your side. medicine did us so much good we have accepted your God." led her to his house and into apartment sacred to his worsh There, arrayed upon the shelf, w the medicine bottles, and he, w all his household, instantly bo down and prayed to them with tha ful and contrite hearts.

Feast of the Garlands.

In several of the more rem Swiss cantons there is held what known as the "feast of the garland The marriageable maidens assem at sunset, sing, dance and merry. Each wears a chaple flowers on her forehead and carr a nosegay tied with bright colo ribbon in her hands. If a lad is tracted by a maid he plucks a flo from her bunch. She pretends to notice, but when the merrymak breaks up at dawn she will, if reciprocates his feelings, tie the tire bouquet by the ribbon to handle of the door of the cabin whe in he resides or alternatively fl it through the open casement of bedchamber.

A Lucky Hairdresser.

Duplan, the hairdresser to Na leon, made himself so indispensa to the unfortunate Josephine a became so intimately acquainted w the emperor's affairs that he was tained in the service of the imper family when Josephine was sup seded by Marie Louise. He ca for the hair of both the emperor a empress, being paid 4,000 francs year for service to former and 6, for arranging the coiffures of the l ter. Ultimately he was the recipi of about 40,000 francs a year, his mands being constantly increased cause of Napoleon's restriction in fusing to allow the tonsorial ar to treat the hair of any other c tomer.

Still Alive.

"That flirt Miss Robinson has fused two suitors whom she distin ly encouraged. One of them threat ed to leave this earth." "And he carry out the threat?" "Ye "How sad!" "Not at all! He si ply went up in his airship! T second one told her that he wou be beneath the waves in an hou "Gracious! And did the poor fell drown himself?" "No; he was lieutenant on a submarine!"

Kemptville Wants Rev. Mr. Beamish, but He's Not Like Barkis

Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, Rector of St. Thomas' Church, this morning received a communication from Dean Farthing, stating that he had submitted to Bishop Mills his (Rev. Mr. Beamish's) name as the proposed Rector for Kemptville, which parish is at present vacant. The communication also intimated that the salary would be $1500 per year and a rectory. Rev. Mr. Beamish states that he will not accept the offer, as he desires to remain in this city.

The Assizes.

The attention of the Court was for the greater part of yesterday occupied in hearing the case of Richard Simpson, against whom a true bill for rape was presented by the Grand Jury. The complainant was Mrs. Hugh Denike, who lives at Bannockburn, Madoc Township. After the evidence had been submitted Mr. W. J. Moore made an eloquent address to the jury on behalf of the accused and Mr. F. Arnoldi, K. C., Crown prosecutor, made an appeal for conviction. His Lordship's summing up was not very favorable to the accused. The jury, after being out an hour, returned a verdict of not guilty, and Simpson was discharged.

The cases of Mrs. Wm. Day and Earle Fox, against whom true bills were presented for shooting with intent and inflicting grievous bodily harm on Wm. Day, were traversed to the December session of the County Court. The accused were admitted to bail.

To-day the case of Chas. Gay vs. H. F. Farnham, Wm. Rankin and Thomas Barnes was being tried. The plaintiff seeks to recover damages for malicious prosecution. It appears that two years ago Gay was arrested on a charge of theft, and convicted by a Magistrate, which conviction was subsequently quashed. Gay alleges the defendants in this action were responsible for his arrest, hence this case. Messrs. Porter and Carnew for plaintiff; Messrs. Mason and Morden for the defendants.

Still Winning Prizes.

At the Colborne fair on Tuesday, Mr. J. B. Brintnell, of this city, captured first prize in the lady's driving competition, also secured the special prize for the best lady driver. His fine outfit and mare, Lottie, was driven by Mrs. H. Ketcheson, of Sidney.

Police Notes

Wesley Gray, who was appointed to the police force in place of officer Naphin, resigned, has reported for duty.

An an early hour this morning a bicycle was found on Front street and taken care of by the police.

Some party, between one and two o'clock this morning, made night hideous by yelling on Foster avenue. Although two officers visited the place they were unable to find who the disturber was.

Lumb-Fields.

Former Bellevillian Was Married in Brockville—Was Hotel Clerk Here.

The Brockville Recorder has this notice of the marriage of a gentleman who was formerly clerk at the Anglo in this city.

This morning at eight o'clock St. Peter's church was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding, when Miss Alice Maud, daughter of Mrs. Edward Field, Pine and Park streets, became the wife of Capt. Harold M. Lumb. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. H. H. Bedford-Jones.

The ceremony over Capt. and Mrs. Lumb were driven to the Waterworks wharf, where they boarded the steamer Toronto on a two weeks' trip to the Lower St. Lawrence and the Saguenay. Upon returning they will reside here.

Capt. Lumb is a son of the late Harold Lumb, K.C., M.P. for one of the Liverpool divisions in the English House of Commons. His bride is a Brockville lady held in the highest esteem and popular with all her acquaintances.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure Send for circulars, free.

Will Continue as Mayor.

Ottawa, Oct. 8.—Mayor D'Arcy Scott, recently appointed chief of the Board of Railway Commissioners, will in all probability continue to occupy the mayoralty chair till the end of the year. Should any case in which the city is interested come before the board he will not sit.

KITCHEN WRINKLES.

A Few New Recipes For the Home Cookbook.

Dainty Ribbon Sandwiches.—Cut the crust from a loaf of white and of brown bread, leaving them as near of a size as possible. Cut three slices one-half inch thick from each loaf. Spread with butter, peanut butter, jelly or cream cheese, according to the function they are to be used for. Put the six slices together in alternate layers and press firmly. Trim the edges of the cube evenly, then with a sharp knife cut into slices about three-quarters of an inch thick. These make pretty sandwiches, which can be handled daintily.

To Make Peanut Butter.—Pound or grind to a powder one cupful of shelled and skinned peanuts, freshly roasted. Rub into this half a cup of butter. Salt to taste and work to a smooth paste for use. This makes delicious sandwiches for picnics or luncheons.

Real Irish Crumpets.—Take three-quarters of a cup of powdered sugar, a tablespoonful of lard, four cups of crumpet flour, an egg and a pint of sweet milk.

Crumpet Flour.—Eight and three-quarter pounds of flour, two and a quarter ounces of baking soda, three-quarter ounce cream of tartar and two and a half ounces of baking powder. Mix well. Crumpets should be baked in iron rings placed on a pan.

Delicious Banana Toast.—Toast two slices of bread, butter them, slice banana lengthwise and fry in butter and lay between toast. You will find this a delicious dish for breakfast.

Queen of Puddings.—Put in a double boiler one quart of milk and one-half box of gelatin. When dissolved add the yolks of four eggs well beaten. Let it come to a boil or until it curdles, then add the white of the eggs with eight tablespoonfuls of sugar and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Remove from the stove immediately and pour into an oblong pan rinsed in cold water. Turn on to a platter and serve with cream.

This should be made the day before using and is a fine dish for Sunday dinner. If made correctly the pudding will be in two layers, custard and gelatin, and is to be sliced as ice cream.

POSTMASTER CHARGED

Grit Official Accused of Stealing Conservative Literature.

Warrant Issued For Arrest of R. L. Ralls of Fenella, Ont., Charges Him With Using Members' Campaign Matter to Pack Eggs—Investigation Will Be Held Next Week—Ralls Is a Laurier Appointee.

Cobourg, Ont., Oct. 8.—A warrant was sued here last evening for the arrest of Richard L. Ralls, postmaster at Fenella.

He is charged with the theft of Conservative campaign literature, and is accused of having withheld from delivery to those persons to whom they were addressed a large number of sealed letters sent by members of Parliament to electors in this constituency.

Richard L. Ralls is the postmaster at the unincorporated village of Fenella, in the township of Hamilton, part of the west riding of the County of Northumberland, about sixteen miles north of Cobourg. He was appointed postmaster by the Laurier Government some years ago.

He keeps a general store, in which the postoffice is located. He receives from his country customers large quantities of eggs, which he packs in egg boxes, or cases, and has for some time sold these eggs to John Platt of Cobourg, a large dealer and shipper of eggs.

In August last Ralls left a number of boxes, or cases, filled with eggs at Mr. Gillard's store for John Platt. Mr. Platt looked at the eggs, and discovered in the boxes, evidently used for the purpose of more securely packing the eggs, a large number of sealed envelopes, all of them addressed to electors of the township of Haldimand, who are accustomed to get their mail at Fenella postoffice. Each had stamped upon the envelopes "The compliments of G. W. Ganong, M.P.," or other Conservative members, and bearing the postmark "House of Commons, Canada, Free," and no other postmarks or marks of any kind upon them.

Ralls says the mail was refused by those to whom it was addressed and he felt at liberty to use it as he saw fit.

An investigation will be held next week.

LAURIER AT MONTMAGNY.

Six Thousand Travel to Attend the Premier's Rally.

Quebec, Oct. 8.—Over six thousand persons welcomed Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday at Montmagny. As soon as the train arrived at 3 o'clock, bringing about 200 excursionists from Quebec and the surrounding places, the people cheered and applauded enthusiastically, and when Sir Wilfrid stepped down from the train to the platform the band played national airs, while the people joined in the choruses. On the way to the meeting-place Sir Wilfrid Laurier was accompanied by Hon. Charles Devlin and Mr. Lillois. Near the Central Hotel a bouquet was presented to the Premier by a dainty little damsel, who was rewarded with a kiss. While this was going on some enthusiasts unharnessed the horses and Sir Wilfrid was drawn to the Town Hall by his admirers.

Everywhere on Sir Wilfrid's passage the houses were gaily decorated. Inscriptions, flags and banners floated in his honor.

Hon. Charles Devlin, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Dr. C. E. Cote, Mr. Louis Letourneau, Mr. R. V. Rousseau and Mr. L. Cannon also addressed the meeting.

"BOB" EDWARDS ROUSED.

Eye-Opener Man Has Dan McGillicuddy Arrested For Criminal Libel.

Calgary, Oct. 8.—Yesterday afternoon R. C. Edwards, editor of The Calgary Eye-Opener, laid information before the local police authorities, charging Daniel McGillicuddy, editor of The Daily News, with criminal libel.

This action of Mr. Edwards was brought about by an article which appeared Tuesday afternoon on the front page of a paper of which Mr. McGillicuddy is managing editor. The article in question was an unbridled attack on the editor of The Eye-Opener, his antecedents, his personality and his morals.

It branded Mr. Edwards as a man who was unfit for human society, and it did so in unveiled language.

McGillicuddy was arrested in the afternoon, taken to the police station and released on $1,000 bail. The preliminary hearing takes place today.

Babe Killed.

Lindsay, Oct. 8.—The 18-months-old child of William Baker of Angeline street met death yesterday in a peculiar manner.

A large candy pail, containing about six inches of water, was standing in the yard, and in some manner the child tumbled into it. Its neck was dislocated, death taking place almost immediately.

This is the second child of Mr. Baker to meet a tragic end this summer. Their four-year-old boy was killed on a railway crossing near their home by being run over by a Grand Trunk engine in April last.

Letter Carrier Arrested.

Toronto, Oct. 8.—Albert J. Love, a letter carrier, was taken into custody last evening, charged with the theft of two decoy letters addressed to W. W. Dunlop, Indian road. These letters were sent out to try and detect the thief, who had purloined two money letters which had been addressed two weeks ago to a resident on St. Clarens avenue, who is secretary for one of the Sons of England lodges. The letters were never delivered.

13 BURN IN ELEVATOR

Eleven Men and Two Women Die in Vermont Grain Explosion.

Large Storehouse, Owned by C.P.R. and Boston & Maine, Blows Up From Spontaneous Combustion In Dry Dust and Whole Village Suffers From Shock—Loss Is Estimated at $400,000.

Richford, Vt., Oct. 8.—With a concussion which shook the entire village a large grain elevator, having a capacity of 500,000 bushels, exploded late yesterday, causing the death of 11 workmen and two women, who were walking in the immediate vicinity.

The explosion blew off the entire roof of the big building, scattering timbers in all directions, and almost instantly flames burst out over the whole structure.

Twenty-one men were employed in the building. Eleven of these perished.

The dead are—Herman Lahu, 50 years old, leaves a family; Lucius Wright, 25 years old, married; Robt. Mandigo, 22, married; W. C. Barney, 50, married, leaves family; Ralph Haire, 20, single; Herman Niles, 25, married; Charles Narrows, 25, single; Louis Papineau, 40 married; Doma La Porte, 21, single; — Tuttle; a workman, name unknown, who is known to have been in the building, and who is reported missing; Mrs. Jeliford; Mrs. Guardo, aged 40.

Mrs. John Jelifore, who was walking with a companion along the Canadian Pacific Railroad track, close to the elevator, was burned to death, and an unknown woman who was with her was burned so seriously that she died last night.

The elevator was owned jointly by the Canadian Pacific and Boston & Maine railroads and was operated by the Quaker Oats Co. of Chicago. It was 150 feet in height, 130 feet long and 90 feet wide.

The exact amount of grain which it contained could not be learned last night, but it is known that the quantity was very large.

So quickly did the flames, which are supposed to have started by spontaneous combustion in the dry dust of the grain, extend throughout the building that the limited fire apparatus of the village was of no avail. Nothing could be done to prevent the entire destruction of the elevator and its valuable contents.

The heat set fire to a flour mill near the elevator and the shed, together with 75 freight cars, which were standing near it, were burned. Every building in the village was shaken as if by an earthquake when the explosion occurred and many people who were on the streets near the elevator were thrown to the ground with considerable violence.

This morning the fire is still burning, but no other property is threatened.

The wreckage from the explosion and fire blocked the tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railway completely for hours, so that it was necessary for trains to make a detour by way of Sherbrooke, Que.

The total loss is estimated at $400,000.

Fireman Fatally Hurt.

London, Oct. 8.—Fireman Frederick Ryan of the G.T.R., whose home is at Komoka, was fatally injured at five o'clock last night in a collision between a freight engine and a yard engine in the local yards.

Ryan was walking along the footboard when the engines struck. He was caught just above the knees and jammed between the water-tank of the yard engine and the boiler of the freighter.

No hopes are entertained for his recovery.

SERVIA MAKES TROUBLE

King Peter's Subjects Want to Fight Austria-Hungary.

They Resent the Surreptitious Annexation of Herzegovina and Bosnia and Mobs Surround the Palace Clamoring For Revenge — Hungarian Frontier Is Well Guarded by Patrols—London Is Pessimistic.

Vienna, Oct. 9.—War between Austria-Hungary and Servia is a recognized possibility, although it is believed here that it will be averted.

King Peter is in a difficult position on account of the clamor of the Servians for war, particularly since his tenure on the throne never was very safe.

The Austrians on their part have a new feeling of national enterprise on account of the forward movement in the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and would be more ready for further adventures now than they were a week ago.

That the Government recognizes the possibility, the military precautions in Hungary show. All the bridges over the Save and the Danube near the Servian frontier are strongly guarded by patrols and four Danube river monitors were concentrated at Budapest yesterday.

The Government explains that this manoeuvre was planned some time ago, but the Austrians would have Belgrade at the mercy of their guns if that were necessary.

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 9.—Great crowds again surrounded the palace ast night, shouting for war and calling for the king to appear. Finally King Peter, accompanied by the Crown Prince, came to the balcony, and implored the people not to cause disturbances. He said: "Trust me and my Government; both will do heir duty."

The crowd cheered the king, but continued to shout "war with Austria."

All of the Belgrade newspapers hreaten King Peter with the loss of his throne unless he takes up his word. One paper says:

"Woe to you and yours if Bosnia is not rescued."

The Politica says: "We can depend on 1,000,000 in all Servia, all of Montenegro and all of Bosnia."

London, Oct. 9.—More pessimistic eelings prevail here to-day with reard to the possible early settlement of the near eastern question. The demands of the Cretans for annexation o Greece and the protest of the Servian Government against the annexaion of Bosnia and Herzegovina, have ntroduced further difficulties. These, t is believed, will be finally overcome y the British Government, but are elaying the negotiations. Great Briain has no objection to the annexaion of Crete to Greece at the proper ime if the Cretans desire, but she onsiders that the present moment is nopportune.

With regard to Servia the Foreign ffice has just received the Servian ote of protest and has not had time o consider it.

Vienna, Oct. 9.—Information has eached the Government that Servia planning the organization of a nerrilla warfare in Bosnia and erzegovina. It is purposed to flood hese two provinces with armed ands.

Austria is taking precautionary eps to protect her frontier. The rail- ad tunnel near the fortress of Peter- ardein, Hungary, is now held by oops.

ailors Must Not Be Contaminated.

Tokio, Oct. 9.—There is great rejoicg among the Christians in Japan beuse the authorities have decided to eliminate dancing girls and liquor from the receptions planned for the American sailors when the battleships fleet reaches Yokohama.

The Young Men's Christian Association, the Seamen's Mission the English speaking churches and the mission school students are co-operating for the purpose of holding religious meetings and furnishing guides who will not lead the visiting sailors into temptation.

An Ovation For Bryan.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—The second session of the Lakes to the Gulf Deep Waterways Association was attended yesterday by as great and enthusiastic attendance as that listened to W. H. Taft on the opening day.

William J. Bryan was the magnet of the second session and his appearance on the platform and introduction by David Francis of St. Louis was the signal for a tumult that forced the Democratic candidate to bow repeatedly and wait many minutes before delivering the first sentences of his speech.

Brantford Girl's Narrow Escape.

Brantford, Oct. 9.—While riding along Market street on a bicycle at noon yesterday, Marian Bluing, aged 19 years, student at Brantford Business College, was struck by a street car.

She fell on the track, her limbs going under the fender, but with rare presence of mind she grasped the fender, throwing the bulk of her weight on it. She was dragged half a block through the mud before the car could be stopped, but escaped unhurt.

Killed the Editor.

Sabetha, Kas., Oct. 9.—Angered because of a news item printed in The Morrill News Thursday, Perry Royer, marshal of Morrill, Kas., shot and killed J. H. Schmocker, editor of The News, and then committed suicide. The shooting occurred in the main street at Morrill.

Four Suffocated by Gas.

Waterbury, Conn., Oct. 9.—Illuminating gas leaking into sleeping rooms in an Italian boarding-house, claimed four young Italian men for its victims yesterday.

Eight other men and two women were found either unconscious or partly so.

Committed For Trial.

St. Catharines, Oct. 9.—Police Magistrate Riggins yesterday committed Arthur E. Bull for trial before County Judge Carman on two charges of theft, totalling $50, from George Ca[illegible] proprietor of the Beamsville Bri[illegible]

Crown Attorney Brennan was present at the trial, which took place at Beamsville. There are more charges than the above mentioned two pending against Bull.

The Leader Visits Lanark.

Mr. Borden Speaks at Carleton Place and Pakenham.

Farmers From Various Towns of North Riding Drive In to Swell Conservative Chief's Meeting—His Own Accession to Premiership Not Important But Clean, Honest Government Is.

Carleton Place, Oct. 9.—Carleton Place and Pakenham, both in North Lanark, a riding represented by T. B. Caldwell, Liberal, in the last Parliament, gave R. L. Borden a great reception yesterday.

Pakenham is a place of 300 inhabitants, but many drove in from the country, and when the Conservative leader arrived 600 or more people were at the depot. Headed by the Almonte band, the visitors proceeded to the curling rink, where the meeting was held.

Mr. Borden's carriage was drawn by a dozen stalwart men and many others in rigs, on horseback and on foot, followed. On the departure of the train, full half a thousand people were at the station to give the leader a cheer.

Carleton Place was reached at 6 o'clock, and though it was raining, the vicinity of the station was crowded with people. Hon. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, and Hon. John Haggart were among those to greet the Conservative chieftain. Almonte and Carleton Place bands played the visitors to the hotel.

The meeting in the town hall was a repetition of the scenes Mr. Borden has witnessed everywhere in Ontario. The building was packed and the audience was in entire sympathy with the speaker.

In opening his address at Pakenham Mr. Borden, referred to the prediction of a previous speaker, that he (Borden) would be Prime Minister on Oct. 26.

"It is not important," said Mr. Borden, "to the people of Canada whether I am Prime Minister or not, but it is important at least that we should have honest expenditures of the public revenues, honest and clean administration of the public domain and that the power of appointment to public office should be recognized as a public trust, to be exercised in the public interest and not for party purposes, so that the selections may be based on character, capacity and public service."

Passing from the administrative record of the Government Mr. Borden took up some of the planks of the Halifax platform.

T. W. McGarry, M.P.P.-elect for South Renfrew, declared the Liberals had made no attempt to answer the charges against them, but had sought to hide their sins behind the cloak of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

William Thorburn, the candidate, A. M. Gregg, Dr. F. Preston, M.P.P.-elect, and A. E. Fripp, M.P.P.-elect, also addressed the meeting. The chairman was Thomas Thompson.

The time had come, he said, when no party could thus efface its corrupt acts. Referring to the prosecution of Mr. Greevy by a Conservative Government, Mr. McGarry said the reason the spoilsmen of the Liberal party were shielded by Government was because they must not be allowed to divulge who above them are more guilty than they. The great cost of the Grand Trunk Pacific was due to the tax on contractors, all of whom were obliged to contribute for campaign purposes.

A contractor in the County of Renfrew had contracts on the G.T.P. amounting to $15,000,000, and Mr. McGarry had been told on good authority that he had been called upon to contribute three per cent. of this amount, or $40,000, for the campaign. Moreover, this contractor had in his pocket a promise that this money would be returned to him in increased prices for his work.

HUSBAND FEARED BATH.

Pittsburg Man Had Not Taken One In Eleven Years.

Pittsburg, Oct. 9.—Alleging that her husband, William F. Erny, a rich farmer of Pine township, had not, to her knowledge and belief, taken a bath in the entire eleven years she had been married to him, Mrs. Mary Erny obtained a divorce from him, with alimony, yesterday. The report of the Master was made public yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Erny in her testimony explained that the fact that her husband would not go near a bath tub had caused her much worry and pain.

Postmaster Gets Bail.

Cobourg, Oct. 9.—Richard Ralls, postmaster at Venella, was brought here yesterday under arrest on charges of non-delivery of mail matter.

He was admitted to bail in the sum of $2,000, provided $1,000 by himself and $500 each by Charles Webster and John Field.

He will appear before Magistrate Holland on Tuesday at 10.30.

Graham at Guelph.

Guelph, Oct. 9.—Hon. George Graham arrived here at 7.20 and was welcomed by a large crowd and escorted to the Guelph Opera House by a band. The opera house was packed to the doors.

Election Postponed.

Prince Albert, Sask., Oct. 9.—James Wilson, returning officer of the Federal riding of Prince Albert, has received word that the election would be deferred a week. Nominations on Oct. 24.

Hamilton Pastor Moves.

Windsor, Oct. 9.—Rev. F. W. Hollindrake of Hamilton has accepted a call here to succeed Rev. Thomas Manning, as pastor of Central Methodist Church.

FOSTER ENTERS SUIT.

Wants $999 From J. W. Levesque of Laval For Libel.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—Hon. George E. Foster has entered an action for $999 against J. W. Levesque, M.P.P. for Laval.

The plaintiff claims that Mr. Levesque stated that "Foster had speculated with the funds of the I.O.F." and had caused that order to raise the premiums and reduce the value of the policies from face value of $1,000 to $750.

Hon. Mr. Foster states that these are false and caluminous assertions, and claims $999 damages.

Sues Hotelkeepers.

Chatham, Oct. 9.—Two most peculiar and unusual writs, each for $500 damages, have been entered in the Chatham registry office. Mrs. James Carswell is the plaintiff, and one is against Balke & Roberts, proprietors of the Grand Central Hotel, while the other is against Peter Toulouse, proprietor of the Idewild Hotel. Mrs. Carswell alleges that the hotel proprietors mentioned sold her husband liquor, and that Mr. Carswell, as a result, came home unruly and ill-treated her. As the husband is on the "Indian list," the wife considers that she has just cause of complaint against the hotelkeepers.

Lumbermen Can't Agree.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 9.—Coast and mountain lumbermen, at a conference in Vancouver, failed to come to an arrangement for the re-establishment of a price agreement for the Northwest market. The subject was discussed in many phases, but the coastmen decided that in order to permit some of the large Vancouver mills to work off their surplus of rough lumber it would be impossible for an agreement to be concluded with the mountain mills.

McGillicuddy Remanded.

Calgary, Oct. 9.—Dan McGillicuddy appeared yesterday morning before Magistrate T. Burns. T. M. Tweedie for the prosecution, Clifford Jones for the defence. The case was remanded until Oct. 12.

Some hours after Dan McGillicuddy left the Calgary station a special edition of The Calgary News was published containing the article which forms the basis of the charge of criminal libel.

Awakes Heir to $10,000,000.

New York, Oct. 9.—Waking Wednesday morning to find himself unexpectedly heir to an estate valued at $10,000,000, Theodore R. Shear of 364 West 120th street, believes his sudden accession to the fortune will make no change in the well-ordered routine of his life.

He is a lawyer, 55 years old, and has a wife and three children. The bequest comes from a bachelor uncle.

Fireman Killed at the Ball Game.

New York, Oct. 9.—Henry T. McBride, a New York fireman, was killed yesterday afternoon by falling from an electric light pole, from which he was trying to get a view of the New York-Chicago game.

Non-Combatant Shot.

New York, Oct. 9.—Robert Quiley, the 14-year-old school boy shot while standing innocently in front of his home during a clash of striking and non-union chauffeurs, died in the hospital.

TIMELY TOPICS.

One moment, gentle reader: Unless you are a Liberal, and have a pull, how much have you benefited by 12 years of Liberal rule?

• • •

You pay a lot more for many things now than you used to: that is really the only difference to YOU between present conditions and those in force when the Conservatives were in power. What need, then, is there for YOU to throw up your hat and cheer for a party which spends $112,000,000 a year in governing Canada, which was done for $48,000,000 a year by the Conservatives? Think this over, and vote for Borden and honest government on the 26th.

• • •

They gave Piper McIntosh a new gold watch. He will now be able to tell when it is time to quit playing the bagpipes.

• • •

But where will our genial friend carry that watch when he has his kilts on? Do they have watch pockets anywhere in the kilts?

• • •

"Let the lying go on," shrieks the Hamilton Times. As if the Times ever stopped it.

• • •

The question seems to be: Shall Canadian public affairs be disinfected? If so, then Borden must be placed in power. Things have reached the stage when merely hanging the clothes on the publicity line does no good.

• • •

A U. S. Congressman says his wife bankrupted him by her dressmaker's bills. Her name, by the way, was Eve. But when one thinks of the dressmaker's bills it must be confessed that the name was the lady's only point of resemblance to Adam's rib.

• • •

Hon. William Harty, Liberal candidate in Kingston, told an audience that the Liberals had "had Kingston by the neck for seventeen years," but, if they wanted to retain the strangle hold they must get out and fight. Conservatives in Kingston are now vowing that it will be Harty and his friends who will get it in the neck on the 26th.

• • •

The baseball agony in Gotham is over, and now, perhaps, Uncle Sam can take the proper interest in the presidential election.

• • •

It was the Irish against the Dutch yesterday at New York and the descendants of Brian Boru got it where little Mary wore the beads.

We believe that every properly constituted sportsman will regret it, too, for the Chicago team have won the blue ribbon of baseball by taking advantage of the shabbiest kind of technicality. If a British team, in any kind of sport, had beaten a Yankee team by the same kind of a technicality, a roar would have gone up from the United States which would have drowned Niagara falls, and it would have taken a week to undo the knots that Yankee editors would have tied in the Lion's tail. If the sporting spirit of the U. S. will stand for such shabbiness it is not a good omen for the nation, for a people, as a rule, can be judged by their sports. Win at any price seems to be the motto across the line. Let us hope that a sporting and national spirit may grow up in Canada that will be superior to that sort of thing.

The Kingston Whig is writing letters to itself in favor of Mr. Harty, and signing them "A Workingman." The sensible public cannot be worked by such archaic methods.

• • •

Nine years ago to-day old Paul Kruger sent his ultimatum. Quite a few things have happened since then.

• • •

Who will say that Belleville is not doing herself proud in the way of population. An increase of 293 in the past year is surely something to be well pleased with.

Our old friend, known to pressmen as "Dan" McGillicuddy, formerly of the Huron Signal, Goderich, now of the News, Calgary, has got himself into trouble by libelling Mr. R. C. Edwards, editor and publisher of "The Calgary Eye Opener." The action was entered, says a telegram from Calgary of the 7th inst., on account of an article published by McGillicuddy in his paper, the News in which Edwards is branded "as a man who was unfit for human society, and it did so in unveiled language.

"McGillicuddy was arrested late in the afternoon, taken to the police station and released on $1000 bail. Dan, you should know that even an "Eye Opener" cannot be legally libelled. Now is the chance for Sir Frederick to return the compliment and arrest "Eye Opener." Why don't he do it?

Down in Quebec they are calling Sir Wilfrid "L'envoye de Dieu," which to some people may sound like blasphemy. They do queer things in "Hold Quebec."

• • •

It took a Daniel to show the Eye-Opener man the writing on the wall.

• • •

The prosecution of one Bayne in Colchester has collapsed, but that won't prevent the Globe from making inuendos and slurs about it. But, in the language of the street, most people are "on to" the Globe nowadays.

• • •

A Pennsylvania woman secured a divorce from her husband, a rich farmer, because he had not taken a bath in 11 years. He surely should not have delayed it over ten years.

• • •

Looks as though it may be necessary to read the Riot act in Servia. The Servians are looking for trouble, and will probably get it. They say that if King Peter don't declare war he'll lose his throne. Then again, if he does declare war he's pretty certain to lose it. At this distance, it looks as though Pete's crown was surely one of the kind which makes the head that wears it uneasy. How would you like to be King of Servia, anyhow?

Hot Shot In Halifax.

Here are samples of hot shrapnel fired at Government grafters daily by the Halifax Herald. There is no mistaking its language or its truthfulness.

Have you, asks the Herald, noticed the conspiracy of silence entered into by the "Deaf, Dumb and Blind" and the grafter "newspapers"?

Not a word will they say about all the rottenness and rascality that the country is ringing with from Sydney to Vancouver!

Not a word about the Halifax $23,396.54 round house "rake-off."

Not a word about the $7,000 bacon contract swindle!

Not a word about the revelations of crime, by which an estimated sum of $125,000 was spent in the purchase of the Halifax seats for Roche and Carney in 1904—when "Borden was stricken down with a ruthless hand!"

Not a word about the half dozen Halifax men who got over one million dollars in patronage, and "the percentage of profit" they contributed in rake-off and to the party corruption fund.

Not a word about how that enormous corruption fund was gathered—not satisfied with Halifax's proportion from the huge "central corruption fund," the wholesale bribers here must demand a "rake-off" from the amount allotted for the purchase of seats in other counties—this ensuring a "solid eighteen."

Not a word about the way the public treasury has been and is being plundered—estimated by a famous Liberal financial expert at no less than ten million dollars a year for the last five years.

Not a word about the fact that all the money thus stolen and wasted comes out of the sweat and blood of the workingmen of this city and province!

Not a word about the cry of the people for relief from Government jobbery, waste, extravagance and rascality.

Not a word about the one hundred scandals of which the people got a glimpse during the last Parliament.

Not a word about the greatly increased cost of living; the trebled taxation; and the army of men out of work all over Canada; the prevalence of hard times and the gloomy outlook for the winter.

One Government "hack" wears a $200,000 "gag"; another has been paid over $40,000 to be "deaf, dumb and blind."

How is it possible that honest men can support such a crew?

Think it over.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"THE TYRANNY OF TEARS."

The above comedy held the boards at the Carman last night, and was greeted by a fair-sized audience. There were only seven people in the company, but most of them were excellent actors, and they gave a performance which was very pleasing. "The Tyranny of Tears" can safely be classed as one of the brightest of modern comedies, depending for its success not on horseplay or vulgarity, but on witty quips at some of the follies of modern femininity, especially that class of ladies who like to "manage" their husbands, and who, though grinding him with a silken string, still want to do the guiding. Mr. Robert Ganthony, as Mr. Parbury, was excellent; Miss Ella Cross, as Mrs. Parbury, might have been better, but Miss Hazel Stanmore, as Miss Woodward, the secretary, was very bright and pleasing. The rest of the cast were quite up to the requirements. The costumes and scenery were fine.

"BABES IN TOYLAND."

"Babes in Toyland," the gorgeous musical offering that is to come to the Carman opera house on Wednesday, Oct. 14, is conceded to be the best mounted production on the road. While the production itself is a marvel of art, there is much else that will interest and entertain. The eye is as sensitive to entertainment as the ear, and when the eye is pleased half of any battle is won. A selected chorus of forty charming girls make no less than twelve changes of costume from start to finish of the offering. They appear as citizens, then fairies, then dolls, then soldiers, then butterflies, then widows, and so on through the entire offering. A wardrobe mistress who served under the exacting Belasco, and who is a star pupil of that master of detail, is in charge of the costumes, and with a corps of assistants sees that each member of the chorus corps is dressed just properly before each entrance. And this corps was trained under the proficient Julian Mitchell, and that means there has been original ideas introduced that adds much to the magnetism of a powerful and clever offering. Prices 25c, 50c, 75c, $1 and $1.50. Plan opens Monday.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Mrs. Empey of Philadelphia, who has been spending the summer with Mrs Redner, Pinnacle street, left Thursday for Hamilton.

Mrs. Wm. Ethelbert Reed (corner Yeomans and Catherine streets) will receive for the first time since her marriage Thursday afternoon and evening, October 15th.

At the Quinte: A. W. Hargrave, A. S. Hart, T. E. Gray, C. H. Forster, J. A. Cameron, H. D. Patterson, R. W. Boyd, R. S. Baker, R. H. Rose, L. T. Moneypenny, A. S. May, J. E. Jones, J. B. Allon, H. F. Spencer, J. W. Wilkinson, J. D. Mayore, B. Strauss, C. N. Taylor, G. J. Marven, J. C. Denyes, Toronto; W. B. McLean, Brockville; Mrs. W. Cross, Master H. and L. Cross, Madoc; R. J. Telford, Rock Island; F. Gratton, Ottawa; Dr. P. Macdonald, Wingham, V. L. Cote, St. Hyacinthe; H. Vineberg, J. F. LaBelle, G. A. Harris, Montreal; S. R. Burrows, Geo. B. Jones, City; H. J. Duffy, Wilkes Barre, Pa.

Bench and Bar Dined Together.

Hotel Quinte dining-room was bright with wit and laughter and spirited incident from 7 to 11.15 last Wednesday evening — sensible hours for a learned profession.

His Lordship Mr. Justice Teetzel was the guest of honor, but the proceedings were delightfully informal, and the local Bar welcomed also Mr. F. Arnoldi, K.C., Mr. D. Sanders, K.C., Mr. E. Brown and Mr. Emerson, of Toronto, and Messrs. Moore and Cross, of Madoc. Sheriff Morrison was of course present to preserve decorum, and the law-makers were represented by Mr. J. W. Johnson, J. P. and M.P.P., who, during next session, will be struggling with the question of "Law Reform," of which Mr. W. C. Mikel is here the apostle.

After supper Mr. Thomas Ritchie, Colonel Stewart and Adjutant Barragar joined the gathering and shared the flow of soul.

The chair was occupied by the President of the Hastings Law Association, Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., and the vice-chair by Mr. E. J. Butler.

During the evening the chairman read the eloquent speeches made at the great banquet held in London in honor of Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister—fine examples of chaste and perfect modern eloquence. Incidentally it was pointed out that in the present British Cabinet there are four barristers and one solicitor.

A most pleasing and striking episode was the introduction and presentation of Drummer John Swan, formerly of the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, and now an employee of Belleville's great industry, the Lehigh Portland Cement Company—twice mentioned in despatches (by General Buller and Lord Roberts), with three medals—and seven bars—the Tirah campaign, Punjaub frontier—(1897-1898); Belfast (S.A.) Relief of Ladysmith—Orange Free State, Tugela Heights and Cape Colony (1899-1902). Bugler Swan has certainly a record of which any Britisher might be proud, and especially a member of the fighting Irish Brigade. The War Office sent out three medals to Col. Ponton for presentation, and they were pinned on the recipient's breast (accompanied with most appropriate speeches) by Mr. Justice Teetzel, His Majesty's Justice of Assize, Mr. Arnoldi, K.C., representing the Crown at the Assize, and Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., as an ex-President of the Veterans' Association.

The "distinguished Irishman," as Mr. Johnson felicitously termed him, made a stirring patriotic and feeling acknowledgment, promising to follow Judge Teetzel's advice to find something heroic to do along the line of civic duty as he had already done with the Inniskillings in the field.

Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., ex-M.P., in happy and eloquent terms proposed Judge Teetzel's health, and the Judge replied, commending the comingling of judges and lawyers at the social board, and extolling the potentialities of their common profession.

"Canada" was responded to by Messrs. W. S. Morden and W. Carnew.

Mr. John J. B. Flint, the veteran of the Bar, proposed the Toronto visitors and indulged in some delightful reminiscences of the olden time. Messrs. Brown, Saunders and Arnoldi fittingly responded, the latter giving a score of anecdotes of the old judiciary and practitioners of Toronto (with one or two of local flavor, regarding the late Lewis Wallbridge and George E. Henderson), which scored an immense success.

Belleville's three bright law students, Archie Cochrane, J. O'Flynn and Dick Ponton, were duly honored by a toast, and made excellent maiden speeches in reply.

"The City of Belleville" was proposed by Mr. Malcolm Wright and responded to by Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., and the old maxim as to corporations—"They cannot commit treason, nor be outlawed, nor excommunicate, for they have no souls"—was cited, distinguished and disproved.

Messrs. P. J. M. Anderson, A. A. Roberts, A. R. Walker and W. J. Diamond added to the pleasure of the evening, and Mr. J. Parker Thomas pronounced the legal benediction.

Judge Deroche and Col. S. S. Lazier were prevented by illness from attending.

Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King brought to a close a memorable meeting, at which absent members and those who have passed to the higher tribunal were not forgotten.

OWES CURE TO ZAM-BUK.

PROMINENT MANAGER'S TELLING TESTIMONY.

Mr. D. R. Gourlay, advertising manager for the well-known piano firm of Gourlay, Winter & Leeming, Toronto and Winnipeg, is amongst the prominent men and women who testify to Zam-Buk's great curative power. He writes to the company as follows:

"Gentlemen, — I have pleasure in stating that upon the recommendation of a relative I purchased a box of your remedy (Zam-Buk), and by a few applications entirely cured a very severe sprain of the back. While not given to indiscriminate use of, or belief in, patent medicines, I can conscientiously recommend Zam-Buk.

"Sincerely yours,
"(Signed) D. R. GOURLAY."

That is just where Zam-Buk proves its superiority! It is treated by men and women who have tried it, as altogether different to ordinary preparations. Doctors, hospital nurses, trainers, matrons of convalescent homes—all give Zam-Buk a good word; and better still, they use it. Zam-Buk is as good for muscular stiffness, sprains, rheumatism and sciatica as it is for skin troubles. Hockey players and athletes in general find it invaluable. For eruptions, pustules, scalp sores, itch, eczema, ulcers, boils, abscesses, blood poison, cuts, burns, bruises and abrasions, it is a speedy cure. Takes the soreness out of wounds almost instantly, and kills all disease germs, thus preventing festering and inflammation. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes for $2.50. Send 1c stamp for trial box.

Teachers' Thanks.

Dr. Coughlin, Superintendent of the Institution, received the following letter from the Secretary of the Prince Edward Teachers' Association, which speaks for itself:

Dear Sir.—The teachers of Prince Edward desire to convey to you their sincere appreciation of the very kindly reception and hearty hospitality tendered them on the occasion of their visit to your Institution, Friday, Oct. 2, 1908.

The day will long be remembered as one of the brightest and most inspiring in the experience of our Association. We feel that nothing we can say will adequately express our sympathetic appreciation of the great and noble work which you, our fellow teachers, are doing for the children of Ontario committed to your care. We will ever be ready to assist you in any way that lies within our power.

Yours very sincerely,
CHAS. TULLY, Sec'y.

The Mutual Life Assurance Co. OF CANADA

Bigger Profits to Policy-holders

It is easy to see why a policy in this Company is an excellent investment as well as a protection.

Last year, the new business amounted to $7,081,402—a gain over 1906 of $1,577,855. Yet the operating expenses were about the same as last year.

For the last five years, the actual mortality was only 47% of the amount expected. And the Interest Income exceeded the mortality by $198,103.

With an expense ratio to Income smaller than its competitors, with a yearly expanding Interest Income, and a favorable death rate, it is but natural that The Mutual Life of Canada is earning more profits, which go to the policy-holders in reduction of their premiums.

TIMELY TOPICS

To Polish Copper.

When there is no time to polish the copper in the regular way, an emergency shine may be quickly imparted in the following manner: Mix a cup of flour, a tablespoonful of salt and a cup of vinegar to a smooth paste and after dipping the article to be cleaned in hot water apply the mixture quickly and carefully with a soft cloth. Then wash in hot suds and polish with a dry cloth. Alcohol on a soft cloth is also a quick cleaner of copper.

Public Baths.

The first public bath in England for hot bathing purposes was opened in 1679.

A White City.

All of the buildings in Valetta, the capital of the island of Malta, are of white stone. There being no smoke or fog to discolor them, they are as fresh and clean now as when they were erected.

An Acre.

Measure 209 feet on each side and you will have an acre within an inch. United States land measure.

Mine Luck.

The Calumet and Hecla copper mine was discovered by Billy Royal, who found his lost pigs under the shelter of a "rock" which proved to be almost pure copper.

Fruit Skins.

The skin of an apple or pear is harmful and has been known to bring on acute gastritis which resulted fatally. The skins of fruits are meant for the protection of the fruit and should be no more eaten than the shell of a nut.

The Maoris.

The Maoris of New Zealand now number 42,000 odd.

Flannel.

Flannel will not harden or shrink if, when new, it is put into clean cold water and left for a week, changing the water frequently. Wash well in warm water, using a little soap to remove the oil. Flannel thus washed never hardens.

Bats.

Bats were the only family of native mammals found on the thousands of small islands in the Pacific.

Demolished Buildings.

Every year New York city throws into the junk heap enough buildings to accommodate a small city, or a population of 50,000. In the last ten years there have been torn down enough buildings to house 500,000 persons.

Oyster Growth.

The oyster grows from the inside by its throwing out every year rings or circles of a calcareous substance, and experts can tell you where the growth begins and ends for the year.

Vinegar.

A gallon of vinegar weighs more in winter than in summer, as the cold causes the fluid to contract.

The Compass In Russia.

Over a large area of central Russia the magnetic needle does not point north or south. It is in one part deflected to the west and at another part to the east, and at one place it points due east and west.

Trivial.

"Trivial" is derived from the Latin for three ways and means the petty gossip of the crossroads.

Waterspouts.

A waterspout is constantly spinning. The moment it ceases it collapses. At the distance of about a quarter of a mile above the sea level its spinning speed has been estimated at six miles a minute.

West Virginia.

West Virginia is twice as large as Massachusetts, twice as large as Maryland and as large as Connecticut, Rhode Island, Delaware, New Jersey and Vermont combined.

Rubber Tires.

Rubber tires have three natural enemies—light, heat and oil—all three of which should be guarded against.

INQUISITIVE EDWIN.

Things He Wanted His College Bred Mother to Tell Him.

"Say, maw."

"Well, Edwin?"

"Why do little boys have to go to school?"

"To get an education, dearie."

"How long do I have to go to school?"

"Till you are grown up."

"Then do I get my education?"

"No. You get it while you are going."

"Get it all the time I am going?"

"Yes."

"Huh! I'd rather get it now and not go to school."

"But you can't."

"Did you get one, maw?"

"I did, but I have no use for it."

"What's the matter with you giving me yours, then?"

"Tut, tut, child! Every person has to get his or her own education."

"Hum! Who's got paw's?"

"Why, he has."

"Gee! Nobody 'd think he had one, would they?"

"Your father conceals a great many of his attainments, son."

"What's a attainment, maw?"

"Something one has acquired in the way of learning or accomplishments, I believe."

"I think I know about accomplishments, maw. I heard Mr. Bingle say paw was accomplished."

"Are you sure? Mr. Bingle is ordinarily very accurate in his statements."

"Yes, I'm sure. He said paw was a accomplished liar."

"Ah, well, Mr. Bingle hasn't gone back on his record! Now run away, Edwin, and let me finish reading 'A College Girl's Unhappy Wifehood; or, She Was Taught More Higher Mathematics Than Housekeeping.'"

"But, maw."

"But bother! What now?"

"S'pose I don't get a education?"

"Then you wouldn't know anything when you become a man."

"Oh, that's all right, maw; I could be a juror!"—Chicago Journal.

Congratulations Wanted.

On entering his club one evening not long ago a young Philadelphian was accosted by a friend, who exclaimed:

"Why, Charley, you are positively beaming! What's up?"

"I'm in the greatest luck imaginable," responded the other. "You know I've been hanging about a pretty Yonkers girl for almost a year. During all this time she would never admit that she loved me. She would only say that she respected me. But now, old chap, congratulate me, for last night she confessed that she respected me no longer; that she loved me!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

PRICES IN BORDEAUX.

Ham Ninety Cents a Slice and Ice Ten Cents a Cupful.

"American women wouldn't complain about the prices of meats here if they once tried living in Bordeaux," said a New York woman who has just returned from a year of housekeeping in that French city. "The cheapest meat obtainable there is ham," she explained, "and that costs 90 cents a slice. Chickens are so expensive that every scrap of them, even to the head, is made use of by the Bordeaux cook. I remember my surprise when the first plate of chicken soup was placed before me at my own table to behold funny little red scraps floating through it. The waitress explained that those were the chicken's comb, chopped fine. To waste the comb of a chicken is considered an unheard of extravagance in Bordeaux.

"Meats are not only high in price there, but extremely poor. I soon adopted the custom of the wealthy families and sent my orders to Dax, the nearest large city, twice a week and had my meats expressed from there. The meats are no cheaper in Dax than in Bordeaux, but they are the best I have ever eaten anywhere. As if to make up for the exorbitant price of meat all vegetables cost a mere nothing, and the poor subsist entirely on vegetarian diet.

"One of my chief delights was the patisseries, where the most delicious cakes and tarts could be had for a penny or two each. They were of infinite variety and so delicious that after eating them it is easy to understand why the French say we Americans don't know what cake is. Every customer is given a plate and fork upon entering the patisserie and goes around the counters selecting her own. When you are leaving you are asked the amount of your bill, and your statement is never questioned. You pay what you say you owe.

"But how I did long for a plate of good American ice cream! It is unknown there, except perhaps at a formal dinner, when it is served in infinitesmal portions, frozen in some fancy shape or figure. Every one over there assures you that the French don't care for ice cream and can't be made to patronize a place which serves it. But when you buy ice you understand the real reason of its lack of popularity. A piece of ice which costs 10 cents will almost fit inside a coffee cup."—New York Press.

The Grand Vizier.

We have heard a great deal lately about the grand vizier as well as the sublime porte, but the former name is almost as little Turkish as the latter. The Turks, according to "Odysseus" (Sir Charles Eliot), seldom use it except to denote a rank as opposed to an office, and the grand vizier is always known as the Sadr Azam, Azam meaning greatest and Sadr literally breast, and so the seat of honor. Vizier signifies a bearer of burdens, the minister being regarded as taking over the burden of public affairs from his master. And a very burdensome office it has sometimes proved. "May you become the sultan's vizier" was a favorite curse in the time of Selim the Grim as a polite way of putting "May you be bowstrung."—London Chronicle.

Pure Nitrogen.

Chemically pure nitrogen, hitherto believed to be practically unobtainable, is now frozen out of liquid air in the new process of Professor H. Erdmann. When liquid air is evaporated at atmospheric pressure the nitrogen becomes gaseous at 195 degrees below zero and the oxygen at 182 degrees, and an intermediate temperature causes nitrogen to distill off in somewhat impure form. The nearly pure gas serves the purposes for which nitrogen is ordinarily required. The new process makes it possible to obtain the chemically pure, which is done by placing liquid air in a good vacuum, when the rapid vaporization of part of the liquid chills the remainder, solidifying the nitrogen in crystals that can be separated from the liquid oxygen left.

Increasing Our Ills.

It is rather surprising to hear that a German doctor who has drawn up a list of all the diseases to which the human body is liable has returned the number of them as only 1,100. Any one among whose acquaintances there is an amateur invalid would have supposed that there were many more ways of being ill than that. Eleven hundred is a very poor figure for these times too. With all the advance made in medicine in the past century one expects something in six figures at least. Still, the number of diseases known is mounting steadily. There are already dozens of ailments, from sleeping sickness to tennis elbow, that our fathers never had.—London News.

Jews the Kings of Chess.

In 1904 Dr. Lasker became the world's champion chess player by defeating Steinitz by ten games to five. This was a remarkable event, because Steinitz had up to then been a world's champion for twenty-eight years. It follows that the world's championship in chess has been in Jewish hands for no less than forty-two years. Dr. Lasker attributes this predominance of the Jewish genius in chess to the fact that its rules are entirely based upon those of self defense in the struggle of life, and Jews are adepts in this art.—Jewish Chronicle.

CHAPTER X.

AFTER my watch below the next morning I met Percy Darrow. In many ways he is or was the most extraordinary of my many aintances. During that first half 's chat with him I changed my d at least a dozen times. One mo-t I thought him clever, the next an r ass; now I found him frank, , a good companion, eager to se, and then a droop of his blond ashes, a lazy, impertinent drawl is voice, a hint of half bored con-ension in his manner, convinced that he was shy and affected. In eath I appraised him as intellect- a fool, a shallow mind, a deep mer, an idler and an enthusiast. result of his spasmodic confi-es was to throw a doubt upon accuracy. This might be what he red, or with equal probability it ht be the chance reflection of a lish and aimless amiability.

e was tall and slender and pale, uid of movement, languid of eye, uid of speech. His eyes drooped, closed beneath blond brows. A wiry hand lazily twisted a rather ted blond mustache. His voice vled his speech in a manner either fferably condescending and imper-nt or ineffably tired—who could which?

found him leaning against the taff- his languid graceful figure sup-d by his elbows, his chin propped nst his hand. As I approached the acle he raised his eyes and motioned me to him. The insolence of it was so superb that for a moment I was angry enough to ignore him. Then I reflected that I was here not to stand on my personal dignity, but to get information. I joined him.

"You are the mate?" he drawled.

"Since I am on the quarter deck," I snapped back at him.

He eyed me thoughtfully while he rolled with one hand a corn husk Mexican cigarette.

"Do you know where you are going?" he inquired at length.

"Depends on the moral character of my future actions," I rejoined tartly.

He allowed a smile to break and fade, then lighted his cigarette.

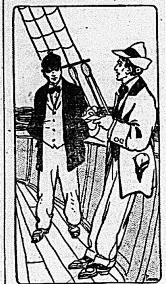
"The first mate seems to have a remarkable command of langu.ge," said he.

I did not reply.

"Well, to tell you the truth I don't know where we are going," he continued. "Thought you might be able to inform me. Where did this ship and its precious gang of cutthroats come from anyway?"

"Meaning me?"

"Oh, meaning you, too, for all I know," he shrugged wearily. Suddenly he turned to me and laid his hand on my shoulder with one of those sudden bursts of confidence I came later to recognize and look for, but in which I could never quite believe—nor disbelieve.



"You are the mate?" he drawled.

"I am eaten with curiosity," he stated in the least curious voice in the world. "I suppose you know who his nibs is?"

"Dr. Schermerhorn, do you mean?"

"Yes. Well, I've been with him ten [illegible]. I am his right hand man. All business I transact down to the last penny. I even order his meals. His discoveries have taken shape in my hands. Suddenly he gets a freak. He will go on a voyage. Where? I shall know in good time. For what purpose? Same answer. What accommodations shall I engage? I experience the worst shock of my life—he will engage them himself. What scientific apparatus? Shock No. 2—he will attend to that. Is there anything I can do? What do you suppose he says?"

"How should I know?" I asked.

"You should know in the course of intelligent conversation with me," he drawled. "Well, he, good old staid Schermie with the vertebrated thoughts gets kittinish. He says to me: 'Joost imachin, Percy, you are all alone on a desert island placed and that you will sit on those sands and wish within yourself all you would buy to be comfortable. Go out and buy me those things—in abundance.' Those were my directions."

He puffed.

"What does he pay you?" he asked.

"Enough," I replied.

"More than enough by a good deal, I'll bet," he rejoined. "The old fool! He ought to have left it to me. What is this craft? Have you ever sailed on her before?"

"No."

"Have any of the crew?"

I replied that I believed all of them were Selover's men. He threw the cigarette butt into the sea and turned back.

"Well, I wish you joy of your double wages," he mocked.

So he knew that, after all! How much more of his ignorance was pretended I had no means of guessing. His eye gleamed sarcastically as he sauntered toward the companionway. Handy Solomon was at the wheel, steering easily with one foot and an elbow. His steel hook lay fully exposed, glittering in the sunlight. Darrow glanced at it curiously and at the man's headgear.

"Well, my genial pirate," he drawled, "if you had a line to fit that hook you'd be equipped for fishing." The man's teeth bared like an animal's, but Darrow went on easily as though unconscious of giving offense. "If I were you, I'd have it arranged so the hook would turn backward as well as forward. It would be handier for some things—fighting, for instance."

He passed on down the companion. Handy Solomon glared after him, then down at his hook. He bent his arm this way and that, drawing the hook toward him softly, as a cat does her claws. His eyes cleared, and a look of admiration crept into them.

"By God, he's right!" he muttered, and after a moment: "I've wore that ten year and never thought of it. The little son of a gun!"

He remained staring for a moment at the hook. Then he looked up and caught my eye. His own turned quizzical. He shifted his quid and began to hum:

"The bos'n laid aloft, aloft laid he.
Blow high, blow low, what care we!
'There's a ship upon the wind'ard, a wreck upon the lee.'
Down on the coast of the high Barbare-e-e."

We had entered the trades and were making good time. I was content to stay on deck, even in my watch below. The wind was strong, the waves dashing, the sky very blue. From under our forefoot the flying fish sped; the monsters pursued them. A tingle of spray was in the air. It was all very pleasant. The red handkerchief around Solomon's head made a pretty spot of color against the blue of the sky and the darker blue of the sea. Silhouetted over the flawless white of the deckhouse was the sullen, polished profile of the nigger. Beneath me the ship swerved and leaped, yielded and recovered. I breathed deep and saw cutlasses in harmless shadows. It was two years ago. I was young—then.

At the mess hour I stood in doubt. However, I was informed by the captain's falsetto that I was to eat in the cabin. As the only other officer, I ate alone, after the others had finished, helping myself from the dishes left on the table. It was a handsome cabin, well kept, with white woodwork spotlessly clean, leather cushions—much better than one would expect. I afterward found that the neatness of this cabin and of the three staterooms was maintained by the nigger—at the peril of his neck. A rack held a dozen rifles, five revolvers and, at last, my cutlasses. I examined the lot with interest. They were modern weapons—the new high power 30-40 box magazine rifle, shooting government ammunition—and had been used. The revolvers were of course the old 45s. This was an extraordinary armament for a peaceable schooner of 150 tons burden.

The rest of the cabin's fittings were not remarkable. By the configuration of the ship I guessed that two of the staterooms must be rather large. I could make out voices within.

On deck I talked with Captain Selover.

"She's a snug craft," I approached him.

He nodded.

"You have armed her well."

He muttered something of pirates and the China seas.

I laughed.

"You have arms enough to give your crew about two magazine rifles apiece, unless you filled all your berths forward."

Captain Selover looked me direct in the eye.

"Talk straight, Mr. Eagen," said he.

"What is this ship and where is she bound?" I asked, with equal simplicity.

He considered.

"As for the ship," he replied at length, "I don't mind saying. You're my first officer, and on you I depend if it comes to—well, the small arms below. If the ship's a little under the shade, why, so are you. She's by way of being called a manner of hard names by some people. I do not see it myself. It is a matter of conscience. If you would ask some interested, they would call her a smuggler, a thief, a wrecker and all the other evil titles in the catalogue. She has taken in Chinks by way of Santa Cruz island, if that is smuggling. The country is free, and a Chink is a man. Besides, it paid $10 a head for the landing. She has carried in a cargo or so of junk. It was lying on the bench where a fool master had piled it, and I took what I found. I couldn't keep track of the underwriters' intentions."

"But the room forward"—I broke in.

"Well, you see, last season we were pearl fishing."

"But you needed only your diver and your crew," I objected.

"There was the matter of a Japanese gunboat or so," he explained.

"Poaching!" I cried.

"So some call it. The shells are there. The islands are not inhabited. I do not see how men claim property beyond the tidewater. I have heard it argued"—

"Hold on!" I cried. "There was a trouble last year in the Ishigaki Jima islands, where a poacher beat off the Oyama. It was a desperate fight."

Captain Selover's eye lit up.

"I've commanded a black brigantine, name of the Petrel," he admitted simply. "She was a brigantine aloft, but alow she had much the same lines as the Laughing Lass." He whirled on his heel to roll to one of the covered yacht's cannon. "Looks like a harmless little toy to burn black powder, don't she?" he remarked. He stripped off the tarpaulin and the false brass muzzle to display as pretty a little Maxim as you would care to see. "Now you know all about it," he said.

"Look here, Captain Selover," I demanded, "don't you know that I could blow your whole shooting match higher than Gilderoy's kite? How do you know I won't do it when I get back? How do you know I won't inform the doctor at once what kind of an outfit he has tied to?"

He planted far apart his thick legs in their soiled blue trousers, pushed back his greasy linen boating hat and stared at me with some amusement.

"How do you know I won't blow on Lieutenant or Ensign Ralph Slade, U. S. N., when I get back?" he demanded. I blessed that illusion anyway. "Besides, I know my man. You won't do anything of the sort." He walked to the rail and spat carefully over the side.

"As for the doctor," he went on, "he knows all about it. He told me all about myself and everything I had ever done from the time I'd licked Buck Jones until last season's little diversion. Then he told me that was why he wanted me to ship for this cruise." The captain eyed me quizzically.

I threw out my hand in a comic gesture of surrender.

"Well, where are we bound, anyway?"

The dirty, unkempt, disheveled figure stiffened.

"Mr. Eagen," its falsetto shrilled, "you are mate of this vessel. Your duty is to see that my orders as to sailing are carried out. Beyond that you do not go. As to navigation and latitude and longitude and where we are, that is outside your line of duty. As to where we are bound, you are getting double wages not to get too curious. Remember to earn your wages, Mr. Eagen."

He turned away to the binnacle. In spite of his personal filth, in spite of the lawless, almost piratical character of the man, in that moment I could not but admire him. If Percy Darrow was ignorant of the purposes of this expedition, how much more so Captain Selover. Yet he accepted his trust blindly, and as far as I could then see intended to fulfill it faithfully. I liked him none the worse for snubbing me. It indicated a streak in his moral nature akin to and quite as curious as his excessive neatness regarding his immediate surroundings.

CHAPTER XI.

DURING the next few days the crew discussed our destination. Discipline, while maintained strictly, was not conventional. During the dog watches often every man aboard would be below, for at that period Captain Selover loved to take the wheel in person, a thick cigar between his lips, the dingy checked shirt wide open to expose his hairy chest to the breeze. In the twilight of the forecastle we had some great sea lawyer's talks—I say "we," though I took little part in them. Generally I lay across my bunk smoking my pipe while Handy Solomon held forth, his speech punctuated by surly speculations from the nigger, with hesitating deep sea wisdom from the hairy Thrackles or with voluminous bursts of fractured English from Perdosa. Pulz had nothing to offer, but watched from his pale green eyes. The light shifted and wavered from one to the other as the ship swayed; garments swung; the empty berths yawned cavernous. I could imagine the forecastle filled with the desperate men who had beaten off the Oyama. The story is told that they had swept the gunboat's decks with her own rapid fires turned in.

No one knew where we were going nor why. The doctor puzzled them and the quantity of his belongings.

"It ain't pearls," said Handy Solomon. "You can kiss the book on that, for we ain't a diver among us. It ain't Chinks, for we are cruising sou'-sou'-west. Likely it's trade—trade down in the islands."

We were all below. The captain himself had the wheel. Discipline, while strict, was not conventional.

"Contrabandista," muttered the Mexican, "for dat he geev us double pay."

"We don't get her for nothing," agreed Thrackles. "Double pay and duff on Wednesday generally means get your head broke."

"No trade," said the nigger gloomily.

They turned to him with one accord.

"Why not?" demanded Pulz, breaking his silence.

"No trade," repeated the nigger.

"Ain't you got a reason, doctor?" asked Handy Solomon.

"No trade," insisted the nigger.

An uneasy silence fell. I could not but observe that the others held the nigger's statements in a respect not due them as mere opinions. Subsequently I understood a little more of the reputation he possessed. He was believed to see things hidden, as their phrase went.

Nobody said anything for some time. Nobody stirred except that Handy Solomon, his steel claw removed from its socket, whittled and tested, screwed and turned, trying to fix the hook so that, in accordance with the advice of Percy Darrow, it would turn either way.

"What is it, then, doctor?" he asked softly at last.

"Gold," said the nigger shortly. "Gold—treasure."

"That's what I said at first!" cried Handy Solomon triumphantly. It was extraordinary, the unquestioning and entire faith with which they accepted as gospel fact the negro's dictum.

There followed much talk of the nature of this treasure, whether it was to be sought or conveyed, bought, stolen or ravished in fair fight. No further soothsaying could they elicit from the nigger. They followed their own ideas, which led them nowhere. Some one lit the forecastle lamp. They settled themselves. Pulz read aloud.

This was the programme every day during the dog watch. Sometimes the watch on deck was absent, leaving only Handy Solomon, the nigger and Pulz, but the order of the day was not on that account varied. They talked, they lit the lamp, they read. Always the talk was of the treasure.

As to the reading, it was of the sort usual to seamen, cowboys, lumbermen and miners. Thrackles had a number of volumes of very cheap love stories.

(To be continued.)

Buying Clothing—and Horses

A man doesn't snap up a horse because he looks all right. As a usual thing, he leads the nag out where the light is good and strong and examines every hair of his hide. He squints under each hoof for the grand hailing sign of distress and peeks down his throat for dark secrets. He wants to know the horse's pedigree—and he is mighty particular about getting a line on the man he's doing business with. When all this is made satisfactory and the price agreed upon, the buyer will further stipulate that should the horse turn out a roarer, be balky or not otherwise as represented, he can get his money back.

This may be too much caution but it is mighty good business. A man buys a horse for use and wants him as nearly perfect as possible. Compare this caution in buying horses with the indifference usually displayed in buying clothes.

Nine times out of ten, a man takes the first thing offered. He does not examine its composition. He knows nothing about the quality, and less about the pedigree of the garments—where and how they are made.

He knows little about the man who sells the clothes.

Is this logical?

A man is in the company of his horse for a few hours, perhaps, a day.

You are in your clothes all the time you are awake.

You manage the world's affairs
—transact business
—meet strangers
—welcome friends
—make love and are married
—go to church
—in fact, spend two-thirds of your life IN YOUR CLOTHES.

"All of us can't be tailors." True enough—which is all the more reasons why we should buy clothes that have a pedigree—a reputation, and a guarantee at the back of it.

"PROGRESS BRAND" Garments are pedigreed clothes. Their pedigree—the "Progress Brand" trademark shown below—is registered at Ottawa.

They will stand the most searching examination inside and out.

They are made of the most dependable materials in one of the best equipped tailories in Canada, and sold only by the most reliable dealers with an unqualified guarantee—"satisfaction or money refunded."

Does it pay, or is it good business, to be indifferent when buying your clothes?

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Chicago Nationals beat New York 4-2 yesterday, thus winning the pennant. Matthewson, New York's star, was batted for 4 runs in the third. There was intense disappointment in New York, but Manager McGraw, of New York, sized the matter up this way: "I don't feel badly about the game, we merely lost something we had won before." There was an attendance of 40,000. Three-fingered Brown outpitched Matthewson, who was said to be stale and out of sorts. Chicago now has the pennant, but her reputation for sportsmanship is in shreds and tatters.

The world's championship series will begin to-morrow at Detroit. The second and third games will be played at Chicago on Sunday and Monday; the fourth and fifth at Detroit on Tuesday and Wednesday. If another game is necessary it will be played in Chicago.

The New York National Baseball Club has turned down an offer of $50,000 for "Christy" Matthewson, the star pitcher, made by the owner of the Chicago National League team. Matthewson weighs nearly 200 pounds, so Chicago must value him at about $250 a pound.

Chicago is favorite in the betting for the world's championship series. They have fewer cripples than Detroit. But Jennings says he will win. He said that last year, though.

GREAT CLEARING SALE OF WALLPAPE

AT

Scantlebury's

We have recently purchased at 37c on the dollar, the entire stock of Mr. John Cornelius. The goods have been brought to our warerooms and put in order and are now on sale at less than one half their value.

The stock has been so minutely arranged that small quantities can be handled without any difficulty of shortages. This is to say, we know what we have of everything and these small quantities in many cases will be cleared out at one quarter their valne. The Cornelius stock must all be closed out before the end of the year, as we cannot bother with small quantities in the regular working season and the advantage will be to the purchaser.

Never before such an opportunity of buying wall paper at such prices and this, too, right in the face of the advance of wall-paper prices during the past three months of 25 per cent. Wall paper will be higher in price in the future, but during this sale you will have the great advantage of bargain prices such at you will not recall or repeat.

With this stock of wallpaper we have 10.000 feet of room moulding purchased in the same stock, which will be sold at like bargains to those of wall paper.

Best Speller Is Seventy-three.

Mrs. Douglas Gilbert, aged seventy-three, of Pana, Ill., the oldest person to participate in the annual world spelling match in connection with the Winona Lake assembly programme, won first honors and was awarded a prize of $20. Without hesitation she spelled "concatenation," on which A. B. Curry of Memphis, Tenn., and Helen Servoss of Muncie, Ind., who carried off the second and third honors, went down. Other words that proved stumbling stones to the eighty contestants were erysipelas, surrogate, prerogative, plebeian, caoutchouc and innuendo. Five went down on plebeian.—Warsaw (Ind.) Cor. German English.

Judge quotes this sample of "English as she is wrote" by a German firm which wishes to tell Americans how to use a new mechanical saltcellar:

"It is necessary that is emploid only a salt table very fine milled and very dried. Another salt is to pound and to dry previously than in this case it is forming masses (crumbs). It is necessary that the saltcellar is not placed humid and is not touched with hands wets. By a good and rational use the cellar is functonning blameless and is of a unlimited durability. The cellar is the best."

MISS M. CAMPBELL

Our Population is Growing Rapidly.

Increased Nearly 300 in Past Year--Now Number 9808.

Belleville's showing in regard to increase of population is much more favorable than that of many places which do more shouting. City Assessor Thomas' report shows that, during the past year, the population of Belleville has increased by 293, and is now 9808. This is without counting in the students of either Albert or the commercial colleges, those numbered being strictly bona fide residents of Belleville. Were the students and residents of the suburbs counted in, the population would be fully 12000 or 13000, if not more.

Watch Belleville grow.

Presentation to Mr. William McIntosh.

A pleasing incident occurred last night at the regular monthly meeting of the members of the Belleville Branch of the Sons of Scotland, when Mr. William Clazie, of Thurlow, the chief officer for this year of Camp Rob Roy, Belleville, presented on behalf of the Camp, to Mr. William McIntosh, a handsome gold watch which was suitably engraved, and was decorated with Mr. McIntosh's initials.

Mr. Clazie embodied his own sentiments and those of the society he represented, and referred to the occasion of this presentation in the following words addressed to Mr. McIntosh.

"A most pleasant duty has devolved on me as the presiding officer for this year of our Camp Rob Roy. It is to convey to you the sincere thanks of this Branch of our Society, for your continuous loyal and untiring zeal for its advancement and prosperity, which you have always shown by your sound council and energetic work for its best interests, during all the years since you joined the Sons of Scotland, and in whatever rank you were called by your brethren's votes to fill. It has been recognized that often your efforts could only be carried to the successful accomplishment of our objects at great sacrifice of your valuable time and of your personal convenience, more particularly when the Camp had undertaken to celebrate the various national Scottish anniversaries on their appropriate evenings, or to organize and make a success of the different "Gatherings of the Clans" held in Belleville.

"The Gathering" on the 26th August this year was undoubtedly our best one. It was greatly enjoyed by the many hundreds who attended it, and has given this Camp a good reason for a proper pride.

By a unanimous vote of the Camp at their last meeting, a committee was appointed and was directed to choose a suitable keepsake, to mark the appreciation of your services in connection with the recent 'Gathering of the Clans,' as well as your hearty interest in all efforts to perpetuate the love for the land of our forefathers, which in its turn can only strengthen our love for the land we live in. I beg you will now accept from Camp Rob Roy, with our best wishes, this watch, which we trust you will long be spared to wear, and which your brethren have chosen as a mark of esteem for a man they are delighted to honor.

The Assizes Over.

The business before the High Court of Justice was concluded yesterday afternoon, and the court formally closed.

In the case of Charles Gay vs. H. F. Farnham, Wm. Rankin and Thomas Barnes, the action was dismissed before going to the jury. The plaintiff sought to recover damages for alleged malicious prosecution, but it was shown that he had failed to establish reasonable and probably cause why action resulting in the charge should not have been taken. Messrs. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; Mr. S. Masson for Barnes; Messrs. Morden and Cross for the two other defendants.

Elizabeth Brown vs. Anglo-American Assurance Company and British-American Fire Insurance Company. This action was settled by the plaintiff being paid $775 by the companies, being payment in full for her claim for loss by fire. Messrs. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; Messrs. Erickson, Brown and Saunders for the defendants.

John Hurst vs. Municipal Corporation of the City of Belleville.—An action brought to recover damages for injuries sustained by falling on a defective walk. It was proven that the plaintiff had not entered his claim in the time prescribed by law, but the case was settled by the payment of $50 to the plaintiff. Messrs. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; Bedford Jones for defendants.

Boys and Girls Won Equal Honors.

It will be remembered that School Inspector Morgan recently gave prizes to Public School children who wrote essays on the Quebec Battlefields. In the list of prize-winners, published in this paper, a mistake was made, for which our informants were responsible. It was stated that Willie Farrow, of the 4th Book, took 1st prize, and that Lillian Solmes, also of the 4th Book, took 2nd prize. As a matter of fact, they both took 1st prize, and the same remarks apply to Master John Wood Johnson and Miss Estella Barragar, who wrote as entries from the Third Book. Both took 1st prizes.

Alleged Forgery By 16-Year-Old Boy.

A young lad named Godfrey, aged sixteen years, son of Marshall Godfrey of the Monk Road, was arrested on Saturday and locked up on a charge of forging two cheques—one on John Young for $10.00, and another on Robert Campbell for the same amount, says the Bancroft Times. One of the cheques was made payable to Frank Baumhower and the other to Fred Baumhower. He succeeded in getting rid of one of the cheques at Kelusky's store in payment for goods, but when he attempted to use the second one in Mr. Reynolds' store the latter's suspicions were aroused and he made inquiries which resulted in young Godfrey's arrest. This is the same boy who shot his brother a couple of years ago while the two were alone in the house, but the coroner decided that there was not sufficient evidence to prosecute. He was committed for trial by Police Magistrate Jarman.

Young Godfrey was brought to the County jail in this city.

WINNIPEG MAN CURED OF RHEUMATISM

Remarkable Case of Cure After Specialists Failed.

Winnipeg, Man.—A prominent resident of this City, who for personal reasons does not wish his name mentioned publicly, but who permits us to show his letter to interested enquirers, writes to say that he was suddenly taken with excruciating pains in the back and side, which were pronounced by his physicians as Rheumatism. Hot applications were at once resorted to, the usual medicines administered, supplemented by electrical treatment, but all to no purpose. In his desperation he took Gin Pills on his own account, and in a few hours after taking the first Pill the pains commenced to subside. He continued taking them and in 48 hours he had not an ache or a pain left.
Gin Pills are sold at 50c a box—6 for $2.50. Send to us if your dealer does not handle them. Sample box free if you mention this paper.

New York Dairy Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Butter—Firm, unchanged; receipts, 5009.

Cheese—Firm, unchanged; receipts, 3213.

Eggs—Firm, unchanged; receipts, 8288.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Unchanged—Buffalo Quotations For Hogs Have Another Drop.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—London cables for cattle are steady at 11½c to 12½c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¾c to 10½c per pound.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—Receipts of live stock for Thursday, as reported by the railways, were 93 carloads, composed of 1055 cattle, 2745 hogs, 2408 sheep and lambs, with 60 calves.

Exporters.

No export steers were offered. A few bulls, generally of poor quality, sold for less than $4 per cwt. Good bulls are worth $4 to $4.25 per cwt.

Butchers.

George Rowntree bought on Wednesday and Thursday 250 cattle for the Harris Abattoir Co. at following quotations: Steers and heifers, $3.75 to $4.75; cows, $2.50 to $4; canners and bulls, $1 to $2.30 per cwt. Mr. Rowntree stated that few cattle brought the higher quotation in each class.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. & W. Murby report a fair demand for feeders, 850 to 900 lbs. each this week, that is of good quality, and they further report that common stockers are plentiful and hard to cash, even at prices quoted. Messrs. Murby handled 250 cattle during the week at following quotations: Best feeders, 900 to 1050 lbs. each, at $3.50 to $3.90 per cwt.; best feeders, 800 to 950 lbs. each, at $3 to $3.50; best stockers, 650 to 800 lbs. each, at $2.50 to $3; medium stockers, 600 to 800 lbs. each, at $2.25 to $2.60; common stockers, 500 to 700 lbs. each, at $2 to $2.25 per cwt.

Milch Cows.

The number of cows sold during the week has been large, as will be seen by reports below. Prices ranged from $30 up to $70 each, there being four during the week that brought the latter price. Dealers report the average price at about $50 each, but it must be remembered that the quality of cows offered was better than usual.

Veal Calves.

Receipts during the week were light, with prices firmer for all of good quality. Prices ranged generally from $3 for inferior to $6.50 for good to choice. Extra choice new milk fed calves are worth $7 per cwt.; but there are few of them on sale.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of lambs was large. Prices ranged from $4.25 to $5 per cwt., the latter price being for ewes and wethers of good quality. Export ewes $3.25 to $3.50; rams, $2.50 to $3 per cwt.

Hogs.

Receipts moderately large. Prices are quoted unchanged, but market easy with prospects of lower quotations. Selects $6.40, and $6.15 for lights.

Cheese Markets.

VANKLEEK HILL, Oct. 8.—There were 1911 boxes cheese boarded on Vankleek Hill Cheese Board here to-day. The price offered was 12c, and at this figure about five hundred boxes were sold on the board. The balance was held over, as salesmen would not accept the price, but it was reported later that they sold on the street at the above price.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 8.—At the weekly cheese board meeting here to-day, 1610 boxes colored and 1245 white, a total of 2855, were offered. The best offer was 12½c. None sold.

KINGSTON, Oct. 8.—There were 1200 boxes of cheese registered to-day, of which 488 were colored. The sales made were at 12c to 12¼c. A year ago the price paid was 13 1-16c.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 8.—There were 2630 boxes white and 118 colored offered at today's cheese board; 825 white and 118 colored were sold at 12¼c, 370 at 12 1-16c and 150 at 12c.

MAROONED IN ALASKA

Boat With Supplies Floated Away in Northern River.

G. B. White and D. V. Ritchie of Ottawa and A. Runnels of Vancouver Narrowly Escape Starving to Death —Help Is Brought by Runnels to His Companions After Ten Days of Suffering For Lack of Food.

Vancouver, Oct. 9.—The annals of the north furnish nothing more thrilling than the recent experiences in the wilds of Alaska of Mr. George B. White of Ottawa, Canadian representative on one of the American parties engaged in the Alaska boundary survey, and his assistants, Mr. D. V. Ritchie of Ottawa and Mr. Archie Runnels of this city.

The three Canadians were marooned on an island in the swift-running Alseka river owing to their boat escaping from her moorings. The craft virtually contained all their food, with the exception of a few supplies landed for use while in camp. Mr. Runnels volunteered to go for assistance. Breathlessly his companions watched him struggle through the rapids, never expecting him to reach the shore. Then, after a four days' walk across the mountains without food, he dragged himself into the main camp of the expedition. It was on the tenth day after his departure that he brought help and food to the famished Canadians, who were found utterly exhausted. A delay of another day would have proved fatal. Mr. Runnels has not yet recovered from his heroic act.

N.T.R. TENDERS OPENED.

Carshops and Roundhouses at Winnipeg Terminals To Be Built.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—Tenders were opened by the National Transcontinental Railway Commission yesterday for the construction of carshops, roundhouses, etc., at the Winnipeg terminals. Four tenders were received for the complete works, with several other tenders for heating plant, etc. The successful tenderers will not be announced for a week or so yet, pending the examination of each tender by the commission's engineers.

The contractors now at work on the various sections of the road under contract all report good progress made during the past summer. Active construction work will be continued all winter, thus providing employment for thousands of men.

H. S. Clements of West Kent Alleges Libel on Part of Doctor.

Chatham, Oct. 9.—Criminal libel is charged by H. S. Clements, Conservative candidate in West Kent, against Dr. Oliver, a middle-aged practitioner of Merlin, 16 miles from here.

A summons was issued yesterday, and Dr. Oliver will appear before Magistrate Huston of this city on Saturday morning.

Mr. Clements alleges that the doctor is responsible for having circulated a story to the effect that he (Clements) was recently participating in a poker game which was raided by the police, when Clements got away with the coin.

"The statement is utterly false," said Mr. Clements, who declares he is very much in earnest in the prosecution.

ACCUSED OF MURDER.

Jury In Peake Inquest Lay Crime at Door of Roughmond.

Stratford, Oct. 9.—Evidence was taken all afternoon in the Peake murder inquest and the jury returned the following verdict last night:

"That the said Mary Peake came to her death in her home on lot 11, con. 1, Downie, on Sept. 30, 1908, at the hands of the negro known as Frank Roughmond."

Roughmond will be arraigned on the charge of murder in a few days. His doings while in Stratford have been traced and evidence is at hand to prove that he left here alone and went unaccompanied to the Peake home. Roughmond was not in the Police Court at the inquest yesterday.

Medical evidence showed that Mrs. Peake's death was caused by "shock from violence and mental emotion."

DIVED UNDER CAR.

Toronto Man Attempts Suicide But Is Prevented by Passer-by.

Toronto, Oct. 9.—Those who saw the incident say that Arthur Tipling deliberately dived to get himself under the rear wheels of a southbound Yonge street car opposite Collier street at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

He was yanked out by H. Ainsworth, 31 Scolland street, before the wheels had hurt him. The car was barely moving.

Tipling, who is 31 years of age and lives at 902 Yonge street, was carried into No. 5 police station.

His family say that he has been ill and that his mind is affected. They have applied for his admission to an asylum.

Garrett Kelly, a C. & W. I. locomotive fireman was shot and killed in his cab in the Chicago yards. William Duford, colored, confesses to having fired six shots at a man riding on a freight train near the place.

Had we not faults of our own we should take less pleasure in complaining of others.—Fenelon.

CARTWRIGHT AND MURPHY.

They Address Mass Meeting In Association Hall, Toronto.

Toronto, Oct. 9.—Right Hon. Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and the newest acquisition in federal politics, the prospective Secretary of State, Hon. Chas. Murphy, were greeted last night by a crowd numbering some 1,500, which packed Association Hall to the doors.

Sir Richard delivered a vigorous address, despite physical infirmities, which made it necessary for him to use two canes in taking his position on the platform. As cheer upon cheer greeted his appearance a slight smile of gratification played about his lips, as though the demonstration recalled battles of other days, when figures that have since crossed to the great beyond stood before him in the armor of political combat.

Hon. Chas. Murphy has improved as a campaigner since his initial appearance with the Prime Minister at North Bay a fortnight ago. His address followed the chairman's, and was followed with close attention throughout.

Sir Richard declared that under Liberal administration two new Ontarios had been added to the Dominion of Canada. The western provinces had nearly one million acres more under crops than all the other provinces of Canada put together.

Much of the expenditure he indicated was simply paying out of one pocket into another as for example the postoffice, railway and provincial subsidy outlay.

Hon. Charles Murphy was received with cheering which was prolonged for some moments. He referred to Sir Richard Cartwright as the man who carried the fiery cross of Liberalism into the lines of the enemy when Liberalism had fewer friends than it had to-day.

PLANS IN LAWSUIT.

New York Architect Will Sue Because Chateau Plans Were Rejected.

New York, Oct. 9.—The Herald says that Bradford Lee Gilbert, an architect with offices at No. 50 Broadway, had engaged Charles Murphy, the new Secretary of State in the Cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, to take legal action concerning the rejection of Mr. Gilbert as architect of the new terminal hotel and station of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. in Ottawa, Canada, became known Wednesday.

Friends of Mr. Gilbert familiar with the facts said that he had worked for two years on plans for the Chateau Laurier, as the new hotel was to be called, and on the railroad station which was to form a part of it. These friends said that Mr. Gilbert has been engaged by a building company to design a structure to cost $2,500,000.

After the plans had passed into the custody of the building company Mr. Gilbert was informed that they were not satisfactory. In their stead appeared plans drawn by Ross & McFarlane, architects, of Montreal. It is asserted by friends of Mr. Gilbert that the Canadian architects prepared in two months plans strikingly similar to those on which Mr. Gilbert had worked for two years.

GET MAXIMUM PAY.

Winnipeg Strikers Go Back to Work at Highest Wage.

Winnipeg, Oct. 9.—The following important notice was posted in the C.P.R. shop yesterday:

"It has been decided that all men returning to work shall receive the maximum rate of pay according to their classification.—P. G. Armstrong, general car foreman."

Nearly every mechanic who went out on strike in the C.P.R. shops two months ago has returned to work.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The majority of the local C.P.R. strikers have practically decided to ignore terms of settlement upon which Bell Hardy of the general committee called off the struggle. They are not only thoroughly disappointed with the terms of settlement, but have not as yet received any official circular from Hardy announcing just what those terms are, consequently they declare that they require more information on the matter before they return to work. They expected also to be given right to vote upon the question of acceptance or rejection of the conciliation board's award.

Costly Explosion.

Windsor, Oct. 9.—On the approach of the fall Assizes, the Michigan Central Railway has settled four damage actions arising out of the Essex explosion of last year.

Miss Lela Beattie and Rev. S. R. McVitty get $2,500 each, while Wm. Bulder will receive $100 and Miss Elizabeth Brown $2,000. Including a fine of $25,000, damage to rolling stock and property, and personal actions, that explosion cost the railway easily $100,000.

Struck by Trolley Wire.

London, Ont., Oct. 9.—As John Johnson of 86 King street and J. J. Coleman of the Pipe line road were crossing Dundas street on Wednesday night a trolley wire broke and fell, striking Mr. Johnson on the head. Mr. Johnson did not appear to be seriously hurt, but later he was again prostrated and had to be removed to Victoria Hospital, where he now lies in a precarious state. Coleman was not hurt.

Boilermakers Stay Out.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—It developed yesterday morning that one class of workmen, the boilermakers, have determined to continue the strike against the C.P.R. They have refused to accept the terms agreed to by the leaders of the union, and will continue the strike on their own account.

Double Drowning.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 9.—Two residents of Eastern Passage, a fishing village at the entrance of Halifax harbor, James Nagle and C. Conrod, were drowned last night while returning from the Government works at McNab's Island to their homes on the opposite shore in a fishing boat.

LORD RIPON RESIGNS

Britain's Lord Privy Seal to Be Succeeded by Earl of Crewe.

Veteran Statesman Retires at Age of 81 on Account of Feebleness—Has Held Many Cabinet Portfolios Under Various Administrations—Was Intimate Friend of Gladstone—Crewe Will Succeed Him.

London, Oct. 10.—The Marquis of Ripon, Lord Privy Seal, has resigned, owing to his advanced age.

The Earl of Crew succeeds to the office, and, in addition, will retain the portfolio of Secretary of State for the Colonies.

George Frederick Samuel Robinson, first Marquis of Ripon, son of the first Earl of Ripon, and nephew of first Earl de Grey, was born on Oct. 24, 1827, and succeeded to both peerages in 1859. He was first returned to the House of Commons in 1852 as member for Hull, represented Huddersfield, 1853-57, and the west riding of Yorkshire until he entered the Upper House. In 1859 he was appointed Under Secretary for War, and in [illegible] was transferred to the Indian O[illegible] In 1863 Lord Ripon entered the [illegible]eral Cabinet as War Secretary, later becoming Indian Secretary. He sat in Mr. Gladstone's first Cabinet as Lord President of the Council, and during his tenure of that office was chairman of the joint commission for drawing up the Treaty of Washington. He was grand master of the Order of Freemasons between 1871 and 1874, and in the latter year became a Roman Catholic.

The marquis was Governor-General of India from 1880 to 1884, and his administration was conspicuous for sympathetic treatment of native questions and grievances, a course which prompted strong criticism from the older officials. In 1886 he had charge of the Admiralty, and was Secretary for the Colonies in 1892-1895. On Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's appointment as Premier, Lord Ripon became Lord Privy Council and acted for a time as leader of the Ministerialist party in the House of Lords. On his resigning the latter duty he was succeeded by the Earl of Crewe. Lord Ripon has always been a staunch Liberal, and was on close terms of intimacy with Mr. Gladstone. Lord Ripon has always held a high place in the esteem of his party.

Carnegie Gives $20,000.

New York, Oct. 10.—The fact that Andrew Carnegie has contributed $20,000 to the campaign fund of the Republican national committee was announced yesterday by Chairman Timothy L. Woodruff.

Mr. Woodruff also announced that Mrs. Russell Sage had contributed $1,000 to the same fund.

There have been no other large contributions, Mr. Woodruff said.

The committee has decided to ask $50 from 10,000 business men interested in the principles of the party.

Ready In Six Years.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The Panama Canal, the completion of which is anxiously awaited as an event of international import, will be open to navigation in six years, after a sum of $256,000,000 has been expended on its construction.

This statement was made yesterday by Representative James A. Tawney of Minnesota before the thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Fire Underwriters' Association of the Northwest.

Must File Claims.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—Notice is given

Bank of Ontario are asked to file their claims with the Royal Trust Co., Toronto, liquidators of the bank.

If they fail to do so they will be excluded from the benefits of the winding-up order.

The report of the liquidators on the claims of creditors will be made to the official referee on Oct. 30.

General Shot at Fight.

Askabad, Turkestan, Oct. 10.—During manoeuvres of the Turkestan army corps yesterday in the vicinity of Askabad, Gen. Mistchenke, who played a conspicuous part in the Russo-Japanese war, and who is now governor-general of Turkestan, was wounded in a sham battle. A revolutionist plot is suspected.

Policy Of Expediency.

Mr. Borden Thus Characterizes the Ideals of the Government.

Leader In Sudbury Addresses Mass Meeting of 4,000 Persons—Five to Ten Millions Squandered Every Year—Fielding's Answer to Charges Is Flippant, Absurd and Insolent—Cochrane Presides.

Sudbury, Ont., Oct. 10—Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Mines, presided at a great mass meeting addressed by R. L. Borden, Conservative leader, in the rink last night. Mr. Borden reached Sudbury at noon and was taken at once to Copper Cliffs, where he inspected the copper and nickel smelter.

The rink, which will accommodate 4,000 people, was almost filled and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed when Mr. Borden arrived.

The Conservative leader featured his Halifax platform, and on the other hand painted a picture of a Government having no fixed policy save that of expediency.

"If they find it to more political advantage to impose higher duties they will impose higher duties; if they find it to their political advantage to impose lower duties, they will impose lower duties," he said.

Then passing to the immigration question and the surrender of control over the influx of the Japs, Mr. Borden aroused enthusiasm by the declaration that "Canada must be dominated by those races which have inhabited and dominated the country in the past."

That from five to ten million dollars a year had been squandered in the past few years was the next observation of Mr. Borden in reviewing the administrative record of the Government. He reiterated that he had reason to say that a member of the Civil Service Commission believed that this was so. The condition of affairs such as has been revealed by this commission would, in Great Britain, drive any Government out of power within 24 hours. Mr. Fielding's answer to the charges of extravagance and graft was "flippant, absurd and insolent." It was "treating a grave public matter with absolute impertinence and indifference."

FISHERMEN FIRED ON.

Game Wardens Take Drastic Measures With American Poachers.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 10.—According to reports brought down to the Soo from up Lake Superior, there is something doing that will interest the Fishery Departments of Canada and the United States.

For some days Game Wardens Calbeck and Hand have been on a tour of investigation up the lake, with authority from the respective Governments to apprehend certain Americans who, it is alleged, have been fishing in Canadian waters.

Report has it that Thursday the Canadians surprised the Americans opposite Whitefish, or a little west, and upon the Americans refusing to heave to when requested to do so, the Canadians opened fire on them with rifles. The Americans apparently escaped, but it is not yet known whether the fusilade from the Canadian boats resulted in any casualties.

Veterans to Meet In Ottawa.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—Representatives of all South African Veterans' associations throughout Canada, from Halifax on the east to Victoria in the west, will assemble in Ottawa on Monday next for the purpose of forming a Dominion association and discussing many matters in the interests of the volunteers who served in the late war. These associations represent over seven thousand of the 8,700 men who went to South Africa with different Canadian contingents.

Grey Returning.

Winnipeg, Oct. 10.—Earl Grey is returning to Ottawa from a perilous trip over the Rocky Mountains.

He traveled on horseback through the southern part of British Columbia. Reaching the summit of the mountains near Argunta, the party was compelled to go on foot with packs on their backs over risky paths till the foothills were reached. The party were taken to Cranbrook, B.C., on a handcar.

Strike-Breaking Papermakers.

Livermore Falls, Me., Oct. 10.—Twenty-six strike-breaking papermakers arrived here yesterday from Albany, N.Y., to go to work in the mills of the International Paper Co., which have been closed on account of the strike for over two months.

Destructive Typhoon.

Manila, Oct. 10.—Reports from the provinces show that the typhoon, which has prevailed since last Sunday, inflicted considerable damage.

HUSBAND'S FATAL JEALOUSY.

Two Are Dead and One Wounded In Virginia Family Row.

Mansasas, Va., Oct. 10.—As the result of husband's jealousy, two men are dead and another seriously wounded at the Old Fair Farm at Canova, six miles from Mansasas, today.

Edward Fair and his wife, and brother, Allen Fair, called on their neighbor, Tucker Posey. While there Edward Fair's attention was attracted to what he regarded as unusual friendliness between his wife and his brother Allen.

Angered by their conduct he hurried from the Posey home and procured a gun to avenge his fancied injury. Upon his return to the Posey home he shot and instantly killed his brother and turned the gun upon his wife, but was prevented from shooting her by the interference of Tucker Posey who received the shot intended for his wife.

During the struggle that followed Posey took the gun from Fair and striking him upon the head killed him instantly.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The postoffice at Roseisle, Man., was robbed of $280.

The body of Mitchell Moulton was found drowned, near Fredericton, N.B.

The public hall at Orville was burned and the people believe it was set on fire.

About half the striking machinists have gone back to work at Port Arthur.

Clement Lyons, aged 5, accidentally shot himself dead at Fredericton, N.B.

Seventy British mechanics arrived and were taken to the Angus shops at Montreal.

The next annual convention of the Lakes-to-Gulf Deep Waterways Association will be held in New Orleans.

Friends of Jas. P. Dent, who disappeared from Montreal, believe he is still alive and has gone away to escape an unhappy home life.

Earl Takes Third Bride.

London, Oct. 10.—The Earl of Rosslyn has taken for the third time a venture upon matrimony. The bride is Miss Vera Mary Bayley, a beautiful young Irish girl, and the marriage was celebrated at the registry office in Buckingham Palace road.

The new and third Lady Rosslyn is not wealthy, while Lord Rosslyn is practically broke, his creditors allowing him a scant $5,000 a year. Lord Rosslyn's first marriage was to Violet Vyner, whom he divorced for desertion, and the earl's second wife was Anna Robinson, who divorced him.

Brodeur Too Busy.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—The Liberals held a convention in the County of Yamaska yesterday and nominated the Hon. Mr. Brodeur to oppose the Hon. J. A. Ouimet, nominated a few days ago by the Conservative party.

The Minister declined, however, on the ground that he was too busily engaged in organizing the Liberal party to attend to so serious a contest.

The disappointed convention then proceeded to nominate the ex-member, Jos. Gladu.

Woman Fatally Burned.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—Having poured coal oil on the fire Mrs. Geo. Grapentrin, 523 Dufferin street, was yesterday enveloped in flames. At Grace Hospital it was said at midnight she could not survive the night.

Neighbors attracted by the explosion and fire found the woman's clothes burning. Mrs. Hermanspregel extinguished the fire in her clothing, and Dr. Cornell, who was sent for, arrived on a hose wagon.

Chauffeur Spared Child.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 10.—With no alternative but to run down a nine-year-old girl or a street laborer, with his automobile running at 25 miles an hour, Ralph G. Simmons of New York, chauffeur for George Hawley, a wealthy New Yorker, made his choice without a second's hesitation and jerked his car around so that it struck the man full in the back. The man is dying at the City Hospital.

Nansen born, 1861.
Father Matthew born, 1790.

TIMELY TOPICS.

It was just a piece of spite. The Grits nominated Mr. J. K. McCargar in East Hastings because they knew we had a touch of pleurisy and it hurt us to laugh.

Well! Well!! WELL! From the late Sam Bardett to J. K. McCargar! How have the mighty fallen!

It takes all sorts of grey horses and fishery inspectors to make up the great Grit party in this district.

Will Mr. McCargar give up his $600 a year job of watching that hole in the ground at Point Ann before he runs for Parliament?

"Runs!" did you say?

Remember Mr. McCargar. He wants to go to Parliament and help Laurier finish his work.

Funnell in West, McCargar in East,
Will carry the good Grit can-
Didacy on the 26th,
And we'll say "they also ran."

Threatened war in the Far East pales into insignificance compared with the political news from East Hastings.

How do we account for Mr. McCargar's candidature? We don't account for it. It was just one of those freaks of destiny, like a fly in your eye, or a puncture in a bicycle tire.

The attendance and enthusiasm at Mr. Porter's ward committee meetings last night broke all records for a first night. The electors are very much in earnest this election. They've had enough of French domination.

A "solid Quebec," this time, may be met with a "Solid Ontario."

Principal of High School reports everything lovely in that temple of learning, causing deep furrows to ruffle the brows of certain Boarders who wanted nothing more gentle than decapitation for Mr. Milburn. The new Principal actually seems to know what he wants better than a few know-alls can tell him.

A New York man's wife threw a poodle dog at him. Good thing for him there was no lion within reach.

PILES Dr. Chase's Ointment is a certain and guaranteed cure for each and every form of itching, bleeding and protruding piles. See testimonials in the press and ask your neighbors about it. You can use it and get your money back if not satisfied. 60c, at all dealers or EDMANSON, BATES & Co., Toronto. DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Nothing much the matter with October, is there?

"Yes," says a farmer, "we need rain badly, but I hope it won't come for a few days yet, till I get my corn in." Which reminds us that, here in fair Canada, most people don't need a telescope to see something to be thankful for.

A letter has been received from the secretary of the Belleville Municipal Rights League, in which certain statements are made which The Intelligencer would like to see proof of before putting them in print.

A Toronto hotel porter left a $50,000 estate. His heirs will never figure very largely as opponents of the tipping system.

That fat-witted person, Bengough, is doing excellent work for the Conservative party by his cartoons in the Globe. They are almost as useful—to the Tories—as the celebrated sermonettes were.

At a wedding in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., the bride cut the cake with her greatgrandfather's sword. The groom can see what's coming to HIM.

A Chicago man didn't like the way the barber cut his hair and said so, and the barber blacked his eye. And perhaps, for all we know, the customer, didn't like the way his eye was blacked, either.

Science tells us now that it isn't the high heel, but the old-fashioned, roomy slipper, which plays havoc with the foot. Of course it is. Did anybody ever see a woman yet with tight boots which hurt her? No, sir. It's always the ones that are too big.

Only two more weeks for Laurier to finish his work in.

Rumor now says that Grand Trunk is dissatisfied with the G. T. P. bargain. What do they want? The Dominion and Zwick's Island thrown in?

The Supreme Court has given judgment in the appeal of Abbott v. the City of St. John. It determines the right of a municipality to assess the income of a member of the civil service of Canada. As a result of this decision, every member of the civil service outside of Ottawa will have to pay income tax, except such portion of it as may be exempt by provincial statute.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Rev. G. W. Henderson, of Peterboro, is a guest at the Holloway st. parsonage.

Mrs. J. D. Ford returned home to-day, after a pleasant visit to friends in Thurlow.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Muller, of Long Beach, California, who have been visiting their friends in Canada since last May, started on the return journey for their southern home on Monday, the fifth of October.

At the Quinte: W. J. Muldren, E. Williamson, A. J. Reading, D. P. Clark, S. Stewart, W. Root, Toronto; H. A. Thompson and wife, A. T. Hicks and wife, J. Boswell and wife, Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson, Kingston; J. G. Diver, Montreal; G. H. Drew, H. P. Nicholson, Chicago; J. H. Kenning, Windsor; W. E. Schuster and wife, City; M. O'Brien, Peterboro.

Slow Demand and Not Much Profit In Canned Goods

Picton, Ont., Oct. 9.—There will be little money in canned goods this year. This is the opinion of a member of one of the largest independent canning concerns in this county, where factories of the Canadian Canners and the independents are pretty evenly divided. The trouble arises from two sources. Last season the pack was a fair one, but prices were higher than usual. There was not, as a result, so keen a demand on the wholesale houses, and it is said the wholesalers in many instances have considerable stock on hand from a year ago.

Till these are gone the wholesalers are not buying to the same extent from the factories, from which the report comes that shipping is a trifle quieter.

There was a big pack of tomatoes and corn this year, due to a heavy crop. The demand, however, is none too keen from the seller's standpoint.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS WILL CURE YOUR BABY.

If your little ones are subject to colic, simple fevers, constipation, indigestion, worms, or the other minor ailments of childhood, give them Baby's Own Tablets. This medicine will give relief right away, making sound, refreshing sleep possible. Better still an occasional dose will keep little ones well. Guaranteed to contain no opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. Good for the new born baby or the well grown child. Mrs. Ronald L. Seafield, Palmer Rapids, Ont., says: —"Baby's Own Tablets are the most satisfactory medicine I have ever used, and I would not like to be without the Tablets in the house." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. William's Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Fractured Hip.

Mrs. Dunn, of Rochester, is a guest of her brother, Mr. J. Marrin, Madoc. Last Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Marrin and Mrs. Dunn took in the Tweed fair. On their way home in the early evening, just as they were entering Bridgewater, they collided with a rig that was infringing too much upon the highway. Mr. Marrin did not notice the rig until it was too late to avoid striking it. His buggy was upset and the occupants were thrown out and Mrs. Dunn sustained a fracture of the hip She was to return home on Monday, but this will lay her up for some time.

Underwriters Met.

A regular monthly meeting of the Life Underwriters of the Quinte district was held in this city recently. The chair was occupied by Mr. J. E. Parks. The meeting was well attended, amongst those present being Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, who at Quebec was elected a member of the Executive Committee of the Dominion Association, and Mr. J. F. Weston, Superintendent of Agencies, who gave an address on the objects of the Association, which was much appreciated. Mr. H. F. Ketcheson also gave an address relative to the Underwriters' Association's work.

Daily Intelligencer.

Fielding and Borden—Fielding's Fibs.

The Hon. William Stevens Fielding, Finance Minister of Canada, is an opportunist of the first class, and as great a fakir as ever addressed an audience.

He has been talking to his political friends in Ontario of late, and while attempting a defence of himself and colleagues has not hesitated to misstate facts and misrepresent his opponents, for which Mr. Borden has found it necessary to call him to account.

When addressing a meeting in Kingston, on the 7th inst., Mr. Borden found it necessary to be more aggressive than he has been in dealing with campaign issues. He sharply attacked Mr. Fielding's professions of virtue, "declaring that no man in public life had used the public domain and public revenues for the party cause to a greater extent than he, and that he has maintained a condition of affairs discreditable to the country." He then referred to Mr. Fielding's statement, that the scandals levelled against the Government were due to Tory officials. This, Mr. Borden said, was untrue, and he knew it to be false when he made it. Four hundred thousand dollars had been paid to a bogus immigration company. Was this money paid to Tory officials?

Mr. Fielding and politicians of his ilk tell the people that Mr. Gregory, of the Marine and Fisheries Department, is an appointee of the Conservative party. So he is, and has been in the service for 30 or 40 years, but these virtuous gentlemen will not tell the people that Mr. Gregory stated before the Civil Service Commission that when ordered to buy gas buoys, he informed his Minister they were not wanted, and he had no place to put them, and that he was instructed to purchase and stow them somewhere.

They will also say Mr. Gourdeau was an appointee of the Conservatives. So he was, but he swore before Judge Nesbitt that there was a patronage list, which they were compelled to patronize, and that in buying from those on the list the country had suffered to the extent of over $200,000.

Tory officials were compelled to obey Ministers' orders, and are therefore not responsible for the losses and frauds suffered by the country. No one knows that better than Mr. Fielding, yet he practises the tactics of the pettiest politician for a temporary purpose.

Among other charges preferred against Mr. Borden by Mr. Fielding was that Mr. Borden had declared that, if he was returned to power, he would buy all the railways and thereby enormously increase the debt of the Dominion. This was, of course, another misrepresentation. What Mr. Borden did say, and with which every man in Canada except those who profit by the present system, will agree, was that "the I.C.R. was not managed efficiently or economically; that it was over-manned; that there was no discipline on the road. He had pointed out that Australia and New Zealand had managed the railways efficiently and economically by eliminating political patronage, and he favored putting the Intercolonial under the control of a commission."

Mr. Borden concluded his speech with the declaration that "no man has used the public domain and the public revenues like Hon. W. S. Fielding. In 1900 Mr. Fielding told the people of Halifax that if they would elect two Liberals the City of Halifax would receive what it is entitled to. This is the jurist that holds himself up to the people of Kingston. This is the man who in Nova Scotia and in the Dominion Parliament has maintained a condition of affairs discreditable to the country."

Farm House Robbed.

The home of Mr. J. H. Munroe, in Fitzroy township was entered recently in the middle of the afternoon, when the family were in a field not far away, and $147 taken. There was $100 in a writing desk, which was locked, $40 in the pocket of a pair of pants belonging to Mr. Henry Sawyer, the hired man, and $7 in a soap dish in a bedroom belonging to Mr. Munroe's sister. The burglary committed at the time it was has caused general alarm in the district, as many farm houses are left alone at this time of the day.

Political Pointers.

CAMPAIGN STARTED WITH A HURRAH! LAST NIGHT.

The political campaign in West Hastings started off in great style last night, when the different ward committees of this city met in Mr. Porter's committee rooms, which adjoin the rooms of the Conservative Auxiliary. There was a wonderfully large attendance for a first night, every ward in the city being strongly represented. The stalwarts were out in force, good-fellowship and enthusiasm was in the air, and not a cloud was in sight to darken Mr. Porter's political sky. A more united party never entered on a campaign than the Conservatives of West Hastings do at present.

Many leading men of the party were present last night, among them the popular candidate, Mr. Porter, ex-M.P., and Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P. Excellent work was done in the way of organization, etc., while between times the stalwarts fought former political battles over again, smiled over the news from East Hastings, and agreed that, if hard work, unanimity and good organization could do it, Mr. Porter's majority this election would be the biggest in the history of good old West Hastings.

There were no speeches last night, but another meeting will be held on Monday evening, to which all are invited, when, after the ward committees have perfected their organization, brief speeches on the issues of the day will be given by bright speakers. It is worth anyone's while to attend these meetings, which keep the electors in touch with each other and with the political situation in the Riding.

MR. PORTER'S APPOINTMENTS.

So far as have been fixed at present, the following dates are set for meetings in Mr. Porter's interests in the places named:

Coe Hill—Tuesday, Oct. 13.
Stirling—Wednesday, Oct. 14.
Frankford—Thursday, Oct. 15.
Marmora—Friday, Oct. 16.
Ivanhoe—Saturday, Oct. 17.
Trenton (nomination)—Monday, Oct. 19.
Bancroft—Tuesday, Oct. 20.
Maynooth—Wednesday, Oct. 21.

A Toronto Grit paper figures that Conservatives will have a small majority in Ontario, but concedes that 34 of the seats claimed as Liberal are "doubtful." When a Toronto Grit paper concedes a Conservative majority the issue is not very much in doubt.

Local Liberals refused at first to believe the news of Mr. McCargar's candidature in East Hastings (which, by the way, was a "scoop" for The Intelligencer), but when the news was confirmed the common expression among the Grits was: "Why, they're making a farce of it!" That appears to be the general impression.

Vote for Mr. McCargar and take a chance to get a prize from the fishpond.

From all over Canada comes the same story: Men will this election vote Conservative who never voted anything but Liberal before. And they say they will only be following the best traditions of their party by doing so. In old days, they say, the Liberal party stood for honesty and provincial rights. Now it stands (under present leaders) for graft and coercion. Therefore they will administer a lesson to Laurier. And if Conservatives, in their first term of office, do no better than Laurier, they will vote to turn them out, too. This is the principle which means the political salvation of any nation. It will save Canada on the 26th.

There was sadness on the brow of Mr. W. B. Northrup, ex-M.P., when The Intelligencer saw him this morning.

"So you are to be opposed by Mr. McCargar," said the newspaper man.

"If I don't lose courage and back out," said Mr. Northrup. "Seriously, though, I am sorry the Liberals of East Hastings have turned the election into a farce.

Particulars of the "great" Liberal convention at Tweed have arrived, which go to show that it was one of the sorriest farces on record. Less than 50 were in attendance — one party who was there says 25 would be nearer the mark. Five were nominated and declined before Mr. McCargar—the forlorn hope—had the can tied on him. Here are the five "stalwarts" who sidestepped: Nathanael Vermilyea, P. P. Clarke, C. J. Dale, W. Cross, E. J. Butler. Then, in despair, the name of J. K. McCargar was mentioned. He didn't decline. That was how "the man with the grey horse," famed in story, came to receive the "much-sought-after" Grit nomination for East Hastings. God Save the King.

THE TORTURES OF NERVOUSNESS.

THE SUFFERER FEELS THAT UNLESS RELIEF COMES INSANITY WILL FOLLOW.

There is no torture more intolerable than nervousness. A nervous person is in a state of constant irritation by day and sleeplessness by night. The sufferer starts at every noise, is shaky and depressed. Often although in a completely exhausted state is unable to sit or lie still. For trouble of this kind absolutely the best thing in the world is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The nerves are jaded and jangled because they are being starved by poor watery blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood, which feeds and soothes the irritated nerves. There is absolutely no doubt about this; thousands can testify of the blood-making, nerve-restoring qualities of these Pills. Among them is Mrs. Thos. Harpell, Wallace Bridge, N. S., who says: "Some years ago I took sick and the doctor pronounced the trouble nervous prostration. To describe the tortures of it is impossible. God and myself only know what I endured. The doctor gave me medicine, but it did not seem to help me. Then he ordered me away for a change, but I was afraid to go, as I always seemed to fear some impending calamity, and was afraid to spend the night alone, as I used to think each night that I would die before morning. I tried different kinds of medicines, but with no better results, and finally decided I would go to my parents to see if the change would benefit me. I went to their doctor, but with no better results. My mother urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got me a box. Of course I did not expect a box would help me, but I continued taking them, and in about a month began to feel better. From that on there was an improvement in my condition every day and in the course of about three months I was again enjoying the great blessing of perfect health. I gained about twenty pounds in weight and my friends could hardly believe I was the same person. I believe I would have been in the grave long ago if it had not been for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are good for any disease due to bad blood or weak nerves. That is why they cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis, and the ailments of girlhood and womanhood. Sold by medicine dealers at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 or may be had by mail from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. For sale by all druggists.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"BABES IN TOYLAND" HIGHLY RECOMMENDED.

The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin has the following to say of "Babes in Toyland," which appears here at the opera house on Wednesday, Oct. 14:

The Grand Opera House was auspiciously reopened for the season last night when a large audience witnessed the delightful musical extravaganza, "Babes in Toyland." To theatre-goers it is familiar, but to many at the uptown theatre it was seen for the first time, and the charming music, the delicacy and ingenuous fancy made a most pleasing impression. The well known songs "I Can't do That Sum," "Beatrice Barefacts," Barney O'Flynn," and "Before and After" were enthusiastically applauded. A big company of chorus girls and men and elaborate stage features contributed no little to the success of last night's production. Eddie Redway, as Alan, nephew of Barnaby, a rich and miserly uncle, was full of animation and droll in the extreme. Vera Blair Stanley, as Contrary Mary, was delightful. She is a strikingly handsome young actress with a full, well-rounded voice, and sang and danced charmingly. Anna Floyd, as Jane, Alan's sister, was piquant and quaint and proved herself a comedienne of rare good humor and vivacity. Joe Carney, as Inspector Marmaduke, Will H. Hatter, as the Master Toymaker; Leon Mayo, as his apprentice, and a contortionist, all played the parts in a clever and entirely satisfactory manner. The production proved the happiest sort of selection with which to open the season at the Grand.

Prices 25, 50, 75, $1, and $1.50. Plan opens Monday morning.

GREAT CLEARING SALE OF WALLPAPER

AT

Scantlebury's

We have recently purchased at 37c on the dollar, the entire stock of Mr. John Cornelius. The goods have been brought to our warerooms and put in order and are now on sale at less than one half their value.

The stock has been so minutely arranged that small quantities can be handled without any difficulty of shortages. This is to say, we know what we have of everything and these small quantities in many cases will be cleared out at one quarter their value. The Cornelius stock must all be closed out before the end of the year, as we cannot bother with small quantities in the regular working season and the advantage will be to the purchaser.

Never before such an opportunity of buying wall paper at such prices and this, too, right in the face of the advance of wall-paper prices during the past three months of 25 per cent. Wall paper will be higher in price in the future, but during this sale you will have the great advantage of bargain prices such at you will not recall or repeat.

With this stock of wallpaper we have 10,000 feet of room moulding purchased in the same stock, which will be sold at like bargains to those of wall paper.

TIMELY TOPICS

IN THE COOL OF THE EVE

(Alfred Noyes, in The Nation.)

In the cool of the evening, when the low sweep whispers waken,
When the laborers turn them homeward, and the weary have their will,
When the censers of the roses o'er the forest-aisles are shaken,
Is it but the wind that cometh o'er the far green hill?

For they say 'tis but the sunset winds that wander through the heather,
Rustle all the meadow grass and bend the dewy fern:
They say 'tis the winds that blow the reeds in prayer together,
And fill the shaken pools with fire along the shadowy burn.

In the cool of the evening, when the sky is an old story,
Slowly dying, but remembered, aye and loved with passion still—
Hush! the fringes of His garment, in the fading golden glory,
Softly rustling as He cometh o'er the far green hill.

The Great Art.

Culture is the ability to use learning intelligently and effectively—in doing sensible and beautiful, rather than startling, things. As the poet says, "Of all the arts, great music is the art to raise the soul above all earthly storms." To the truly cultivated, the New Scale Williams Piano lays bare the secrets of the world's best music. Its grandeur of tone, superb action, and sympathetic touch, enable the performer to interpret every mood of the composer. Mechanically, the New Scale Williams is absolutely faultless. "I predict for it a distinctive place among the great pianos." —Ben Davies. Mr. Davies' prediction has come true. To day, the New Scale Williams enjoys a prestige that is the admiration of the music-loving world. In the homes, on the concert stage, in the studios of the teachers and artists, it is the honored guest. It is safe to say, that among the great pianos, the New Scale Williams is greatest. 5

J. A. Goodsell, Front St., Belleville.

I saw her in her bathing suit beside the placid sea.
I was her latest raw recruit, and she looked good to me.
We chased each other on the sands and splashed without a care.
I held her up with willing hands what time she paddled there.

I've seen her in her ballroom gown, where all was gay and bright,
And feared her waist was coming down, though she was free from fright.
I trembled lest the shoulder straps that lopped down on her arms
Might slip or break and cause mishaps, unmasking all her charms.

I've seen her romping on the shore, I've seen her waltzing too.
Each half of her to me, therefore, has been exposed to view.
She is a gentle, proper maid. I deem her still sublime,
For modesty she has displayed but one-half at a time.

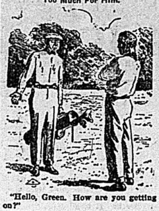
Too Much For Him.



"Hello, Green. How are you getting on?"

"Rotten. I got the first one in eleven, the second in twelve and the third one in eleven, and then I went all to pieces."—Browning's Magazine.

No Sportsman.

Hal Chase, the famous first baseman, at a dinner in Chicago responded to a toast on the "sporting spirit."

"When I was a boy," said Mr. Chase, "I knew a butcher who lacked the sporting spirit altogether. In a game one August afternoon the butcher tried to steal second. It was a clumsy attempt. He made a clumsy slide, and the umpire declared him out.

"'Out, am I?' shrieked the butcher, wild with rage.

"It was a just decision, and we all backed up the umpire.

"'Out, hey?' the butcher roared. 'Then out you all go from my field!'" —Washington Star.

His Home.

A distinguished Indian officer, Scotch to the core, never lost an opportunity of advertising his countrymen.

One evening at mess he had a large number of guests and had a magnificent specimen of a highland piper on duty.

To draw attention to the man's splendid appearance he turned to him and said:

"What part of Scotland do you come from, my man?"

With a punctilious salute the reply came:

"Tipperary, yer honor."—Answers.

Mistaken.

While a small boy was fishing one Sunday morning he accidentally lost his foothold and tumbled into the creek.

As an old man on the bank was helping him out he said:

"How did you come to fall in the river, my little man?"

"I didn't come to fall in the river. I came to fish," replied the boy.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Made Her Think.

"I am reading ancient history."

"You are, Miss Tinkers?"

"Yes; it's a splendid pastime. It actually makes one think."

"And what has it made you think?"

"Well, I've been wondering and wondering what the ladies of ancient Rome did to amuse themselves in those awful days before bridge parties and motoring."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Preferred the Money.

"Yes," said D'Auber, the artist, patronizingly. "I'm selling my canvases now at my own prices."

"My," exclaimed the young art student, "you don't say so?"

"Yes; I suppose you'd give a great deal to be a great artist too?"

"No, indeed. I'd rather be you."—Pittsburg Post.

The Unlucky Brother.

"I don't see why he took out another accident policy, he's so unlucky."

"Why, that's the very reason, ain't it?"

"But I mean he's unlucky in this way—he hain't had a leg cut off or even a arm broke in ten years!"—Atlanta Constitution.

THE MYSTERY

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE
And SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

COPYRIGHT. 1907. BY McCLURE. PHILLIPS & CO.

Puls had brought some extraordinary garish detective stories. The others contributed sensational literature with paper covers adorned lithographically. By the usual incongruity a fragment of "The Marble Faun" was included in the collection. The nigger had his copy of "Duvall on Alchemy." I haven't the slightest idea where he could have got it.

While Pulz read, Handy Solomon worked on the alteration of his claw. He could never get it to hold, and I remember as an undertone to Pulz's reading the rumble of strange, exasperated oaths. Whatever the evening's lecture, it always ended with the book on alchemy. These men had no perspective by which to judge such things. They accepted its speculations and theories at their face value. Extremely laughable were the discussions that followed. I often wished the shade of old Duvall could be permitted to see these, his last disciples, spelling out dimly his teachings, mispronouncing his grave utterances, but believing utterly.

Dr. Schermerhorn appeared on deck seldom. When he did, often his fingers held a pen which he had forgotten to lay aside. I imagined him preoccupied by some calculation of his own, but the forecastle, more picturesquely, saw him as guarding constantly the heavy casket he had himself carried aboard. He breathed the air, walked briskly, turned with the German military precision at the end of his score of strides and re-entered his cabin at the lapse of the half hour. After he had gone, remained Percy Darrow leaning indolently against the taffrail, his graceful figure swaying with the ship's motion, smoking always the corn husk Mexican cigarettes which he rolled with one hand. He seemed from that farthest point aft to hold in review the appliances, the fabric, the actions, yes, even the very thoughts, of the entire ship. From them he selected that on which he should comment or with which he should play, always with a sardonic, half serious, quite wearied and indifferent manner. His inner knowledge, viewed by the light of this manner or mannerism, was sometimes uncanny, though perhaps the sources of his information were commonplace enough after all. Certainly he always viewed with amusement his victim's wonder.

Thus one evening at the close of our day watch on deck he approached Handy Solomon. It was at the end of ten days, on no one of which the seaman failed to tinker away at his steel claw. Darrow balanced in front of him with a thin smile.

"Too bad it doesn't work, my amiable pirate," said he. "It would be so handy for fighting— See here," he suddenly continued, pulling some object from his pocket, "here's a pipe; present to me. I don't smoke 'em. Twist her halfway, like that, she comes out. Twist her halfway, like this, she goes in. That's your principle. Give her back to me when you get through."

He thrust the brier pipe into the man's hand and turned away without waiting for a reply. The seaman looked after him in open amazement. That evening he worked on the socket of the steel hook, and in two days he had the job finished. Then he returned the pipe to Darrow with some growling of thanks.

"That's all right," said the young man, smiling full at him. "Now, what are you going to fight?"

CHAPTER XII.

CAPTAIN SELOVER received as his due the most absolute and implicit obedience imaginable. When he condescended to give an order in his own person, the men fairly jumped to execute it. The matter had evidently been thrashed out long ago. They did not love him, not they, but they feared him with a mighty fear and did not hesitate to say so vividly and often when in the privacy of the forecastle. The prevailing spirit was that of the wild beast cowed but snarling still. Pulz and Thrackles in especial had a great deal to say of what they were or were not going to do, but I noticed that their resolution always began to run out of them when first foot was set to the companion ladder.

One day we were loafing along, everything drawing well and everybody but the doctor on deck to enjoy the sun. I was in the crow's nest for my pleasure. Below me on the deck Captain Selover roamed here and there, as was his custom, his eye cocked out like a housewife's for disorder. He found it, again in the evidence of expectoration, and as Perdosa happened to be handiest fell on the unfortunate Mexican.

Perdosa protested that he had had nothing to do with it, but Captain Selover, enraged as always when his precious deck was soiled, would not listen. Finally the Mexican grew sulky and turned away as though refusing to hear more. The captain thereupon felled him to the deck and began brutally to kick him in the face and head.

Perdosa writhed and begged, but without avail. The other members of the crew gathered near. After a moment they began to murmur. Finally Thrackles ventured most respectfully to intervene.

"You'll kill him, sir," he interposed. "He's had enough."

"Had enough, has he?" screeched the captain. "Well, you take what's left."

He marked Thrackles over the eye. There was a breathless pause, and then Thrackles, Pulz, the nigger and Perdosa attacked at once.

They caught the master unawares and bore him to the deck. I dropped at once to the ratlines and commenced my descent. Before I had reached the deck, however, Selover was afoot again, the four hanging to him like dogs. In a moment more he had shaken them off, and before I could intervene he had seized a belaying pin in either hand and was hazing them up and down the deck.

"Mutiny, would you?" he shrilled. "You poor swabs! Forgot who was your captain, did ye? Well, it's Captain Ezra Selover, and you can lay to that! It would need about eight fathom of stuff like you to tie me down."

He chased them forward, and he chased them aft, and every time the pins fell blood followed. Finally they dived like rabbits into the forecastle hatch. Captain Selover leaned down after them.

"Now tie yourselves up," he advised, "and then come on deck and clean up after yourselves!" He turned to me. "Mr. Eagen, turn out the crew to clean decks."

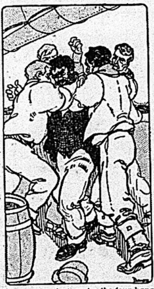
I descended to the forecastle, followed immediately by Handy Solomon. The latter had taken no part in the affair. We found the men in horrible shape, what with the bruises and cuts, and bleeding freely.

"Now, you're a nice looking Sunday school!" observed Handy Solomon, eying them sardonically. "Tackle Old Scrubs, will ye? Well, some needs a bale of cotton to fall on 'em afore they learns anything. Enjoyed your little diversions, mates? And w'at do you expect to gain? I asks you that now. You poor little infants! Ain't you never tackled him afore? Don't remember a little brigantine, name of the Petrel! My eye, but you are a pack of fools!"

To this he received no reply. The men sullenly assisted each other. Then they went immediately on deck and to work.

After this taste of his quality Captain Selover enjoyed a quiet ship. We made good time, but for a long while nothing happened. Finally the monotony was broken by an incident.

One evening before the night winds I sat in the shadow of the extra dory on top of the deckhouse. The moon was but just beyond the full, so I suppose I must have been practically invisible. Certainly the nigger did not know of my presence, for he came and stood within three feet of me without giving any sign. The companion was open. In a moment some door below was opened also, and a scrap of conversation came up to us very clearly.



Selover was afoot again, the four hanging to him like dogs.

"You haf dem finished?" the doctor's voice inquired. "So, that iss well." Papers rustled for a few moments. "And the r-result—ah—exactly—it iss that exactly. Percy, mein son, that maigs the experiment exact. We haf the process"—

"I don't see, sir, quite," replied the voice of Percy Darrow, with a tinge of excitement. "I can follow the logic of the experiment, of course; so can I follow the logic of a trip to the moon. But when you come to apply it how do you get your re-agent? There's no known method"—

Dr. Schermerhorn broke in: "Ach, it iss that I haf perfected. Pardon me, my boy; it iss the first I haf worked from you apart. It iss for a surprise. I haf made in small quantities the missing ingredient. It will form a perfect interruption to the current. Now we go"—

"Do you mean to say," almost shouted Darrow, "that you have succeeded in freeing it in the metal?"

"Yes," replied the doctor simply.

I could hear a chair overturned.

"Why, with that you can"—

"I can do efferything," broke in the doctor. "The possibilities are enormous."

"And you can really produce it in quantity?"

"I think so. It iss for us to discover."

A pause ensued.

"Why!" came the voice of Percy Darrow, awestricken. "With fifty centigrams only you could—you could transmute any substance—why, you could make anything you pleased almost! You could make enough diamonds to fill that chest! It is the philosopher's stone!"

"Diamonds—yes—it is possible," interrupted the doctor impatiently, "if it was worth while. But you should see the real importance"—

The ship careened to a chance swell. A door slammed. The voices were cut off. I looked up. The nigger's head was thrust forward fairly into the glow from the companionway. The mask of his sullenness had fallen. His eyes fairly rolled in excitement. His thick lips were drawn back to expose his teeth. His powerful figure was gathered with the tensity of a bow. When the door slammed he turned silently to glide away. At that instant the watch was changed, and in a moment I found myself in my bunk.

Ten seconds later the nigger, detained by Captain Selover for some trifling duty, burst into the forecastle. He was possessed of the wildest excitement. This in itself was enough to gain the attention of the men, but his first words were startling.

"I found de treasure!" he almost shouted. "I know where he kept!"

They leaped at him—Handy Solomon and Pulz—and fairly shook out of him what he thought he knew. He babbled in the forgotten terms of alchemy, dressing modern facts in the garments of mediaeval thought until they were scarcely to be recognized.

"And so he say dat he fine him, de philosopher stone, and he keep him in dat heavy box we see him carry aboard, and he don' have to make gol' with it—he can make diamon's—diamon's—he say it too easy to fill dat box plum full of diamon's."

They gesticulated and exclaimed and breathed hard, full of the marvel of such a thought. Then abruptly the clamor died to nothing. I felt six eyes bent on me, six unwinking eyes moving restless in motionless figures, suspicious, deadly as cobras.

Up to now my standing with the men had been well enough. Now they drew frankly apart. One of the most significant indications of this was the increased respect they paid my office. It was as though by prompt obedience, instant deference and the emphasizing of ship's etiquette they intended to draw sharply the line between themselves and me. There was much whispering apart, many private talks and consultations in which I had

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been inflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish." W. Bridge Built In Forty Minutes.

An unusual feat in pontoon bridge building has been accomplished by a company, a hundred strong, drawn from four cavalry regiments of the Berlin garrison. Arrived at a point where the Spree is very wide, the guardsmen, assisted by a dozen pioneers, constructed in forty minutes a bridge of steel boats and plates 108 feet long and ten feet broad. A squadron of cuirassier guards was the first to try it, riding twice across. Then a loaded baggage wagon weighing fifty hundredweight, drawn by six horses, traversed the bridge repeatedly.

A United South Africa.

England's dream of a united South Africa is coming true. The premiers of Cape Colony, the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony recently moved in their respective legislative assemblies the adoption of the resolution of the intercolonial customs and railway conference calling for an early union under the British crown. Natal is no whit behindhand, and the resolution of the conference specially referred to the inclusion of Rhodesia in the great South African state at a convenient opportunity.

Searchlights.

Metallic mirrors for searchlights may supersede those made of glass. The metallic mirror has a surface composed of alternate bands or rings of gold and white reflecting surfaces. It is claimed that this mirror gives a more penetrating beam of light both at night and in foggy weather and that the intensity of the light is so great that it is impossible to aim accurately at the projector. Another advantage claimed is that they are not fractured by concussion and that even when penetrated by bullets the area of distortion is very small.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

WHAT BOOTH'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE DOING FOR BELLEVILLE, ONT., PEOPLE.

All the blood in the body passes through the Kidneys every three minutes.

The Kidneys filter the blood.

They work night and day to daily remove about 500 grains of impure matter. If they fail some part of this impure matter is left in the blood, bringing on pain in the back, headache, dizziness, irregular heart, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gravel, dropsy, deposits in the urine. Booth's Kidney Pills make the filtering right and overcome Kidney trouble. Hundreds of Northumberland county residents have found this out.

Mrs. Wm. Buckley, of 104 John st., Belleville, Ont., says: "Mr. Buckley had been troubled with his back for some long time. He would take cold very often and it would invariably settle in the kidney region leaving him unable to stoop or straighten himself up without much suffering. He had tried a number of plasters and different remedies but there seemed to be little or no relief from them. He learned of Booth's Kidney Pills through a friend and procured a box at McKeown's Pharmacy. His back straightened in a very short time and the heavy, dull pain left it. He had not complained since and is stronger and better in every way." Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie Ont., Sole Canadian Agents.

Board of Education.

Mostly Routine Business Transacted Last Night.

At a regular meeting of the Board of Education, held last evening, the business transacted was mostly routine, nothing of much importance transpiring. The following members were present: Messrs. G. A. Bennett, Chairman; S. S. Moore, W. S. Smith, R. B. Morden, W. P. Hudson, P. Harrison, B. Mallory, F. S. Deacon, H. Naylor, W. R. Taylor, L. P. Hughes, J. Wallace, Wm. Johnson and Rev. A. L. Geen.

A communication was read stating that Mr. Luck's services could not be secured as Principal of Queen Victoria School, as the Calgary School Board would not let him go. They had increased his salary to $1500 per annum, with a promise to make it $1800 per year. Filed.

REPORTS.

Mr. J. Colling, Principal of the High School, presented a report showing that the attendance was 151. The teachers were doing good work and everything was progressing satisfactorily. He referred to the necessity of increasing the books in the library and also procuring some necessaries for the science room.—Referred to Committee on Supplies.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of the following accounts:

Greenleaf & Sons	$14.75
Tickell & Sons	50.25
J. B. Snider	3.00
C. B. Scantlebury &	40.00
W. W. Chown Co.	75.98

Wallbridge & Clarke	.85
W. W. Chown Co.	75.98
Geo. Maybee	16.87
Ritchie Co.	28.33
W. Mott	1.90

Report adopted.

ENQUIRIES.

Mr. Johnson asked if, providing more granolithic walks were to be built, the Board would not petition for a walk to be laid down on Church street, in front of Queen Victoria School.

He was told that it was not probable any more walks would be built this year.

Mr. Wallace enquired if anything had been done in reference to placing fire escapes upon the schools.

Chairman Bennett said nothing as yet, as the special committee appointed to look into the matter had not reported.

On motion of Mr. Johnson, seconded by Mr. Wallace, the committee was requested to report at once.

The committee having in charge the Station School were empowered to see that the yard was cleaned up.

"Rube" Carnival Was Big Success.

The "Rube Carnival" held at the Arena last night was well attended and proved to be a most enjoyable affair. There were many present in grotesque costumes, and the members of the I. O. O. F. band also wore weird make-ups. After the skaters had enjoyed themselves for some time they were lined up and the prizes were awarded. The successful competitors were as follows:

Miss Gwyneth Mackie—1st prize for ladies.

Mr. W. Asselstine—1st prize for gents.

Miss Eva Skinner—1st prize for girls.

G. Barclay—1st prize for boys.

W. Kyle won the prize for the best original costume.

D. D. G. M. at Tweed.

Rt. Wor. Bro. J. Nawton, D. D. G.M. for Prince Edward district of the Masonic fraternity, last evening paid an official visit to Tweed Lodge at Tweed. He was accompanied by Bros. H. F. Ketcheson, W. Stuart, W. B. Northrup, ex-M.P., J. G. Lindsay, H. Clark, E. Ashley and J. Moyer. The visitors were heartily received. During the evening Bro. T. Johnson, Past Master of Tweed Lodge, was presented with a Past Master's jewel. After the lodge work a banquet was held in Huyck's hotel, which was a most enjoyable affair.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Canoe Upset--Boys Nearly Drowned.

Tweed News: Charles Black, with two lads, Coleman Martin, son of Geo. Martin, merchant, and Jimmie Martin, son of Harvey Martin, started out from Stony Point on Lake Stoco for a duck shoot. They put up a sail and when about half a mile out from shore, the canoe suddenly capsized.

The boys after much hard struggling succeeded in catching hold of the canoe. Charles Black divested himself of as much clothing as possible. With much effort he got the boys astride the boat. They all called for help, but seeing no one coming, Charlie determined to swim to shore for help. He instructed the boys to remain quiet and hold on for dear life.

When he had gone about 300 yards he noticed a boat coming toward them and he put back for the boys again.

It is well that he did, for the young lads were all in through cold and fright. He kept them afloat till the boat bearing John Sills and Wm Simmons reached them. They were all taken to the Dynamite Engine rooms where they were given every attention.

The boys had a very close call for their lives and Mr. Black is deserving of great praise for his cool-headed heroism in the matter.

The water is about seventy feet deep at the place where the boat capsized.

Alleged Window Breakers Arrested.

Two young men, named Robert Lake and J. Danford, were this morning charged before Magistrate Masson with malicious injury to property. It is alleged the defendants, a few nights ago, deliberately broke two windows in Mr. J. Mather's store, at Stirling village. Upon application of Mr. Carnew for the accused the case was enlarged for a week, no evidence being taken. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown.

No Case Against Mr. Bert Duval.

A young man named Bert Duval, who claims Orillia as his home, was this morning charged before Magistrate Masson with stealing a horse and outfit, which belonged to Morrison and McGuire, liverymen, of this city. Duval and another party engaged the outfit to drive to Wooler, and did so, but remained away a day longer than they should have done. The outfit was recovered at Campbellford. After the evidence had been submitted Duval was allowed to go as he was evidently not the chief offender.

LAST RITES OF THE CHURCH ADMINISTERED

Miraculous Escape From Death of Mme. Lirette, of Sorel, Que.

"I look upon my recovery from approaching death as a miracle and it was "Fruit-a-tives" alone that cured me. I suffered from severe womb disease for seven years, and I suffered from severe constipation, great weakness and constant pain all the time. I was treated by six different physicians without any benefit and took every medicine I heard of, but nothing gave me any relief. My suffering was so intense that for a year I was unable to get out of bed—and I became so ill that my friends did not expect me to recover and the last rites of the Church were administered to me. At this time I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I began to improve. These tablets cured the constipation and relieved the dreadful womb pains. I began to improve and "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cured me. Nothing did me any good but "Fruit-a-tives." I took in all 18 boxes and I am quite as well as ever I was, entirely due to the use of this great medicine."

"Fruit-a-tives" is put up in a new 25c trial size as well as the regular 50c boxes in order to enable everyone to try these wonderful fruit juice tablets. Sent on receipt of price if your dealer does not have them.

MAN OF STERLING WORTH.

Sir James Whitney Eulogizes Mr. Borden at Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 11.—For the first time in several years, Sir James Whitney appeared on a public platform in Montreal last night, and the Premier of the sister province was accorded a hearty welcome.

Sir James addressed two gatherings —one in the Stanley Hall, and the other at Westmount—and at each he showed himself to be possessed of the power of oratory to a marked degree.

Although it was late when he reached the Victoria Hall, Westmount, it being past 10 o'clock, Sir James found a large crowd awaiting him, and he plunged almost immediately into a forcible argument, showing why the present Government should be ousted from office if the people of Canada were desirous of good government in the best sense of the word.

That there could be such a thing as a good Government, Sir James modestly asserted, clinching his statement by pointing to the record of the present Ontario Administration.

One of the features of his speech was his eulogy of R. L. Borden as a man of sterling worth, who had taken hold of the Conservative party when it was in the depths of despair.

President to Inspect Road.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy starts this morning on what is to be a most thorough inspection of the whole system of the C.P.R., including coal lands, irrigation systems, hotels and everything else connected with the railway. Sir Thomas will spend some time inspecting the two mammoth spiral tunnels in the Rockies, one on each side of the Kicking Horse river. One thousand men are engaged in this work, and the estimated cost is over $1,500,000. The completion of these tunnels will mean that two engines can pull at 20 miles an hour trains which it formerly took three engines to pull at five miles an hour.

Jury Favor Newspaper.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—Before Chief Justice Meredith yesterday morning, J. T. Cromwell sued The Ottawa Citizen for damages for alleged libel in an article in which it was stated that one of the plaintiff's houses was unfit for habitation. The article was written on a case that came before the Division Court. The jury decided to favor of The Citizen.

The chief justice in his charge to the jury said there had been only two cases like this before—one in Manitoba and one in England. The newspapers were not bound to publish every word of the evidence in order to escape such actions for damages.

Virginia Harned Refused Divorce.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 10.—Judge Pike on Thursday refused to grant Virginia Harned Sothern a divorce from her actor-husband, Edward N. Sothern, saying:

"This, I think, is a unique proceeding for a party to attempt to secure a divorce without appearing in court. I think I will deny the decree. If the interested parties do not deem it of enough importance to grace the court with their presence, I don't see why their family disturbances should be aired here."

Britain's Unemployed.

London, Oct. 10.—The general federation of trades unions has issued a manifesto declaring that there are 1,500,000 unemployed in the United Kingdom with dependents numbering 7,500,000 suffering thereby.

The federation recommends the creation of a Minister of Labor and a permanent "unemployment" board and that all members of labor unions refuse to work overtime.

Borrowed Money By Force.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 10.—Magistrate Williams yesterday morning sentenced Marachino Yoshida to twelve months' imprisonment at hard labor for borrowing money from a number of his compatriots after sending them threatening letters and forcing his demand for funds by displaying and firing a revolver.

Censures the Officers.

London, Oct. 10.—The presentment of the grand jury of the fall Assizes in connection with the case of Private Moir, censures certain officers at Wolseley Barracks for carelessness in allowing such large quantities of ammunition to be available to the soldiers.

Murdered by Filipinos.

Manila, Oct. 10.—Charles H. Trotter, an Americana, and Vincento Toledo and Jose Canayan, Spaniards, were killed last Wednesday near Lubao, in the Province of Pampagna, by a party of Filipinos.

The men were murdered with bolos and their bodies were mutilated.

Kilties Coming Home.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—Col. Robertson of the 48th Highlanders arrived in Montreal yesterday morning from his visit to Aldershot with the detachment of the regiment which accepted the invitation of the "Fighting Gordons."

The detachment is coming home in small parties.

Say He Deserted Horse.

Cobourg, Oct. 10.—On Oct. 2 Ernest Smith of Haldimand Township had a horse and buggy stolen by a man, it is alleged, giving his name as Harry Watson, who made off with the horse and vehicle and deserted the turnout in West Toronto. Smith went to Toronto on Tuesday to recover his property. The authorities have been on the look-out for the purloiner and Chief Rose yesterday received a wire from Chief Jarvis of Bowmanville that he had arrested Watson there. The prisoner was brought here.

Training School Superintendents.

Col. Leslie Ocquitted.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—In the sessions yesterday morning Col. J. K. Leslie came up for trial on the charge of obtaining $2,060 from Charles H. Dee by false pretences and Judge Winchester dismissed the case without sending it to the carefully-selected jury.

DRESS-MAKERS

The nervous strain through which dressmakers have to pass at certain seasons of the year seems almost beyond endurance, and frequently brings on nervous prostration, fainting spells, dizziness, sleeplessness and a general breaking down of the feminine system, until life seems altogether miserable.

For all overworked women there is one tried and true remedy.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

restores the feminine system to a strong, healthy, normal condition.

Mrs. A. D. Trudeau, Arnprior, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered terribly from ulceration of the feminine organs for eight years. I tried four doctors but got no relief, and thought I would have to die.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me. I hope every suffering woman will take my advice and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

'TIS PLOT OF KAISER

Paris Paper Says Wilhelm Is Behind Near East Troubles.

To Humiliate England and Curb the Young Turks—British War Vessels Start For Aegean — Servians Still Restless and Reserves Are Being Called Out—King Peter Is In Danger of Being Forced Out.

Paris, Oct. 10.—The Journal des Debats publishes a letter from what it calls an unusually well-informed source, describing the Balkan situation as a veritable plot of which Emperor William is the real author, with Baron Von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, a willing tool. It was the Emperor's object to humiliate Great Britain as a friend of the new regime in Turkey and at the same time to inflict a blow on the "Young Turkey," whose ascendancy threatened the German influence in the Empire. Ferdinand and Bulgaria were drawn in, the writer of the letter declares, in order to involve Russian sympathy and paralyze opposition from that quarter.

Valetta, Oct. 10.—The battleship Prince of Wales, flagship of Prince Henry of Battenberg; the battleship Glory, the cruisers Diana and Suffolk, and the torpedo-boat destroyers Angler and Banshee sailed yesterday for the Aegean Sea. The squadron will be followed later by the battleship Canopus and the cruiser Minerva.

Buda-Pesth, Oct. 10.—An explanation is being demanded of Belgrade regarding the reported calling out of the Servian reserves.

In the meanwhile Austria-Hungary has notified the signatory powers of the necessity adequately to protect her frontiers, including that of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Baron Von Aehrenthal, the Foreign Minister, in view of the more pacific tone of yesterday's despatches from Belgrade, is hopeful that Servia will refrain from any further hostile action.

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 10.—Theatre Square yesterday was the scene of renewed demonstrations by the populace. They were directed mainly against the Government, the demonstrators demanding the resignation of the Cabinet.

The already strong movement against King Peter is growing in strength, and the organizers of it are demanding that he either declare war against Austria-Hungary or abdicate in favor of his son, Crown Prince George.

The members of the National Assembly are arriving for an extraordinary session of that body, to be held to-day. This session is being awaited with intense interest.

The Austro-Hungarian legation here is strongly guarded by gendarmes.

Averted Balloon Catastrophe.

New York, Oct. 10.—A special to The Times from Springfield, Mass., says:

A balloon catastrophe was averted yesterday by Leo Stevens, who, at the height of 1,200 feet, climbed from the car into the rigging of the balloon Boston, and, poising himself on his elbows, opened the safety valve with his teeth. Five thousand people literally held their breath during the feat.

Floyd B. Smith of Yonkers and Harland T. Pierpont, a newspaper man, were in the balloon with Stevens.

Deported Crippled Boy.

London, Oct. 10.—(C. A. P.)—Last July a family named Wheeliker, one of whom, a boy, was crippled, emigrated to Canada. Before sailing Wheeliker was assured by the Canadian Government agent at Liverpool that there would be no difficulty about the boy's admission on account of defectiveness, but the boy was deported, in consequence of which the whole family returned.

Royalty Witnesses Flight.

Lemans, Oct. 10.—Wilbur Wright the aeroplanist, made several flights which were witnessed by Dowager Queen Marguerita of Italy, and among his passengers were Lt.-Gen. Baden-Powell of the British army, Count Serge Kaznakoff, a chamberlain to the Russian Emperor; H. Hebolte and Commandant Bouteleaux, director of the military aerostatic park at Meudon.

British Yukon Gold Co.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—Incorporation has been granted to the British Yukon Gold Mines Co., Ltd., with headquarters at Toronto and a capitalization of one and one-quarter million dollars.

The provisional directors are: Jas. Crawford Mitchell, Charles Wesley Mitchell, George Tilley, James Hopeson and William Kelly.

Four Days In Open Boat.

New York, Oct. 10.—After having abandoned their dismasted and waterlogged vessel, and passing four days in a small open boat on a storm-swept ocean, Capt. Charles F. Hines and the crew of seven men of the Baltimore schooner, J. A. Matheson, were brought into this port yesterday on the steamer Seminole, returning from San Domingo.

Fine Bank Building.

Winnipeg, Oct. 10.—The Bank of Montreal has purchased the Canada Permanent block on the corner of Portage avenue and Main street, and will erect a structure to cost about half a million dollars. The property has a frontage of 128 feet on Main street and 238 on Portage avenue, and the price paid was approximately $300,000.

MEN FALL 4,000 FEET

Aeronauts Have Miraculous Escape From Death.

Two Competitors In Big Balloon Race Reach High Altitude When Bag Bursts— Fell Faster Than Articles Thrown Out—Bag Falls Into Baby Carriage But Nurse Snatched Child Out and Saves Its Life.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—The international balloon race, which started yesterday from the suburb of Schmargendorf, was the occasion of a thrilling accident, two American aeronauts having a miraculous escape from death. The American balloon Conqueror, the only American-built craft in the contest, having on board A. Holland Forbes and Augustus Post, less than 2 minutes after the start, burst at an altitude of 4,000 feet.

For 2,000 feet it shot down like a bullet, and then the silk assumed the shape of a parachute and the rapidity of the descent was checked. Coming close to the earth, however, the basket smashed into the roof of a house, but the two men escaped with but slight injuries.

The race, at which twenty-three balloons participated, representing Great Britain, France, Germany, the United States, Switzerland, Italy, Belgium and Spain, started at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the presence of at least 80,000 spectators.

A. Holland Forbes, who appeared to be very little the worse for his experience, except that he was suffering somewhat from shock, gave a thrilling account of the accident.

"We have some difficulty, he said, "in getting away, but once we left the ground, everything seemed to be right. We mounted almost perpendicularly to an altitude of 4,000 feet. As I looked at the recording instrument to make a note of the altitude, I heard a peculiar swish and said to Post, 'that sounds dangerous.' Immediately I saw that the envelope was rapidly deflating. Instantly I threw the appendix clear of the basket and the ropes, and drawing my jack-knife, cut the ropes that were attached to the thiry-nine bags of sand hanging around the basket.

"Post in the meantime threw over everything portable. We could see, however, that we were falling more rapidly than some of the ejected articles. But later when the descent of the balloon was checked, we observed one bag of sand fall into a baby carriage, which was smashed to pieces, but fortunately the nurse snatched out the baby and saved its life.

"Both of us sprang up and held on to the ring above, hoping in that way to avoid the crash. Then above us could be seen the envelope gradually spreading out. It continued to fall with terrific speed until a sort of parachute had been formed, and then we knew that unless a further mishap occurred we would probably be saved from death."

FISHERMEN ARM.

Americans In Riddled Boat Carry Guns This Time.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 12.—Further trouble between United States and Canadian officials in Lake Superior is threatened.

It was alleged last night that a party of fishermen came to the city in the afternoon, secured a number of rifles and left immediately for the last return trip. Their boat carried several bullet holes, alleged to have been received in the recent battle.

Game Warden L. A. Hand of the Canadian Soo, who has returned from up the lake, says that he was not with Warden Calbeck when the fight took place, althugh he heard of the trouble.

To Honor Milner.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Lord Milner, who will pass through Toronto shortly, will receive the degree of LL.D. at a convocation of Toronto University on Wednesday, Oct. 21. At the same convocation the same degree will be conferred in absentia upon Lord Roberts.

The board of governors of the university has appointed E. H. Haultain to be associate professor in the faculty of mining in succession to Prof. Mickle, who has resigned. Dr. S. Morley Wickett and S. A. Codmore will this session carry on the work of Prof. S. J. McLean, who resigned to go on the railway commission.

Piano Factory Burned.

Listowel, Oct. 12.—The town of Listowel was visited by a very serious fire early Saturday morning, when the splendid factory of the Morris Piano Co. took fire.

The conflagration started in the fourth floor.

The building used for tuning and readjustment department, general offices, etc., remains intact, being only slightly damaged. About 75 men are thrown out of employment.

The loss will probably amount to $75,000, mostly covered by insurance.

Bodies Bound With Wire.

New York, Oct. 12.—A tragic mystery came to light Saturday when the bodies of a well-dressed man and woman, bound securely together with wire, were found floating in Jamaica Bay. The bodies have not yet been identified. They were found by two fishermen.

Both victims had their valuables intact; the woman's chatelaine bag was even wired to her wrist.

Author Killed.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—It is reported from The Pas that James Oliver Curwood, the well-known American author of Detroit, Mich., who recently went into Hudson Bay wilds for the Bobbs Merrill Publishing Co., has been killed by Indians in Lac La Ronge country.

ROBBER WAS PATIENT.

Youth Confesses to Starving Four Days In Vault to Get Money.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Edward Wieren, 19 years old, confessed yesterday to the theft of $700 from the vault of the [illegible] Allen Manufacturing Co., where he had been employed.

The youth said that he had secreted himself in the vault four days before the robbery and had remained there without food or water until the day on which he knew the money would be deposited.

After emerging from his place of concealment Wieren pocketed the money, he said, and awaited the opening of the vault door, which had been locked when the money was placed in the receptacle. He then struck down Henry Gibbs, a superintendent, who opened the door, and escaped with the money.

Wieren placed $600 in a Chicago bank. Saturday when he appeared at the bank to withdraw it he was arrested.

Noisy Joint Meeting.

Fredericton, N.B., Oct. 12.—The two political candidates for York County, O. S. Crocket, ex-M.P., and N. W. Brown, met in joint debate at Stanley, and for nearly three hours there was a wild time.

The audience was largely Conservative. Crocket spoke first. Brown, in his speech had to be called to task several times by Crocket, who had ten minutes in which to reply. When the chairman called time the crowd yelled for Crocket to go on, and on the chairman refusing to allow the speaker to continue, the crowd rushed to the stage, grabbed Crocket and bore him from the hall, cheering frantically.

Bigger the Family, Smaller the Taxes.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—The Kaiser's jest in a speech some time ago in reference to the taxation of bachelors, it is now seen, has caused a serious effect.

The Prussian Diet in its coming session proposes to pass a modification of the income tax in favor of married men with children. A special reduction is to be allowed for every child.

Duck Hunter Drowns.

Oak Lake, Man., Oct. 12.—John [illegible], a farmer living seven miles south of here, was drowned while out duck shooting. He went after a wounded duck alone in a canoe and upset.

Mr. Borden Visits Cobalt.

He Answers Fielding's Charge Against Tory Officials.

Hon. Frank Cochrane Says Whitney Will Force Government to Give Pioneer Powers to T. & N. O. Railway—Tom Murray, ex-Liberal M.P. for Pontiac, Appears and Roasts His Old Colleagues.

Cobalt, Oct. 12.—Tom Murray, ex-Liberal M.P. for Pontiac, sat on the platform with R. L. Borden here on Saturday afternoon and raked his old friends fore and aft for their desertion of Liberal principles.

He unhesitatingly accepted Mr. Borden as his leader, believing him to be an honest and honorable man, and expressed the wish that the best men of both parties would combine under Mr. Borden.

A new factor was also injected into the campaign when Hon. Frank Cochrane discussed the refusal of the Laurier Government to give assistance to the people's road, the T. & N. O. And he made it plain that should there be a change of Government at Ottawa Sir James Whitney would make an assault on the capital till the usual bonus to pioneer roads was forthcoming. This would enable the Whitney Government to build branch lines and thus assist in the further development of this rich district.

The meeting was held in the opera house. It will hold 1,200 people, and it was crowded.

Referring to Mr. Fielding's statement that there had been no charges of extravagance and plundering except against Tory officials, Mr. Borden said: "I make the statement and I desire that it be carried to Mr. Fielding, that that statement is absolutely without foundation, and that he knew it when he made it. That charge lies at the door of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Fielding and every member of the present Government. I say Mr. Fielding more than any other man is responsible. He never put a dollar of public money into his own pocket, but there is no more dangerous man in public life in Canada, because he poured out the public money of this country by hundreds of thousands and millions for purposes which he knew were not in the public interest. He has carried out what he carried out, only on a smaller scale, in Nova Scotia."

Proceeding, he said Sir Wilfrid Laurier knew the condition of the Marine Department before the report of the civil service commissioners, and if he desired further proof he (Borden) was ready for an investigation when Parliament meets.

GONE WITH WIFE'S MONEY.

Walkerville Man Buys Saloon and Then Sells It Back For Less.

Walkerville, Oct. 12.—Edward Turner, for several years an employe of the Canadian Bridge & Iron Works here, has been missing a week and the provincial police are looking for him. Just before he disappeared Turner bought a saloon in Detroit, but almost immediately he sold it back to its former proprietor for less money, it is said, than he paid for it. He is said to have had upwards of $2,500 in his possession when he went to Detroit to buy the saloon. It is claimed that the greater proportion of all the money belonged to his wife, who is a member of a well-to-do family near Tecumseh and to whom Turner was married three months ago. Neither his wife nor any of his friends has heard from him since he left Detroit after selling back the saloon.

Hanna For Cabinet?

Cobalt, Oct. 12.—Prominent Conservatives who have been traveling with Mr. Borden stated Saturday that there is no doubt that if the Conservatives carry the country on Oct. 26 one of the outside men who will be asked to join the Borden administration will be Hon. W. J. Hanna.

The Provincial Secretary has been the most valued lieutenant of the Conservative leader on this tour and his reception everywhere has been remarkably warm. Mr. Hanna, it is said, would not reject an offer to enter the federal arena.

Ship Collision In a Fog.

Hamburg, Oct. 12.—The German steamers Pretoria and Nipponia have been in collision in the fog off Scheveningen. Thirteen of the Nipponia's crew, including the captain, were drowned. The Pretoria was not damaged.

Must Quit Home or Go to Prison.

Paterson, N.J., Oct. 12.—Judge Francis, in the Court of Special Sessions, ordered Samuel Band of No. 84 Governor street to stay away from her under penalty of a state prison term of one year. By the decision of the court he is practically divorced from his wife.

Japs After Preston.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 12.—Japanese newspapers received here bitterly attack W. T. R. Preston, the Canadian trade commissioner at Tokio, accusing him of a desire to promote Japanese immigration to Canada.

Says Voters' Names Were Dropped.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—The charge is made here that hundreds of voters' names have been omitted from the lists in printing, and these seem to be all Liberals. The Government pleads a printers' error.

Took Blue Ointment.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—Mrs. Sullivan, 420 Jarvis street, took blue ointment internally Friday evening and is in a critical condition in the General Hospital.

WHEAT BELOW ESTIMATES.

Late Bad Weather Responsible For Nine-Million-Bushel Drop.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—A statement of the estimated yield and quality of field crops and the condition of live stock in Canada is given out by the census and statistics office. Returns are based on the actual threshing results so far as they have been obtained.

The average yield of wheat is estimated at 17 1-2 bushels per acre, indicating a total production of 115,651,000 bushels; oats, 33.7 bushels per acre, a total of 267,651,000 bushels; barley, 29.0 bushels per acre, a total of 50,723,000 bushels, and, rye, 18.8 bushels per acre, a total of 1,889,000 bushels; peas, 17.4 bushels per acre, a total of 7,178,000 bushels; buckwheat, 25.3 bushels per acre, a total of 7,365,000 bushels; mixed grains, 32.9 bushels per acre, a total of 19,113,000 bushels; potatoes, an average of 145.4 bushels per acre, a total of 72,228,000 bushels; turnips and other roots, 309.7 bushels per acre, a total of 84,975,000 bushels; hay and clover, 1.4 tons per acre, a total yield of 11,642,000 tons; fodder corn, 10.9 tons per acre, a total of 2,835,000 tons.

The yield of wheat, as estimated from the condition of the crops at the end of August, is not maintained by present threshing results, the total yield of wheat—as now estimated—being 3 1-2 bushels per acre less, or a diminution in the total production as then estimated of 9,039,000 bushels.

The drop is almost entirely due to returns from the provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, where climatic influences appear to have had greater effect upon the yield than were indicated by the appearance of the crops at the end of August. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta the estimated yield of wheat is 95,818,000 bushels; of oats, 105,481,000 bushels, and of barley 23,362,000 bushels.

Live stock is reported to be in fairly good condition.

FIRE IN NORTH BAY.

Atlantic Hotel and Two Residences Are Destroyed.

North Bay, Oct. 12.—At 1 o'clock yesterday morning fire broke out in sheds at the rear of Atlantic Hotel, and the hotel and two valuable residences were completely destroyed with sheds and stables at a loss of about $25,000.

The Atlantic Hotel is owned by a local syndicate, who paid $8,000 for the property. The hotel has been unoccupied of late, as only a three months' license was issued at the spring meeting of the commissioners, and no renewal was granted. Neighbors state that the hotel sheds were used by vagrants for sleeping quarters.

Only the absence of wind prevented the flames from spreading over a wide area, as the water pressure was very weak on account of the intake pipe of the waterworks system being blocked.

Occupants of the residences fled from the burning buildings in their night robes, and very little could be saved. The Atlantic Hotel loss is about $7,000; insurance $6,000. Dr. McMurchy's office, residence and outbuildings were burned, and only the furniture in the front of the house was saved. Loss $7,000, with $3,000 insurance.

H. Trelford's residence and outbuildings were leveled to the ground, and very little furniture saved. Loss $7,000; insurance $4,500. John Ferguson's residence was on fire several times, but was saved.

Dress Goods Sale

We have gone carefully through our entire stock of Black and Colored Dress Goods and laid out all the odd lines, pieces where we had several colors in the same quality and have only one shade left, and grouped them in two lots to sell at

35c and 50c

These consist of Voiles, Silk and Wool Eoliennes, Crepe de Chenes, Tweeds Serges, Plaids, etc., etc., most of which were from 75c to $1.00 per yard and some as high as $1.50 and we decided to make a thorough house-cleaning in this department and offer the whole lot at 35c and 50c a yard. It may be well worth your while to have a look through these as they are certainly splendid bargains. On sale now in the Dress Goods Department.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Hints of winter everywhere
Scent of mothballs in the air.

• • •

Think you can get another winter out of that overcoat?

• • •

There is no truth in the report that, if elected, Mr. McCargar will get a portfolio in the Laurier Cabinet. He has other fish to fry.

• • •

If the ladies' hats, this fall, have to be paid for according to size, we can see the financial finish of some friends of ours.

• • •

Local minister said, last night, that the greatest evil Christianity had to contend with to-day was the presence, in churches, of professing Christians, who used their religion as a cloak under which to do evil. Exactly. It isn't always the man who carries the biggest Bible that follows closest "In His steps."

(N. B.—Come around here and we'll tell you if you're thinking of the same man we are.)

With John Bull's war dogs assembling in the Aegian sea, none of the little powers seem so anxious to knock the chips off each other's shoulders.

• • •

Maple leaves are becoming a beautiful red. Very likely they are blushing to think of some of the men a few Grits want to send to Parliament.

• • •

Some of the street lights last night certainly did not resemble the Laurier Government. By no stretch of imagination could one call them "Hundred scandal power."

• • •

Fashion now decrees that women wear suspenders. Ahem! What next?

• • •

There is one little piece of satisfaction for Mr. J. K. McCargar, anyhow. Rude Toronto papers, which are poking fun at him, do not spell his name right.

• • •

They are burning Austrian flags in Belgrade, which suggests the thought that the weather over there must be about as cold as it was in Ontario last night.

• • •

Let us see, Manitoba goes Tory; then British Columbia; then Ontario; then New Brunswick; next comes Canada with one grand crushing sweep that will bundle the grafters off the decks of the ship of state.

• • •

The Toronto Mail and Empire has a clever parody on "The Boys of the Old Brigade." The last verse has local color:

Where are the pirates of Byron Lott,
Who buried beneath the waves,
The ballot-boxes of Yankee Land,
Where are those sordid knaves?
In exile now they sadly roam,
Far from the scenes of raid,
Probably sheltered in well-worn jails
Rest the boys of the Grit brigade.

• • •

Prior to taking office the following were the sentiments of Sir Wilfrid and Sir Richard Cartwright in the matter of expenditure:

"I promise that if you put our party into power we will reduce the annual expenditure by $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 per annum."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 1896.

"I repeat now that $38,000,000, let alone $40,000,000, is, in my judgment, a monstrous sum for the people of Canada to be called upon to provide."—Sir Richard Cartwright.

"I say that it is a disgrace and a shame to the Government, that they ask for an expenditure of $38,300,000 a year for Federal purposes. Sir, the thing is utterly unjustifiable." — Sir Richard Cartwright.

The following, in round figures, is the amount by which the expenditure under Laurier rule exceeds that of the last Conservative year, which Sir Wilfrid faithfully promised to reduce $2,000,000 or $3,000,000:

In 1896, expenditure under Conservatives	$41,702,900
In 1897 this was exceeded by	1,200,000
In 1898 this was exceeded by	3,600,000
In 1899 this was exceeded by	9,800,000
In 1900 this was exceeded by	11,000,000
In 1901 this was exceeded by	15,200,000
In 1902 this was exceeded by	22,200,000
In 1903 this was exceeded by	20,000,000
In 1904 this was exceeded by	30,500,000
In 1905 this was exceeded by	37,100,000
In 1906 this was exceeded by	41,500,000
In 1907 this was exceeded by	68,800,000

• • •

Or look at it in another way:

Ten years Conservative expenditure, 1897-1906 ...	423,358,830
Ten years Laurier expenditure, 1897-1906	655,335,633
Excess in Laurier period	$231,976,802

The expenditure for the years 1907-8 was $88.40 for every family in Canada.

There is no country on earth so over-governed as Canada.

Conservatives, read the following: After the general elections of January 12, 1874, the Hon. Alexander Mackenzie had a majority of over ninety in the House. When Mr. Mackenzie appealed to the electors on September 17, 1878, there was a veritable political earthquake, as he was overwhelmingly defeated by Sir John A. Macdonald, who, on the meeting of Parliament, had 66 at his back, being a turn-over of 78 constituencies.

• • •

Rumor says that the price of shaves (to Grits) will be raised from 10 to 15 cents after the 26th. Grit faces will be so long then.

• • •

In order, probably, to even things up, many clever people are, these days, writing long articles on Liberal shortcomings.

• • •

Those little piles of mud, which decorated Front St. for three or four days, may have been picturesque, but hardly anybody will say they were not out of place. A little more expedition in their removal would have been appreciated by the merchants and their country customers.

• • •

A country editor down in Quebec is running for Parliament and tells his readers a lot of reasons why he would like to be elected. One excellent reason, however, he does not give—he needs the money.

• • •

Looks as though the Cubs were going to wipe out the Tigers. "Is this another case of "Youth will be served?"

• • •

Canada at present is flooded with counterfeits, not including those who want to help Laurier finish his work.

• • •

In Toronto Sir Richard Cartwright said Canada needed statesmen, not grafters. That's what we've been trying to tell him all along. When did old Sir Dick turn Conservative?

• • •

There is a rumor on the streets that the Liberal Association of this city is making an effort to induce the Rev. editor of the Globe to come to Belleville, and hold forth. Subject, "How Laurier kept his pledges of 1903." It will be interesting. The nomination being the day after the Sabbath, with its influences still upon him, of course he will tell the truth.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend of Toronto is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face, and consequently tone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at Hotel Quinte, Belleville, on Tuesday, Oct. 13.

Bring your visiting card plate to The Intelligencer office. We will do your engraving promptly, as cheap as elsewhere, guaranteeing first-class workmanship.

EAST HASTINGS.

The "Grey Horse" Wins.

We live in an age of surprises. The last one was the announcement, on Friday last, of the selection by the Grits' mass meeting, held in Tweed, of Mr. J. K. McCargar to contest, in the Liberal interests, the East Riding of the County of Hastings at the approaching election.

When this announcement appeared in the issue of the evening edition of The Intelligencer it created laughter and was ridiculed and declared to be a malicious Tory joke by the leading Liberals of the city, but as the truth dawned upon their bewildered brains they became serious and began to ask each other what it meant.

"Is it possible," exclaimed a shining light in the ranks of the party, "that Liberalism in this county has become so discredited and so demoralized that no man of standing among us will accept a nomination?"

"It appears so," replied a brother in distress, "and is it any wonder when the record of the party for the past twelve years is analyzed, but a candidate had to be secured, orders had been received from headquarters and they must be obeyed, so a mass meeting, not a convention, was summoned, and when it met the trouble began. Not one of the hitherto faithful would accept, not even those who had been canvassing for a nomination for weeks past. Mr. Clark, of Limerick, declined the honor; neither Mr. Dale or Mr. Cross, of Madoc, could be induced to enter the ring. Next came the two Belleville aspirants for Parliamentary honors, Messrs. Butler and Vermilyea, and to the surprise of all who were present, neither of these gentlemen would become the scapegoat of the Toronto and Ottawa heelers.

What had transpired to dampen the ardour of these ambitious gentlemen? Was it a knowledge of certain defeat, both in Hastings and in the country, and that in such an event there would be no patronage for them to bestow upon friends or places to secure for themselves?

It is known that Mr. Butler has for weeks been vowing vehemently that he would secure the nomination, and be the candidate. Had his visit to Ottawa a few days ago anything to do with his retirement? If he will let us know it shall be given to his friends and admirers wherever they can be found.

That Mr. Butler should have shown the white feather is not surprising, but what of the heroic Liberal sage? It was mooted about the city that a messenger had arrived post-haste from Ottawa, empowered to enter into negotiations and make any promise necessary to induce the gentleman to consent to enter the field and oppose Mr. Northrup, whose ability and tact they fear.

This is not all. Is it not true that Nathanael received a letter from Toronto, signed by one or two of the organizers, pledging a Senatorship if he would but offer himself a sacrifice for the party?

"No," says the sage, "you have fl—— so often in the past, I trust you not, but I will assist in securing a candidate who will obey your behest and die like a man, in harness."

Finding themselves in a quandary, a wag suggested, not a "dark horse" for the race, but a "white one." Remembering, as many of them did, the midnight wanderings of the "old grey mare" in times gone by, they clapped their hands with joy, declaring the suggestion was a happy solution of the quandary in which they found themselves, and at once Mr. J. K. McCargar's name was proposed and received with great eclat.

Now for the fight. Let no man remain away from the polls. There is but one duty for every man to perform, and that is to record his vote and make the Grits forfeit the deposit. It will be no loss to the candidate, the funds being provided out of the pile which the Grits have collected for that purpose.

* * *

Now, it will be in order to inquire into and ascertain what this gentleman's record is and has been in connection with his duties as Fishery Overseer in this district. Hew to the line, let the chips fall where they will.

Stop that Scratching

Just as long as you have dandruff your head will itch. It's the little microbes that are gnawing down into the hair roots. It may take a long time for these persistent pests to get down to the vital part but when they do, they will destroy the life of the hair in a very short time.

"My hair was falling out rapidly and becoming gray when I heard of your guaranteed Hair Restorer, and, after using one bottle my hair stopped turning gray. The first application removed the itching, my hair stopped falling out and I now have a new growth of hair, and it is soft, glossy and pliable." Carrie Williams, 834 Clinton Ave. South, Rochester, N.Y.

Parisian Sage, the delightful Hair Restorer, is guaranteed by J. S. McKeown to stop falling hair to cure dandruff and all diseases of the scalp or money back. It is the most refreshing hair dressing in the world. Ladies use it extensively because it makes the hair beautiful, soft and luxuriant. 50 cents a bottle at J. S. SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

On Friday afternoon, on the Coleman flats diamond, the Separate School and Canifton Road School had a baseball match, being one of a series for the possession of a trophy competed for by the schools of the city. It proved to be a Waterloo for the Canifton Road School boys who scored but 3 runs whilst the Separate School lads piled up a score of 48 runs. Mr. A. P. Allen was umpire.

Chicago beat Detroit 10-6 on Saturday, playing in rain and mud, which prevented the best brand of baseball. About $16,500 was taken in at the gate. Score by innings:

										R.	H.	E.
Detroit	1	0	0	0	0	0	3	2	0	6	10	3
Chicago	0	0	4	0	0	0	1	0	5	10	14	2

Batteries — Summers, Killian and Schmidt; Brown, Overall, Reulbach and Kling.

On Sunday, at Chicago, "Wild Bill" Donovan, for Detroit, pitched gilt-edged baseball for seven innings, and then blew up. In the 8th Chicago hit him for a home run, a triple, a double and three singles. Which was going some. Six Chicago runs went over the plate, and Detroit's heart was nearly broken. Score by innings:

Batteries — Overall and Kling; Donovan and Schmidt.

The third game in the world's championship series will be played in Chicago this afternoon. Critics think that, as exemplified in the present contest, National League baseball is faster than American League ball, and neither one of them has very much on the best Eastern League teams.

Football results on Saturday: Varsity 32, McGill 0; Queen's 14, Ottawa College 7; Hamilton Tigers 23, Montreal 9; Ottawa 45, Toronto Argos 11; Brockville 17, Kingston 7.

One hundred and fifty started in the Ward Marathon race at Toronto on Saturday, which was won easily by Longboat, who ran the 19 1-4 miles in 1.51.29, finishing over a mile ahead of the second man, John Roe, with Fred Meadows third. Longboat has now won the Ward trophy three times in succession, and it becomes his property. The great Indian runner was in the pink of condition. Had he run in London like he did on Saturday neither Dorando nor Hayes would have had a look-in for the Marathon.

The next great sporting event will be the A. O. U. W. road race on Thanksgiving day. How are the budding "Longboats" of this city getting on with their training?

Mr. Sayers Buried.

The funeral of the late Mr. George Sayers, of Thurlow, took place yesterday and was largely attended. Services were held at Bethel church, which sacred edifice was far too small to accommodate all who desired to enter. Rev. Mr. Kemp, conducted the services, preaching an appropriate sermon. The remains were interred in the cemetery at Moira. The bearers were Messrs. W. Ketcheson, W. Caldwell, J. Denyes, E. Sills, G. Chambers and B. Phillips.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"BABES IN TOYLAND."

This mammoth production will be at the Carman opera house on Wed., Oct. 14th. This mere announcement cannot carry with it the full strength of the event. There was a time when such attractions as "Babes In Toyland" were denied local theatregoers because of fear of Managers that there would be speculation on the merit of a New York success en-tour, but lately it has been demonstrated that the biggest offerings can be brought to the doors of the people, and hence the weeding of a great many ordinary bookings and the advent of shows that are worthy of price and patronage. "Babes in Toyland" comes with practically a special train for two modern coaches are required to handle the company, and one of the largest baggage cars are used to transfer the great quantity of scenery and effects used in this wonderful success, so cleverly conceived by Glen MacDonough and Victor Herbert. The company is complete and the chorus is one of the most attractive on the road. The music is of the sort that lingers and there is a vein of comedy that blends excellently with the spectator. There are so many songs in "Babes in Toyland" that every taste is gratified. Among the many brilliant musical numbers which Victor Herbert wrote for his most pretentious work may be mentioned, Floretta, Barney O'Flynn, Castle in Spain, Beatrice Barefacts, I Can't do that Sum, Jane, Slumber Deep, Before and After, He Won't be Happy till he gets it, The Moon Will Help you Out, Bo Peep, and the song of Toyland.

Prices 25, 50, 75, $1, and $1.50. Plan opened this morning.

OBITUARY

MRS. ISABELLA JOHNSTON

In the death of Mrs. Isabella Johnston, which occurred at an early hour this morning at her late residence, south Front stret, an aged and well-known citizen passed away. Deceased was born in Ireland 74 years ago, and had lived in this city over half a century. She was a lady who was highly esteemed by all who knew her. Deceased was a member of St. Andrew's church. Mr. Johnston preceded her to the tomb a number of years ago. The surviving members of the family are one son, George, who is in British Columbia, and one daughter, Miss Margaret, of this city.

MISS GREATRIX FRASER.

Miss Greatrix Fraser, who had for the past eight months been an inmate of the House of Refuge, died yesterday. Deceased, who was 77 years of age, was born in Madoc Township, where she lived all her life. Miss Fraser had been for the greater portion of her life an invalid.

GREAT CLEARING SALE OF WALLPAPER

AT

Scantlebury's

We have recently purchased at 37c on the dollar, the entire stock of Mr. John Cornelius. The goods have been brought to our warerooms and put in order and are now on sale at less than one half their value.

The stock has been so minutely arranged that small quantities can be handled without any difficulty of shortages. This is to say, we know what we have of everything and these small quantities in many cases will be cleared out at one quarter their valne. The Cornelius stock must all be closed out before the end of the year, as we cannot bother with small quantities in the regular working season and the advantage will be to the purchaser.

Never before such an opportunity of buying wall paper at such prices and this, too, right in the face of the advance of wall-paper prices during the past three months of 25 per cent. Wall paper will be higher in price in the future, but during this sale you will have the great advantage of bargain prices such at you will not recall or repeat.

With this stock of wallpaper we have 10,000 feet of room moulding purchased in the same stock, which will be sold at like bargains to those of wall paper.

TIMELY TOPICS

Plasters and Cuts.

Although court plaster is useful in protecting small scratches or abrasions of the skin from harm, it should not be used over any considerable cut or wound in process of healing. These will heal much faster if simply covered with a bit of soft linen held in place at the ends with strips of surgeon's plaster.

Polite to Lightning.

When a native of Quito sees a flash of lightning he reverently removes his hat.

Straw Hats.

Head wear made of straw was already in use among the ancient Greeks, but straw hats like those we wear did not come into use in Europe until half a century ago.

Inimical Plants.

Two well known English plants, the thistle and the rape, are so inimical that if a field is infested with thistles, which come up year after year and ruin the crops, all you have to do is to sow it with raps. The thistles will be absolutely annihilated.

The Life Plant.

The leaf of a creeping moss found in the West Indies, known as the "life plant," is absolutely indestructible by any means except immersion in boiling water or the application of a redhot iron.

Five Largest Cities.

The five largest cities on earth are in the order of their size London, New York, Paris, Chicago, Berlin.

Infidel Garments.

In the Mohammedan laundries of Egypt a secret mark is used to distinguish the linen of "believers" and keep it from polluting contact with infidel garments. This mark is carefully removed before the garments are returned.

A Big Rock Pile.

A million tons of rock (fourteen cubic feet to a ton) would make a cube with sides 241 feet long.

Spaniards and Hares.

Hares are never eaten by Spaniards because in Spain there is a superstition that hares in the night visit churchyards, burrow into the graves and eat the dead bodies.

No man's head appears on any United States coin.

The Pamirs.

The Pamirs, sometimes called the "Roof of the World," consist of a number of bleak plateaus and shallow valleys situated about 13.000 feet above sea level. They lie to the north of India.

The Republics.

Including Haiti, Santo Domingo, Panama and Liberia, there are now twenty-four republics in the world.

Lapland Dress.

Both men and women in Lapland dress precisely alike. They wear tunics belted loosely at the waist, tight breeches, wrinkled leather stockings and pointed shoes. Their whole appearance, in short, is identical, at least to the casual observer.

Sixteenth Century Fencers.

In the sixteenth century fencers held the sword in their right hand and a dagger in the left to ward off blows.

Seeds Like Pebbles.

The seeds of the Philippine bean from the coast near Manila so closely resemble the quartz pebbles, among which they fall, in shape, size and color, luster, hardiness and stratification as to be almost indistinguishable.

Calculi.

The Romans used little stones—calculi—in counting, and hence the word calculate.

Turkish Houses.

Very little furniture is used in the bedrooms of Turkish houses. Rarely is a chair seen in any of them. A few mats adorn the room, and the bed is stretched on the floor.

To Maroon.

The word "maroon," to "set a person on an inhospitable shore and leave him there," a practice that was common among the pirates of the Spanish main, is a corruption of "cimarron," meaning anything unruly, whether man or beast.

Persian Beauties.

Some of the beauties of Persia decorate their faces by painting figures of animals and insects upon them.

Dynamite.

Dynamite explodes so rapidly that its force is exerted in the direction from which the greatest pressure comes. That is, if the dynamite be placed on the ground the explosive force is down; if it be hung against a wall its force attacks the wall; if it be hung under an object its force is upward.

Woman's World

CECILE CHAMINADE.

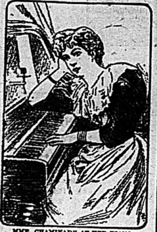
The Only Living Woman Composer With Any Pretensions to Celebrity.

Cecile Chaminade, whose husband, M. Carbonel, died lately, will visit America for the first time this fall. For years past Mme. Chaminade has been receiving offers from American managers: "I made her one myself three years ago, which she declined, as she had declined others, on the ground that her poor health would not permit her to cross the ocean," said Charles Henry Meltzer, who recently interviewed the charming composer.

"Now, however, as she assured me while I sat chatting with her in her summer home at Le Vesinet, near St. Germain, she feels strong enough to brave anything, even the American critics, whom her Parisian friends, it seems, have been using as scarecrows to prevent her leaving them.

"Of course you know—and if you don't I strongly advise you not to say so—that, since the death of Augusta Holmes, Cecile Chaminade is the one living woman composer with any pretension to celebrity.

"Her songs, her sonatas and her ballet, 'Callisboe,' are known to the whole world. Many of her works have been played at the American Symphony concerts, and her 'Prelude For Organ' was performed at the funeral of no less important a person than the late lamented and respect worthy Queen Victoria.



MME. CHAMINADE AT HER PIANO.

" 'How do I compose?' she said. 'I am most likely to be inspired when I am in the woods or by the sea, quite close to nature. Usually when an idea comes to me I meditate over it for a time. Then, sometimes without needing any piano, I begin to write.

" 'Before it is written I hear, as most composers hear—and I mean this literally—every note of the music I compose. I hear every instrument in the orchestra for which I am scoring my work as clearly or almost as clearly as if real instruments were performing my music for me. Once while I was composing the loudness of an imaginary instrument annoyed me so much that I startled some of my friends who were with me by exclaiming: "Oh, that oboe! That abominable oboe!" "Why, what's the matter with you?" said one of them. "Nothing," I answered. "I was only thinking."

" 'Which is the most popular of my compositions? I think my song called "L'Anneau d'Argent," or "The Silver Ring." Over 200,000 copies of it have been sold, and it has been sung everywhere. Another song, "Si j'etais Jardinier," is also a great favorite.' "

Some Women Abroad.

In Dutch Guiana the women carry about their waists in large flat bags, ornamented or plain, all the family savings, in the shape of heavy bracelets and anglets, necklaces and even crowns of gold and silver.

The Japanese woman does not blacken her teeth under any mistaken idea that it makes her less beautiful. She does it to make herself as unattractive as possible and is supposed to have no desire to please the other sex.

The headdress and coral jewelry of a German woman are usually heirlooms and vary greatly according to the financial status of the family. The gold fastenings of the necklaces may be anything from a small clasp to one the size of a brooch, covered with expensive filigree work.

When large enough to satisfy the pride of the owner, the clasp is always worn in front. One or all of these pieces of jewelry must form a part of every smart girl's "dot," while among the farming people her dower mainly consists of cows and sheep.

A Spanish maiden who is the least bit attractive is always attended by a young man. He is called her "novio," and it is his privilege to accompany her on her walks, though, of course, her mother or maid is also in attendance to play propriety. His courtship seldom ends in his becoming engaged to the young woman, but while it lasts she must be obedient and loyal to him. If he should transfer his affections to another fair damsel the slighted one has no redress, as an old custom gives him the right to do so, and the friendship must never be regarded in the light of a broken engagement.

A marriage is settled by the heads of the two families chiefly concerned, and until this comes to pass the young Spaniard may be the novio of as many girls as he chooses, one after another.

The Woman and Her Paper.

Did you ever notice how a woman opens a paper? It is as different from the method of a man as her skirt is from his trousers.

If she is in her own home, with plenty of space and sitting in a capacious rocking chair, she has room enough to do it successfully. If she is anywhere else, she instantly becomes a public nuisance.

A man opens his paper sharply, keeping the sheets closely together, folds it lengthwise in half, then doubles it, making it into a flat pamphlet, and reads it comfortably. He doesn't gouge any one's eyes out or knock off hats or tickle the backs of ears and necks.

But a woman! She opens the sheets and then spreads out their entire length in front of her, up in the air, with both arms extended at full length to hold the edges. The fact that she is reading the first column on the first sheet does not prevent her from keeping the paper spread out in this position during the whole time she is reading.

When she turns another sheet she pushes the whole thing a bit higher in the air, makes as much of a breeze as she can when she is turning it and then readjusts it again in this spread eagle position.

Left Side Is Best Side.

"Profile?" said the photographer. "Then turn the left side, please."

The young girl looked impressed.

"Did you notice it?" she asked. "You must have sharp eyes. I thought it was a fact known only to myself."

"What fact?" asked the photographer.

"Why, the fact that the left side of my face is a little better than the right side and that the left profile is more regular."

"Oh!" said the photographer. "Of course I noticed that. That, you know, is the case with everybody. Everybody's left profile is better than the right one. The eye is opened more fully, the mouth has a finer curve, the cheek's contour is firmer, and the hair about the temples is thicker.

"Notice after this the profile photographs you come across, and you'll find that nine out of ten of them portray the left side of the face."

Teach Children to Be Tidy.

A waste paper basket should form part of every nursery equipment. Children should be taught to put into it all scraps of paper, cuttings from dolls' dressmaking and any other little odds and ends that would otherwise litter the nursery floor.

It will teach them an excellent lesson in tidiness and be good training, especially for the girls, for the day when each will have a home of her own.

While children are young it is comparatively easy to teach them to be tidy, but the lesson is hard to learn in later life.

Want Name "Suffragrette" Dropped.

Certain persons think it is time to stop trying to be funny with the term "suffragette." A London paper says: The time has come to abandon it, as the suffragist movement has taken a serious place in politics. It is used as a term of reproach and does not enrich the language. Women do not want the vote to maintain a distinction, but to obliterate it. They want to be suffragists and citizens just as men are. Therefore we have no place for such a mongrel word as "suffragette" in our political vocabulary.

Making Jam.

The primitive method of stirring jam for hours while preserving it has given place to a more simple method, which is not only much less difficult, but the fruit has a more natural flavor. Mash the fruit thoroughly with a wire potato masher, add the same quantity of sugar, pint for pint, and place in a granite kettle on the stove to boil. As soon as it has thoroughly boiled it can be removed and the jars immediately filled and sealed.

New Cause For Alarm.

The Washington hostesses are afraid that a change in the administration, whether a Democrat or Republican is elected, may take from office a number of nice young men who have helped out so much in social affairs during the last eight years. It so often happens that the young men appointed to office are not altogether presentable as guests at balls and dinners.

Cathedral Curtains.

There are some lovely imported madras curtains brought out by the decorators that give the exact effect of cathedral glass.

They are hung without fullness, straight against the window pane inside the window woodwork. They may be finished with merely a hem or a small ball fringe. They really give a dim religious light.

The True Home.

Homes are not built of bricks and mortar. It is the people, not the places, that make the homes. The face of a smiling woman, the patter of tiny feet and the music of children's voices—aye, even the barking of a dog and the human look of joy at our coming—bring us the nameless charm that we call "home."—London Throne.

Mrs. Annie Hockfelder, who recently received her degree of LL. B. from the New York university, will, it is said, put out her sign stating that she will receive only woman clients. She is the pioneer in New York in the lawyer for women field.

Of course he was merely illustrating the value of some scientific experiment, but Robinson thinks and has made the others think that the chest contains something to make diamonds with. I am sure they intend to get hold of it. The affair is coming to a head."

Captain Selover listened almost indifferently.

"I came back from the islands last year," he piped, "with $300,000 worth of pearls. There was sixteen in the crew, and every man of them was blood hungry for them pearls. They had three or four shindies and killed one man over the proper way to divide the loot after they had got it. They didn't get it. Why?" He drew his powerful figure to its height and spread his thick arms out in the luxury of stretching. "Why?" he repeated, exhaling abruptly. "Because their captain was Ezra Selover. Well, Mr. Eagen," he went on crisply, "Captain Ezra Selover is their captain, and they know it. They'll talk and palaver and git into dark corners and sharpen their knives and perhaps fight it out as to which one's going to work the monkey doodle business in the doctor's chest and which one's going to tie up the sacks of them diamonds, but they won't git any farther as long as Captain Ezra is on deck."

"Yes," I objected, "but they mean business. Last night in the squall one of them tried to throw me overboard."

Captain Selover grinned.

"What did you do?" he asked.

"Hazed him to his quarters with a belaying pin."

"Well, that's all settled then, isn't it? What more do you want?"

I stood undecided.

"I can take care of myself," he went on. "You ought to take care of yourself. Then there's nothing more to do."

He mused a moment.

"You have a gun, of course?" he inquired. "I forgot to ask."

"No," said I.

He whistled.

"Well, no wonder you feel sort of lost and hopeless. Here, take this; it'll make a man of you."

He gave me a Colt's 45, the barrel of which had been filed down to about two inches of length. It was a most extraordinary weapon, but effective at short range.

"Here's a few loose cartridges," said he. "Now, go easy. This is no warship, and we ain't got men to experiment on. Lick 'em with your fists or a pin if you can, and if you do shoot just wing 'em a little. They're awful good lads, but a little restless."

I took the gun and felt better. With it I could easily handle the members of my own watch, and I did not doubt that with the assistance of Percy Darrow even a surprise would hardly overwhelm us. I did not count on Dr. Schermerhorn. He was quite capable of losing himself in a problem of trajectory after the first shot.

CHAPTER XIII.

I CAME on deck one morning at about 4 bells to find the entire ship's company afoot. Even the doctor was there. Everybody was gazing eagerly at a narrow, mountainous island lying slate colored across the early morning.

We were as yet some twenty miles distant from it and could make out nothing but its general outline. The latter was sharply defined, rising and falling to a highest point one side of the middle. Over the island and raggedly clasping its sides hung a cloud, the only one visible in the sky.

I joined the afterguard.

"You see?" the doctor was exclaiming. "It iss as I haf said. The island iss there. Everything iss as it should be!" He was quite excited.

Percy Darrow, too, was shaken out of his ordinary calm.

"The volcano is active," was his only comment, but it explained the ragged cloud.

"You say there's a harbor?" inquired Captain Selover.

"It should be on the west end," said Dr. Schermerhorn.

Captain Selover drew me one side. He, too, was a little aroused.

"Now, wouldn't that get you?" he squeaked. "Doctor runs up against a Norwegian bum who tells him about a volcanic island and gives its bearings. The island ain't on the map at all. Doctor believes it and makes me lay my course for those bearings. And here's the island! So the bum's story was true. I'd like to know what the rest of it was." His eyes were shining.

"Do we anchor or stand off and on?" I asked.

Captain Selover turned to grip me by the shoulder.

"I have orders from Darrow to get to a good berth, to land, to build shore quarters and to snug down for a stay of a year at least."

We stared at each other.

"Joyous prospect," I muttered. "Hope there's something to do there."

The morning wore, and we rapidly approached the island. It proved to be utterly precipitous. The high rounded hills sloped easily to within a hundred feet or so of the water and then fell away abruptly. Where the earth ended was a fantastic filigree border, like the fancy paper with which our mothers used to line the pantry shelves. Below the white surges flung themselves against the cliffs with a wild abandon. Thousands of sea birds wheeled in the eddies of the wind, thousands of ravens perched on the slopes. With our glasses we could make out the heads of seals fishing outside the surf and a ragged belt of kelp.

When within a mile we put the helm up and ran for the west end. A bold point we avoided far out lest there should be outlying ledges. Then we came in sight of a broad beach and pounding surf.

I was ordered to take a surf boat and investigate for a landing and an anchorage. The swell was running high. We rowed back and forth, puzzled as to how to get ashore with all the freight it would be necessary to land. The ship would lie well enough, for the only open exposure was broken by a long reef over which we could make out the seas tumbling. But inshore the great waves rolled smoothly, swiftly, then suddenly fell forward as over a ledge and spread with a roar across the yellow sands. The fresh winds blew the spume back to us. We conversed in shouts.

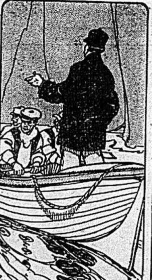
"We can surf the boat," yelled Thrackles, "but we can't land a load."

That was my opinion. We rowed slowly along, parallel to the shore and just outside the line of breakers.

I don't know exactly how to tell you the manner in which we became aware of the cove. It was as nearly the instantaneous as can be imagined. One minute I looked ahead on a cliff as unbroken as the side of a cabin; the very next I peered down the length of a cove fifty fathoms long by about ten wide, at the end of which was a gravel beach. I cried out sharply to the men. They were quite as much astonished as I. We backed water, watching closely. At a given point the cove and all trace of its entrance disappeared. We could only just make out the line where the headlands dissolved into the background of the cliffs and that merely because we knew of its existence. The blending was perfect.

We rowed in. The water was still. A faint ebb and flow whispered against the tiny gravel beach at the end. I noted a practicable way from it to the top of the cliff and from the cliff down again to the sand beach. Everything was perfect. The water was a beautiful light green, like semiopaque glass, and from the indistinctness of its depths waved and beckoned, rose and disappeared with indescribable grace and deliberation long feathery sea growths. In a moment the bottom abruptly shallowed. The motion of the boat toward the beach permitted us to catch a hasty glimpse of little fish darting, of big fish turning, of yellow sand and some vivid color. Then came the grate of gravel and the scraping of the boat's bottom on the beach.

We jumped ashore eagerly. I left the men very reluctant and ascended a natural trail to a high sloping down over which blew the great trades. Grass sprung knee high. A low hill rose at the back. From below the fall of the cliff came the pounding of surf.



We rowed in. The water was still.

I walked to the edge. Various ledges sloping toward me ran down to the sea. Against one of them was a wreck not so very old, head on, her afterworks gone. I recognized the name Golden Horn and was vastly astonished to find her here against this unknown island. Far up the coast I could see, with the surges dashing up like the explosion of shells and the cliffs and the rampart of hills grown with grass and cactus. A bold promontory terminated the coast view to the north, and behind it I could glimpse a more fertile and wooded country. The sky was partly overcast by the volcanic murk. It fled before the trades, and the red sun alternately blazed and clouded through it.

As there was nothing more to be seen here I turned above the hollow of our cove, skirted the base of the hill and so down to the beach.

It occupied a wide semicircle where the hills drew back. The flat was dry and grown with thick, coarse grass. A stream emerged from a sort of canyon on its landward side. I tasted it, found it sulphurous and a trifle worse than lukewarm. A little nearer the cliff, however, was a clear, cold spring from the rock, and of this I had a satisfying drink. When I arose from my knees I made out an animal on the hill crest looking at me, but before I could distinguish its characteristics it had disappeared.

I returned along the tide sands. The surf dashed and roared, lifting seaweeds of a blood red, so that in places the water looked pink. Seals innumerable watched me from just outside the breakers. As the waves lifted to a semitransparence I could make out others playing, darting back and forth; up and down like disturbed tadpoles, clinging to the wave until the very instant of its fall, then disappearing as though blotted out. The salt smell of seaweed was in my nostrils. I found the place pleasant.

With these few and scattered impressions we returned to the ship. It had been warped to a secure anchorage and snugged down. Dr. Schermerhorn and Darrow were on deck waiting to go ashore.

I made my report. The two passengers disappeared. They carried lunch and would not be back until nightfall. We had orders to pitch a large tent at a suitable spot and to lighten ship of the doctor's personal and scientific effects. By the time this was accomplished the two had returned.

"It's all right," Darrow volunteered to Captain Selover as he came over the side. "We've found what we want."

Their clothes were picked by brush and their boots muddy. Next morning Captain Selover detailed me to especial work.

"You'll take two of the men and go ashore under Darrow's orders," said he.

Darrow told us to take clothes for a week, an ax apiece and a block and tackle. We made up our ditty bags, stepped into one of the surf boats and were rowed ashore. There Darrow at once took the lead.

Our way proceeded across the grass flat, through the opening of the narrow canyon and so on back into the interior by way of the bed through which flowed the sulphur stream. The country was badly eroded. Most of the time we marched between perpendicular banks about forty feet high. These were occasionally broken by smaller tributary arroyos of the same sort. It would have been impossible to reach the level of the upper country. The bed of the main arroyo was flat and grown with grasses and herbage of an extraordinary vividness, due, I supposed, to the sulphur water. The stream itself meandered aimlessly through the broader bed. It steadily grew warmer and the sulphur smell more noticeable. Above us we could see the sky and the sharp clay edge of the arroyo. I noticed the tracks of Darrow and Dr. Schermerhorn made the day before.

After a mile of this the bottom ran up nearly to the level of the sides, and we stepped out on the floor of a little valley almost surrounded by more hills.

It was an extraordinary place, and, since much happened there, I must give you an idea of it.

It was round and nearly encircled by naked painted hills. From its floor came steam and a roaring sound. The steam blew here and there among the pines on the floor; rose to eddy about the naked painted hills. At one end we saw intermittently a broad ascending canyon, deep red and blue black, ending in the cone of a smoking volcano. The other seemed quite closed by the sheer hills. In fact, the only exit was the route by which we had come.

For the hills were utterly precipitous. I suppose a man might have made his way up to the various knobs, ledges and inequalities, but it would have required long study and a careful head. I myself later worked my way a short distance merely to examine the texture of their marvelous color.

This was at once varied and of great body, not at all like the smooth, glossed color of most rock, but soft and rich. You've seen painters' palettes. It was just like that, pasty and fat. There were reds of all shades, from a veritable scarlet to a red umber; greens, from sea green to emerald; several kinds of blue and an indeterminate purple mauve. The whole effect was splendid and barbaric.

We stopped and gasped as it hit our eyes. Darrow alone was unmoved. He led the way forward and in an instant had disappeared behind the veil of steam. Thrackles and Perdosa hung back murmuring, but at a sharp word from me gathered their courage in their two hands and proceeded.

We found that the first veil of steam and a fearful stench of gases proceeded from a miniature crater whose edge was heavily incrusted with a white salt. Beyond, close under the rise of the hill, was another. Between the two Percy Darrow had stopped and was waiting.

He eyed us with a half lazy, half quizzical glance as we approached.

"Think the place is going to blow up?" he inquired with a tinge of irony. "Well, it isn't." He turned to me. "Here's where we shall stay for awhile. You and the men are to cut a number of these pine trees for a house. Better pick out the little ones, about three or four inches through. They're easier to handle. I'll be back by noon."

We set to work then in the roaring, steaming valley with the vapor swirling about us, sometimes concealing us, sometimes half revealing us gigantic, again in the utterness of exposure showing us dwindled pygmies against the magnitudes about us. The labor was not difficult. By the time Darrow returned we had a pile of the saplings ready for his next direction.

He was accompanied by the nigger, very much terrified, very much burdened with food and cooking utensils. The assistant was lazily relating tales of voodoos, a glimmer of mischief in his eyes.

CHAPTER XIV.

I LIVED in the place for three weeks. We were afoot shortly after daybreak, under way by sunup and at work before the heats began. Three of us worked on the buildings, and the rest formed a pack train carrying all sorts of things from the shore to the valley. The men grumbled fiercely at this, but Captain Selover drove them with slight regard for their opinions or feelings.

"You're getting double pay," was his only word. "Earn it!"

They certainly earned it during those three weeks. The things they brought up were astounding. Besides a lot of scientific apparatus and chests of chemical supplies, everything that could possibly be required had been provided by that omniscient young man. After we had built a long, low structure, windows were forthcoming, shelves, tables, sinks, faucets, forges, burners, all cut out, fitted and ready to put together, each with its proper screws, nails, clamps or pipes ready to our hands. When we had finished we had constructed as complete a laboratory on a small scale as you could find on a college campus, even to the stone pillar down to bed rock for delicate microscopic experiments and hot and cold water led from the springs. And we were utterly unskilled. It was all Percy Darrow.

I was toward the last engaged in screwing on a fixture for the generation of acetelyne gas.

"Darrow," said I, "there's one thing you've overlooked. You forgot to bring a cupola and a gilt weathercock for this concern."

After the laboratory was completed we put up sleeping quarters for the two men, with wide porches well screened, and a square, heavy storeroom. By the end of the third week we had quite finished.

Dr. Schermerhorn had turned with enthusiasm to the unpacking of his chemical apparatus. Almost immediately at the close of the freight carrying he had appeared, lugging his precious chest, this time suffering the assistance of Darrow, and had camped on the spot. We could not induce him to leave, so we put up a tent for him. Darrow remained with him by way of safety against the men, whose measure, I believe, he had taken. Now that all the work was finished, the doctor put in a sudden appearance.

"Percy," said he, "now we will have the defense built."

He dragged us with him to the narrow part of the arroyo just before it rose to the level of the valley.

"Here we will build the stockade defense," he announced.

Darrow and I stared at each other blankly.

"What for, sir?" inquired the assistant.

"I haf come to be undisturbed," announced the doctor, with owl-like, Teutonic gravity, "and I will not be disturbed."

Beautiful New Costumes
At Very Moderate Prices.

The exquisite new Autumn costumes which we are showing have won the admiration of every woman who has visited our Ready-to-Wear Garment section.

The collection is the most complete, representative and authoritative offered for your selection. Styles are the newest of the new fabrics and colors the most fashionable—tailoring and finish the best.

There's a Costume Here For All Figures --A Style for Every Individual Taste.

Of course the Directoire mode is prominent the coat which gives to the figure long, straight lines and shows a slight Empire back, broad reveres and other characteristics of the Directoire period.

For conservative tastes there are plenty of simple, mannish styles and "in-between" models which are neither plain nor elaborate.

Among the fabrics are broadcloths in plain colors and striped effects, hard finished Worsted and serges, chevron striped serges, etc. Colors include greens, browns, blues, London smoke, wisteria, mulberry and black and two tone and shaded stripes.

Prices for all Purses--and at every price a matchless value in style and serviceable quality.

We show Ladies Costumes, beautifully tailored and handsomely trimmed at Correct Styles In Ladies' Coats.

In variety, beauty of styles and greatness of values our display of Women's Fall and Winter Coats is easily the superior of any to be found in Belleville.

Coats in long, gracefully falling effects are the most favored. These we are showing in a wide range of materials, in black, plain colors and fancy mixtures.

Prices Range From $7.50 to $25.00

In Ladies' Coats at $12.50 and $15.00, the values are exceptionally fine. In fact, we are certain you will find nothing to approach our styles at these low prices. Brief hints of the styles and prices follow:

Ladies' Rain Coats

These are shown in fitted and loose backs in cravenette, covert cloths and rubberized silks, all very stylish garments from $5.00 to $23.50 each.

Children's Coats

For children from 2 to 10 years of age we show a variety of styles in Bear Skin, colored plush and colored cloths to sell from $2 to $10.

Misses' Coats

For girls from 10 to 18 years of age we show many very smart styles in navy, brown, green and cardinal plain cloths also some very pretty tweed effects to sell from $5.00 to $13.50.

Ladies' Fur-lined Coats

Every ladies' fur-lined garment is sold with Sinclair's absolute guarantee behind it. You will appreciate this fact for it means something - our prices are $50.00, $65.00. $67,50. $72.50, $75, $82.50 and $90.00.

$1.00 Taffeta Silks for 50c

This week we place on sale about 700 yards of Black and Colored Taffeta Dress Silks in solid colors and fancy patterns, silks that sell regularly at 75c, 90c and $1.00 per yard, beautiful silks for ladies' dresses, waists, etc., and we clear these for only

50c per yard

Quantity, Quality, Variety, Prices

These are the four outstanding attractions of our Dress Goods Department.

We claim all these and a visit to this department will verify our claims, in fact we know that no other store pretends to show a dress goods department equal to ours, the reason for this being found in the fact that we do the dress goods trade. See our goods—get samples and compare prices.

We Are Always Pleased to Show Goods.

South African Veterans And Their Claims.

Ottawa, Oct. 11. — Representatives of all South Africa Veterans' Associations throughout Canada will meet in Ottawa to-morrow for the purpose of forming a Dominion association and to discuss matters of general interest to the volunteers who served in the Boer war. The delegates who have been invited to the capital by the provisional committee in charge represent over seven thousand of the 8,700 men who went with the various Canadian contingents to South Africa. One of the chief matters to be discussed is the volunteer bounty act, passed last session, and some changes may be asked for in the recent ruling of the Interior Department, making it obligatory for a volunteer or substitute to enter upon his land within six months after entry at the land office instead of allowing until June, 1911, to begin settlement duties, as provided according to the strict letter of the act.

A Brief Introduction.

"Long introductions when a man has a speech to make are a bore," says former Senator John C. Spooner. "I have had all kinds, but the most satisfactory one in my career was that of a German mayor of a small town in my state, Wisconsin.

"I was to make a political address, and the opera house was crowded. When it came time to begin, the mayor got up.

"'Mine friends,' he said, 'I haf asked been to introduce Senator Spooner, who is to make a speech, yes. Vell, I haf dit so, und he vil now do so.'"—Literary Digest.

Just Curious.

Tourist — What's that crowd down at the courthouse?

Native—Oh, they're tryin' the case o' Sam Johnson, suh.

Tourist—Sam Johnson! Why, that was the man that was lynched yesterday, wasn't it?

Native—Ya-as, suh. But today some o' the boys got to feelin' cur'ous to know whethah he was innocent or guilty, suh. — Catholic Standard and Times.

The Editor Explains.

A young lady was recently visiting an editorial office and being shown around by the editor. Approaching a case of drawers upon one of which was the label "MSS.," she said, "Now, how would you pronounce that?"

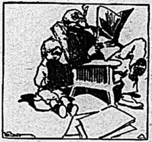
"Oh," said the editor, "sometimes we pronounce it muss and sometimes mess."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Had It Reasoned Out.

"You said you thought there was no malaria around here," said the indignant stranger.

"I did think so," answered Farmer Corntossel. "After all the summer boarders took away I didn't see how there could be any left."—Washington Star.

A Modern Idea.



"What's contributory negligence?"
"Failure to dodge an automobile, my son."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Minister's Boy's Work.

Mother — What! Fighting again? Such a black eye! If you'd only follow the lead of the minister's little boy—

Tommy—Aw, I did try ter foller his lead, but he led again wid his left, an' dat's where he biffed me.—Philadelphia Press.

To Digest the Food.

Bile in the intestines is as important to digestion as are the gastric juices in the stomach and bile is only supplied when the liver is in active condition.

The serious and chronic forms of indigestion are cured by Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills because of their influence on the liver, causing a good flow of bile to aid digestion and keep the bowels regular, thereby preventing fermentation of the food, the formation of gas and all the disagreeable symptoms of indigestion.

Long standing cases of chronic indigestion yield to Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills after all else has failed.

Here's the proof.

"I was for many years troubled with indigestion and headache and derived no benefit from the many remedies I used. A friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and after taking four boxes the result is that I am once more in the full enjoyment of the blessings of good health."—Mr. Duncan McPherson, Content, Alta.

ICELAND AN OLD REPUBLIC.

Plucky Fight of a Wonderful People to Maintain Independence.

Iceland, which soon is to become an independent state in the united Danish empire, furnishes a remarkable example of the effect that climate and conditions have upon mankind. During a thousand years Iceland, a cold, uninviting and all but sterile island in the north Atlantic ocean, has been an outpost of civilization, and during much of that time its inhabitants have led the rest of mankind in the march of progress toward an ideal form of government. It was the haven to which the oppressed in Norway fled ten centuries ago. Its barren shores offered a livelihood only to those with energy and thrift who could wrest it from the sea or the fringe of unproductive acres between the coast and the snow capped mountains of the interior. The mere struggle for existence and the necessity for thrift developed in the people traits that made them models the rest of mankind would have done well to copy during the middle ages.

The people of Iceland organized a republic nearly 1,000 years ago. They adopted a constitution and were governed by chosen representatives when most of the world was being overrun by the armies of tyrants. They had trial by jury nearly 300 years before the Magna Charta was granted to the people of England. They embraced Christianity more than 900 years ago and long before the European forefathers of the most of us had ceased to pay homage to pagan gods. With the dawn of Christianity they took up the art of writing and developed a wonderfully rich literature of eddas and sagas, the undying glory of a remarkable people. They cherished personal liberty and their freedom as a people. Their laws relating to the duties and privileges of citizens, the care of the poor and other problems of self government were centuries in advance of the times, and some of them have not been improved upon since.

The little republic was engulfed in the wars that involved the Northmen and after 300 years of success became a dependency of Norway and later of Denmark. The people, however, never lost those sterling qualities that had prompted their ancestors to establish a republic on the desolate island. During all the succeeding centuries, when life was an unceasing struggle, the Icelanders never were quite subdued in spirit. Denmark granted to the people of the island home rule, and now it is practically agreed to have Iceland become an independent state of the kingdom of Denmark and Iceland, the two countries to have one king and one set of diplomatic representatives.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

New Slaughter Process.

In the slaughter house at Dunfermline, Scotland, a new instrument for killing has been introduced. weapon is about a foot in length. barrel is rifled and the muzzle sha like the mouth of a bell and angled order to adapt itself to the slope o bullock's head. By unscrewing opposite end from the muzzle the tridge may be inserted. When bullock has been firmly drawn up operator places the bell end well on the forehead and with a sharp of a mallet all is over, the beast erally falling down without a str gle. If the bullet has been prope placed its path should be along spinal cord, completely severing If the instrument has not been placed death is a little longer in suing, but in any case there is no p to the animal.

Recording Millionths of a Second

According to one of the governm scientists, in experiments with power explosives used in guns a c noscope has been employed which istered the velocity of the projectil sixteen successive points before it the bore. It was possible with this paratus to register time to the lionth of a second.

In former experiments, where velocity did not exceed 1,500 or 1, feet a second, the projectile recor its time by knocking down a series steel triggers projecting into the b But with velocities of 2,500 feet more to the second the trigger inst of dropping frequently plowed a gro in the projectile, and another de was necessary.

Political Pointers.

Over in Prince Edward, politics are humming. H. O. McMullen, the independent Liberal candidate, is making thing very sad for Dr. Currie, the Liberal nominee. Mr. McMullen insists that he will go to the polls, and has been "butting in" to many of the Currie meetings. Meanwhile, a few Liberals in Prince Edward would not be sorry if Mr. McMullen started for Belleville and fell off the bay bridge.

J. F. McGregor, Conservative, of Alexandria is putting up a good fight in the old riding of Glengarry. His canvass is meeting with particular success and his many friends in the south part of the riding, where he formerly resided, are rallying to his support. The only thing needed to make Mr. McGregor's election sure is that a certain swelled-up Grit of this city should go and talk for the Liberal candidate.

Mr. Graham, minister of railways, has discovered that the Conservatives are having printed at Toronto a pamphlet making nefarious charges against the Laurier Government in connection with the National Transcontinental Railway work, says the Montreal Gazette. If Mr. Graham is so good at finding out about the printing of things, he might, if he gave his mind to the task, find out who printed the fraudulent ballots that so much helped the Laurier Government in the notorious Brockville bye-election.

The Laurier tower FELL.
The Quebec bridge FELL.
The Laurier Government is FALLING.

The Whitney Government attained great popularity in Ontario by its electric power policy; the Laurier Government is attaining equally great unpopularity in Ontario and all over Canada by its hundred scandal power policy.

Tooronto Grits are said to be sorry that they did not get Sir Wilfrid Laurier to talk into a gramaphone so that he might be heard in Toronto.

Speaking of the general result in Ontario, Col. Sam. Hughes says it is not unlikely that the Conservatives will carry 60 seats in Ontario. He is hopeful that Quebec will show a marked Conservative gain, and that Mr. Borden will meet the new Parliament with a safe majority.

Another meeting of the various Ward Committees will be held this evening, in Mr. Porter's committee rooms, Robertson Block. Brief addresses will be given by some of the prominent workers of the Conservative cause.

Mr. Porter's first committee meeting at Trenton on Saturday night was a great success, the attendance being large and the enthusiasm shown very gratifying to the popular candidate. The good old town of Trenton is right in line with Conservative principles.

Sir James Whitney was the centre of attraction at the Conservative meeting of Richmond, Que., on Saturday night. Sir James spoke at length, dealing with the corruption of the Government at Ottawa, and saying that the people could put a stop to it if they chose to do so. He cited at considerable length the story of his struggles to get into power in Ontario, which had been blocked by the unscrupulous methods of Ross and his friends. In scathing terms Sir James denounced Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Fielding for extravagance. In Opposition in 1895 the Liberals had said $38,000,000 a year was too much to spend, and now they spent $174,000,000 a year.

The Tweed Fair

The annual fair of the Tweed Agricultural society, was a record-breaker both as to attendance and quality and quantity of exhibits, all departments being exceptionally well filled and competition keen.

Government experts judged the live stock and poultry and found their duties arduous. It is estimated that five thousand people were on the grounds during the afternoon, and mostly all remained until the end of the speeding contests. From the rapid strides this Fair is making, enlarged buildings and accommodations for horses and cattle will be required before another year.

Old Lake Captain Has Been Drowned.

Kingston, Oct. 12 — (Special) — The body of Capt. J. H. Scott, aged about 70 years, one of the oldest lake captains, was found floating near Swift's Wharf this morning.

He was leaving for Ottawa, and, it is supposed, lost his footing and fell into the water.

Capt. Scott was for many years owner and captain of the steamer Persia.

One son survives.

Thanksgiving Day At Holloway St.

Thanksgiving services were held in Holloway street church yesterday, and were largely attended. The preacher of the day was the Rev. G. W. Henderson, of Peterboro, who gave two inspiring and appropriate addresses. The church was decorated tastefully for the occasion. Special music was furnished by the choir, under the direction of Prof. and Mrs. Denmark which was much appreciated. In the evening an anthem entitled, "O Give Thanks," was rendered, a solo in which was taken by Miss M. Lawrence, and a duet was sung by Misses M. Lawrence and McMurray. The offerings for the day amounted to $175.

Inspector Seizes Another Seine.

Capt. Hunter, fishery inspector, assisted by Fishery Inspector Boulter, of Prince Edward, this morning captured a practically new seine, valued at about $100, in the vicinity of Point Ann. It is alleged that the seine has already been pulled five times this fall, in direct violation of provincial laws, which forbid such net fishing in the Bay of Quinte.

Mrs. Alford Buried.

On Saturday afternoon, the remains of the late Mrs. Walter Alford were laid away in the Belleville cemetery. At the family residence, corner of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle street, services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Bishop, of Bridge street church. Although a request was made to omit flowers a number of beautiful floral designs were sent by friends. The bearers were sons and friends of the deceased.

APPLES, ORANGES FIGS AND PRUNES

The God-given Cure for All Diseases of Bowels, Liver, Kidneys and Skin.

Few people seem to realize how important—how absolutely necessary—it is to keep the Bowels, Kidneys and Skin in proper working order.

They wonder why they have Sallow Complexions — Indigestion — Headaches—Rheumatism — while all the time their systems are clogged and poisoned with waste tissue and indigestible food which these organs should have removed.

What they need are Fruit Juices—nature's provision for keeping the eliminating machinery of the body working right. "Fruit-a-tives" are the concentrated juices of fresh, ripe fruits, combined in such a way that their medicinal action is greatly intensified. They stimulate and regulate the action of Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin, thus clearing the system of the accumulated waste and poison, purifying the blood, and banishing those distressing troubles that make life miserable.

No other remedy has ever been discovered that does this so effectively as "Fruit-a-tives." 50c. a box — 6 boxes for $2.50. Trial size 25c. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SLAIN BY SON.

Montreal Italian Kills His Father and Host In Drunken Brawl.

Montreal, Oct. 12.—Two Italians were murdered last night at 81 St. Hypolite street. One of the dead men was shot by his son. All had been enjoying themselves, and intoxicating drink had been used freely.

Once or twice Micheli Calouri, Jr., a youth, had been restrained from quarrelling, but he finally broke loose. His first victim was his father, who tried to pacify him. The old man, whose name is Micheli Calouri, after being shot, walked out into the yard, where he died. The crazy youth then shot Francisco Martelli, his host, who had returned with money from the lumber camp. The murderer was arrested. He is thought to have had some kind of grudge that urged him, while drunk, to do the foul deed. A fourth man, who is supposed to have had something to do with the trouble, escaped.

An expert for the Metropolitan Street Railway Co. of New York, now in the hands of the receiver, figures that it costs the company 4.26 cents for every car ride, which costs a passenger 5 cents.

Capt. Richmond Hobson will sue Representative J. H. Keliher for slander for having said: "Mr. Hobson tells the people that he comes here entirely because of his stand on naval issues. When he says that he tells an untruth, for he comes here for his regular fee of $150 a night, his railroad bill, an oyster stew, and an hour's talk with Martin Lomasney."

WHAT McINTOSH BROS SAY.

An Eminent New York Chemist says that disease is carried on soiled bills, and that nearly all money is Germ-Laden. One of the best things to do with money, clean or soiled, is to bring it to this store and get nice new clean merchandise for it. Our clerks have all been made germ-proof and you will run no risk of spreading disease by handing them your money.

SITUATION IS CRITICAL

Affairs in the Balkans Are as Complicated as Ever.

Sultan of Turkey May Abdicate—Meeting of Sir Edward Grey and M. Iswolsky of Russia Failed to Secure Results—King Edward May Have Succeeded Better—War Excitement Still Strong in Servia.

London, Oct. 12.—The beginning of another week finds the situation in the Balkans and among the great powers that have interests as complicated as at any time since the declaration of Bulgaria's independence and the annexation of two provinces by Austro-Hungary.

Special despatches received from Constantinople say it is rumored that the Sultan, under pressure from the committee of union and progress, will abdicate in favor of his brother, Mohammed Reshad Effendi.

Servia is in a warlike mood and has stepped into the breach to contest Austria's right to Bosnia and Herzegovina, and in this Servia is being backed strongly by Montenegro, whose reigning prince declares that he would not shrink from any sacrifice in defence of the Servian nationality.

In Belgrade popular excitement is at a fever heat, which seems to be shared by the crown prince, who, in an address before thousands of patriots, declared on Saturday that he hoped within a few days they would be able to offer their lives for the King and the fatherland.

Enthusiasm marked the meeting of the Servian National Assembly, which on Saturday elected as its president a man well known to be in favor of a war with Austria-Hungary. The sitting of the Assembly was held in secret and continued for many hours, the question of opposing Austria being angrily discussed. King Peter, however, has notified the British Government and other friendly powers that he is using every effort to keep the country out of war. Nevertheless there has been a call to arms in Servia, although the official explanation of this is that forces are needed in the interior to preserve order.

Austria-Hungary has served notice upon Servia that she is prepared for all eventualities and will tolerate no further provocation.

Great Britain, while striving to maintain the integrity of the Berlin treaty and conserve the interests of Turkey in the Balkans, is endeavoring to find a way out of the difficulty short of a conference with the powers, less the scope of such conference might not be confined to the questions now at issue.

As a consequence, the meeting of the British Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, and the Russian Foreign Minister, M. Iswolsky, was devoid of result Saturday. These two diplomats dined with King Edward on Sunday, when the King, who is recognized as "the greatest diplomat in all Europe," may have had a directing influence.

To-day the Ministers will meet again, and probably a definite program of action will be announced.

Russian diplomacy has been directed towards persuading Austria to be a party to an international conference for a review of the whole situation, but Austria refuses to give way on the point of her responsibility to the signatories of the Berlin treaty, and maintains her right to have the annexation of Bosnia accepted as an accomplished fact.

Despatches from Rome state that Italy adheres to the principle of an international congress, but at the same time the Italian fleet, which has just completed its fall manoeuvres, has received orders to remain concentrated at Spezia.

Newspapers Too Bulky.

New York, Oct. 12.—That the increasing cost of pulp will eventually force publishers over the world to reduce the size of their newspapers or to charge more for them is the opinion of Lord Northcliffe, head of the Harmsworth Corporation, which owns and controls The London Daily Mail and 15 other English publications, who arrived here on the Lusitania with his mother, Mrs. Harmsworth, Lady Northcliffe, and Mrs. Algernon Douglas-Pennant, for two months' holidays in America.

He will visit Toronto.

Truant Is Married.

Windsor, Oct. 12.—Michigan authorities are trying to figure out whether they can compel a married "woman" who is 14 years of age to attend school or not.

For several days a truant officer in Bay City has been searching for Bertha Groves, who was reported absent from her school class by the teacher. Finally he located the girl, but completely lost his nerve when she told him that she had married John Black, 18 years of age, in Windsor.

Forgot Boy In Cupboard.

Peabody, Mass., Oct. 12.—In the excitement over being bridesmaid for her best friend, Miss Catherine Reynolds, a teacher of this town, forgot all about Manuel Silva, one of her pupils, whom she had locked in the school room closet Wednesday morning, until late Thursday night after the wedding. The boy was in a serious condition from his confinement.

Signs of Prosperity.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Rapidly increasing indications that the business conditions are fast turning to their normal state and that the railroads are experiencing a steady growth in their traffic, are seen in the fortnightly report of car surpluses and shortages, issued by the car efficiency committee of the American Railway Association.

Smallpox at Kingston.

Kingston, Oct. 12.—Another smallpox case is reported, and the Board of Health decided to erect an isolation hospital and rush the work. Several cases have been treated during the summer in shacks.

BURGLAR ESCAPES FROM JAIL.

Robber With Launch Full of Valuables Soon Gets Away.

Whitby, Ont., Oct. 12.—Frank Charles, apparently a wholesale burglar and thief, was arrested here yesterday, and escaped a few hours later.

He was caught on board a gasoline launch stolen from R. W. Clements of Toronto. With the launch was a canoe. Both were laden with the spoils of many thefts. Gold and silver watches, furs, fine rugs, overcoats and other wearing apparel, gramophone, articles from the R.C.Y.C. and boat Vida, picture postcards addressed to Mrs. R. T. Brown, Balmy Beach, and Mrs. F. J. Smith, and a miscellaneous collection of small and less valuable articles.

If Charles was good at getting into houses and other buildings he knows how to get out also, for he made his escape from the town lock-up soon after his incarceration therein.

He escaped by tearing up the floor of the corridor and getting into the adjoining room and town firehall.

He is a short, powerful fellow about 26 years of age, red moustache, dressed in grey suit, grey cap, and wearing rubber boots. As this appeared to be an important capture the police everywhere will no doubt keep a sharp lookout for the man with rubber boots.

Charles is probably one of the men responsible for a number of burglaries around Balmy Beach during the last fortnight.

Three-to-One on Taft.

New York, Oct. 12.—The Herald (Independent) thus sums up the political prospects in a despatch from Washington:

Persistent betting in favor of Taft of 3 to 1, 31-2 to 1 and even 4 to 1 would indicate that some persons with a great deal of money were fully convinced that the Republican Presidential candidate was going to be elected. The market has been held up just as stiffly as it was in 1904 and 1900.

Dog Leads Blinded Mistress.

Stamford, Conn., Oct. 21.—Shot in the eye by a careless small boy in Hillandale Park late Saturday afternoon, Miss Abbie S. Fessenden, a sister of the late Samuel Fessenden, was able to reach her home, half a mile away, through the intelligence of a pet dog which she had been leading at the end of a chain.

Farm Laborer's Suicide.

Welland, Oct. 12.—James Shambruck, a farm laborer of Stamford Township, committed suicide Wednesday by drinking carbolic acid.

The body was found on Saturday.

Arabian Nights.

The "Arabian Nights" is an extensive collection of tales forming part of the Arabic literature and the exact title of which is "The Book of the Thousand and One Nights."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women or received so many genuine testimonials as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every one you meet has either been benefited by it, or has friends who have.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., any woman any day may see the files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, and here are the letters in which they openly state over their own signatures that they were cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made from roots and herbs, without drugs, and is wholesome and harmless.

The reason why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the feminine organism, restoring it to a healthy normal condition.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

BORDEN ENTERS QUEBEC

He Penetrates Into Quebec Counties of Pontiac and Wright.

Conservative Leader Gets a Fine Reception and Reports Indicate Victories In Both Ridings—Half the Amount Plundered Would Establish Beginning of Rural Delivery—Protecting Men Worthy of Jail.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Penetrating the Quebec constituencies of Pontiac and Wright, R. L. Borden addressed two meetings yesterday at Shawville and Aylmer.

Shawville is in Pontiac, represented in the last Parliament by Gerold H. Brabazon, Conservative. Pontiac is one of the constituencies placed by the Liberal guessers in the doubtful column, but from reports received yesterday it is not thought that Mr. Brabazon will have any trouble holding it. The other constituency, Wright, was represented by Emmanuel Devlin, Liberal, in the last Parliament. It is counted a sure gain for the Conservatives on Oct. 26. The late member is having trouble receiving a respectful hearing at his own meetings.

Both meetings yesterday were even more warmly enthusiastic than those Mr. Borden has held in Ontario.

At Shawville he dealt principally with the administrative record of the Government. He also touched on the transportation question, which is a live issue in the Ottawa Valley.

Describing conditions he had witnessed in parts of the United States, where the comforts and conveniences of modern civilization have been brought to the doors of the farmers, Mr. Borden said he hoped to see such conditions prevail here, and it would be possible to make them prevail. Moreover, half the amount that had been plundered from the Dominion treasury would have been sufficient to make a good beginning of a system of rural mail delivery.

Mr. Borden, after reviewing some of the administrative deals of the Government and the failure of the Government to prosecute the plunderers of the public treasury, said Sir Wilfrid Laurier had protected men whom he knew to be worthy of the penitentiary.

Council Meeting Broke Up.

London, Oct. 13.—(C.A.P.)—The question of levying a three-penny rate for the Collmoney, Killala, Belmullet Railway, in connection with the suggested Blacksod Bay scheme, and the all-red route, broke up the Mayo County Council in great confusion.

VETS HAZE FRESHMEN.

Police Riot Squad Necessary to Quell Toronto Disturbance.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—There was trouble galore at the opening of the Veterinary College on Temperance street yesterday afternoon. It spread to more than the freshmen, who were being hazed, and passers-by were dragged into the building and generally maltreated.

Bernard Kilby, 384 Victoria street, was yanked inside and severely buffeted, losing a coatsleeve in the melee. Charles Pillar, 531 West Queen street, was also roughly used, as was another man of about 60 years of age. Several boys were similarly abused. Policeman Charles Bell was struck in the face by a stone thrown by a hoodlum on the outside.

Once, drawing his baton, he plunged into the crowd to rescue one imperilled civilian. A riot call brought a squad of police, and the students hiked to the assembly-room, where the formal opening proceedings were under way.

The methods of treatment were by no means catch-as-catch-can, even if the selection of victims was. The subject was hoisted in the sling used for the treatment of horses. He was raced around the horse-ring and also, after being laid over a saw-horse, was spanked, not as mother used to do it, but with pieces of harness and lengths of rubber hose.

But the life went out of the fun when ten policemen appeared upon the scene, and the hazers were even compelled to forego the treatment of a few of the late-coming freshies whom the police refused to allow to be offered as living sacrifices.

"ROBBER" IDENTIFIED.

Toronto River Pirate Who Got Away at Whitby Still at Large.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—"Frank Charles," arrested at Whitby Sunday as a lake-front pirate of no mean capabilities, and who straight-away broke jail by hammering the boards from the ceiling above with the bench in his cell in the town lock-up, has been fully identified by Provincial Constable Burns as Fred C. Wheeler. Wheeler's photograph was found more than a month ago among the effects at the Humber "River Pirates" camp, and it was instantly recognized yesterday by Whitby officers.

Wheeler, who is about 24 years of age, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, 170 pounds in weight and of fair complexion with a slight moustache and was last seen yesterday morning near Oshawa, when he was wearing a gray cap and [illegible] with dark trousers and long rubber boots. He had on a grey overcoat with a deep collar.

He is believed to be the man guilty of all the theft and house breakings laid at the door of the river pirates.

At Whitby he is said to have robbed a church Saturday, and to have held up a lad in the street there with a revolver, securing $6.

Wheeler, who comes from Ipswich, England, had written letters home, saying that he had become a millionaire and had a yacht of his own.

Locked up in the Whitby jail he forced the boards at the top of his cell with a bench and escaped by climbing over the rafters, getting out through another part of the town hall.

The police are searching for him in automobiles and with rigs, but have not yet located him.

Hundreds at Trial.

Calgary, Alta., Oct. 13.—The hearing of the McGillicuddy criminal libel charge came up yesterday morning, and was again adjourned until Friday. P. J. Nolan, for "Eye-Opener" Edwards, said he was ready to proceed, but counsel for the defendant asked for the adjournment, which Justices E. E. Taylor and Col. Walker granted.

Seven witnesses have been summoned, comprising the office staff of The News.

The court-room was packed, and hundreds were unable to get in.

Capt. Scott Drowns.

Kingston, Oct. 13.—Capt. J. H. Scott, formerly owner of the steamer Persia, was found drowned at seven o'clock yesterday morning near Swift's wharf. He had put his baggage aboard the steamer Rideau King the night before, intending to go to Ottawa.

Coroner Mundell stated that the captain had evidently taken a dizzy spell and tumbled into the slip.

He was about 70 years of age and was one of the best-known captains on the great lakes.

Killed by Spile-Driver.

Wiarton, Oct. 13.—Alex. Day of this town was killed here yesterday afternoon. He was working at a spile-driver when he stepped between the leader and the full weight of the hammer, 2,200 pounds, came down on his head, killing him instantly.

He was married about two months ago.

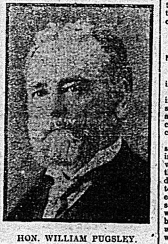
G. S. Mayes Accuses George McAvity, President of Liberal Association of Having Taken Rake-Off on Dredging Contract—Hyman Was Present at Signing of Contract, Declares Mayes—Pugsley Took $2,000.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 13.—Four thousand people heard Premiers Whitney and Hazen of Ontario and New Brunswick respectively, at the Queen's Rink, last evening.

Both made effective speeches.

The sensational feature was Premier Hazen's reading of a statutory declaration of G. S. Mayes of this city, who has just completed a dredging contract in St. John harbor. Mayes states that in June, 1905, he tendered for this work at 50 cents a yard, but did not get the contract. On a second call, Hon. William Pugsley, then Attorney-General, advised him to see George McAvity, president of the Liberal Association, and one of the leading port managers.

Mayes and McAvity met by appointment in Ottawa. Mayes stated that he proposed to tender again at 50 cents. McAvity said: "Why not make it 55 and give me the five cents per yard?" McAvity produced an agreement, already prepared to that effect, and though Mayes protested that McAvity should take some shares of the expense, the agreement was made. McAvity saw Hon. Mr. Hyman, who was then Minister of Works, and afterwards they saw him together and the contract was made.



HON. WILLIAM PUGSLEY.
He Is Charged With Taking a Bribe of $2,000.

Under this agreement Mayes states that he has paid McAvity $35,933.

The statement further recites that when payment to Mayes by the Government was delayed, he went to Pugsley, who had become Minister of Public Works, and that the Minister told him that he should see McAvity, so that things would run smoothly.

Further, Mayes states that after he got the contract Pugsley sent for him and asked him for $2,500 or $3,000, saying that he would be able to give him assistance at Ottawa. Mayes gave him $2,000.

The reading of this declaration caused a great sensation. Premier Hazen gave the dates of all these payments, and said Mayes has the check with McAvity's endorsation.

Mayes has issued writs against McAvity for the return of the money paid him and against Pugsley for $2,000.

Can Steal Your Own Goods.

Hamilton, Oct. 13.—Jeff Brown, one of the racetrack followers, sneaked a suit out of the shop where it had been cleaned without paying the charges. Police Magistrate Jelfs refused to issue a warrant for his arrest on the charge of theft, and a county constable secured a warrant from a justice of the peace. The arrest was made yesterday morning, and Brown was taken to the Police Court, where he was immediately discharged, the magistrate holding that a man could not steal his own clothes. The shopman, he said, had a right to retain the clothes until the charges were paid, but the fact that Brown had succeeded in getting the suit, broke the lien.

Silver Wire Saves Leg.

New York, Oct. 13.—After three delicate surgical operations, the first two of which failed to give satisfactory results, physicians in Harlem Hospital have succeeded in saving the right leg of Roswell Corcoran, 11 years old, by fastening broken bones together with a silver wire. This is the third successful operation of the kind performed in the institution within the last few months.

Thirty-One Speeches In a Day.

Lincoln, Oct. 13.—Mr. Bryan has returned home from his trip through Missouri and spent most of the day sleeping and resting.

"I made 31 speeches yesterday," he said, "and I felt just as fresh when I made the last one as when I made the first one."

His voice showed not the slightest trace of the tremendous strain upon it.

British House Opens.

London, Oct. 13.—The autumn sessions of the British Parliament was opened yesterday.

The entire ten weeks of the sitting will be taken up with consideration of Government measures, the most imporant of which is the Licensing Bill.

Some Strikers Barred.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Orders have been received from Montreal that some twelve of the C.P.R. strikers are not to be re-engaged. It is presumed because they were leaders in the strike.

A MYSTERIOUS FIRE.

New Brunswick Man Loses Home and Child Is Acting Queerly.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 13.—Beersville is the scene of a mysterious affair.

On Sunday afternoon last the dwelling house and barn of Adam Robertson were burned to the ground. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson had gone to church, leaving at home their three children, the eldest a girl aged 13.

Shortly after the parents were gone some neighbors noticed smoke issuing from the premises, and went to investigate. On arriving they found the building in flames and the children outside, the oldest girl in a hysterical condition. She was able to explain that a man had come in and set fire to the place. Shortly afterwards she disappeared and could not be found until Tuesday evening, when, after continuous search, she was found in the woods. When she saw the searchers she started to run, but was caught and taken home. The girl was in a terrible condition, both mentally and physically, after having been exposed to the cold and wet for two days and two nights without food and only thinly clad.

It was found on examination that nearly everything in the house had been saturated with kerosene. Mr. Robertson lost nearly all he possessed except the two horses he had with him.

Botha Loudest Cheered.

London, Oct. 13.—(C.A.P.)—The Durban union convention opened yesterday. The King sent his good wishes for success of the deliberations.

In the town's formal welcome, Botha was singled out for especially enthusiastic cheering. Replying to the mayor's speech, Merriman said the delegates had put behind them the petty jealousies and memories of a painful past.

Raising Pullman Rates.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—Pullman car rates on the G.T.R. are being revised.

The Toronto rate remains the same, but to intermediate points it is about 25 per cent. higher for day seats, sleepers remaining the same. State rooms will be higher to all points.

East of Montreal day rates are lower.

Suspect Poisoning.

Quebec, Oct. 13.—The town of Amqui, Rimouski county, was thrown into a state of considerable excitement last week by the exhumation of the body of Madame Zephirin Guimont of that place, following rumors to the effect that the woman had been poisoned. An autopsy is being held.

Wholesale Burglaries.

Hamilton, Oct. 13.—The offices of the following dentists were broken into Saturday and gold and other supplies stolen: Drs. Everrett, Nobbs, Overholt and Clark. The Beach cottages following were also broken into: Walter Stewart, Fred Johnson, J. Gow and M. Foster.

Auto Crushed Man to Death.

New York, Oct. 13.—Martin Conly, Jr., was crushed to death under a 60-horse-power auto, when the machine, which was whirling along at 40 miles an hour, leaped from the road, crashed through an iron fence and landed bottom upward in an open subway.

Death of Sir H. D. Wolff.

Brighton, England, Oct. 13.—Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, who was ambassador to Spain, 1892-1900, died here Sunday. He was born in 1830.

Dress Goods Sale

We have gone carefully through our entire stock of Black and Colored Dress Goods and laid out all the odd lines, pieces where we had several colors in the same quality and have only one shade left, and grouped them in two lots to sell at

35c and 50c

These consist of Voiles, Silk and Wool Eoliennes, Crepe de Chenes, Tweeds Serges, Plaids, etc., etc., most of which were from 75c to $1.00 per yard and some as high as $1.50 and we decided to make a thorough house-cleaning in this department and offer the whole lot at 35c and 50c a yard. It may be well worth your while to have a look through these as they are certainly splendid bargains. On sale now in the Dress Goods Department.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Has anybody lost any flies?

• • •

Police Magistrate is out at the Corby camp. He will probably pass sentence on the unfortunate game before the hunters kill it.

• • •

Little piles of mud
Standing on the street
Make the farmers' wheels look
Anything but neat.

• • •

Free rural mail delivery is a fine thing, but why did the Government need to have the farmers' little mail boxes made in the United States? Were there not plenty of factories and idle men in Canada?

• • •

Hamilton Y.M.C.A. ladies had a "tag" day, whatever that is, and raised over $5,000. It beats all how the women can abstract money from the men when they go after it seriously.

• • •

The editorial in this issue, under the caption of "Lunatics are Sent to Canada," should be read and digested by every thinking man. Read that carefully and then ask yourself if you would be justified in voting for the retention in power of a Government which safeguards the interests of this country no better than that.

• • •

October weather in Ontario is good enough for us.

• • •

A farmer tells of meeting a man on the street and offering him $25 a month and his board to go out and work. The man refused. Will that be another burden for the "Lydies' Ide" this winter? We hope not.

• • •

Certain members of the City Council last night expressed themselves strongly against the principle of allowing people who live outside the city limits to obtain the use of city utilities. The same view is held by a large majority of Belleville people. What does it profit a man if he lives within the limits and pays city taxes if his neighbor, a stone's throw away, perhaps, pays seven mills to the county and can get, on application, the gas and water, to provide which the city is burdened with debt? That sort of thing should not be allowed. No wonder some people smile and call the city "easy."

PILES Dr. Chase's Ointment is a certain and guaranteed cure for each and every form of itching, bleeding and protruding piles. See testimonials in the press and ask your neighbors about it. You can use it and get your money back if not satisfied. 60c, at all dealers or EDMANSON, BATES & CO., Toronto.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

The petitions for a return to the Ward system of election were presented to the Council last night and referred to the proper officials. If 20 per cent. of the electorate signed the petition the Council must submit a by-law to the people next January. The petition seemed to be largely signed, but whether the requisite number of names of properly qualified people were attached could not, of course, be told without scrutiny. It seems likely, however, that it will be up to the electors to vote on the matter next January.

The revenue of the country has, during the past nine months, fallen off over $10,000,000, and we have not yet heard of Sir Wilfrid or Fielding claiming credit for the deficit. Why do they not? If they were the cause of the surpluses, are they not responsible for the deficit?

• • •

Mr. Thomas Sullivan, as a representative of the laboring classes, writes us that he has no more use for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as there appears to be no hopes of getting old age pensions from the Laurier Government. The adoption of this scheme, Mr. Sullivan thinks, would be a boon to the working people of Canada, and as Mr. E. Guss Porter, of this city, is the first member of Parliament in the history of Canada who has placed a notice of motion for old age pensions on the order board, therefore his (Mr. Sullivan's) support as a workingman is due to Mr. Porter's leader, Mr. R. L. Borden.

• • •

Another significant sign of how the political wind is blowing is the fact that Mayor Oliver, of Toronto, a life-long Liberal, refuses to appear on or speak from a Robinette platform. "I am not," he replied, when asked the question, "going to speak at any of Robinette's meetings." He had promised to attend a meeting which he supposed was non-political, "but," he added, "when I "learned that it was taking a poli-"tical shape I sent a letter refus-"ing to attend." It is well that there are some members of the Liberal party who have a proper appreciation of what is due to public sentiment.

• • •

By all means let the editor of the Globe come here and talk. We'd like to see and hear the greatest living political contortionist, who can preach national righteousness in one column and defend "Spotless Jim" Stratton in the next. His speech may cheer the local Grits up a bit, and it certainly won't affect Mr. Porter's majority.

• • •

The campaign in East-Hastings is not without its humorous features, not the least of which is the statement that J. K. McCargar was nominated as an "independent" candidate. We'll have Mephisto preaching doctrinal sermons next.

• • •

A New York Baptist minister told the ladies of his congregation that they could either take off their hats or go home. What the fair sisters said about him when they got home would make interesting reading.

• • •

What has that "purist" on the Globe to say of Hon. Mr. Pugsley and the $2000.? Alleged to have been taken as a bribe. He should be kicked out of the Cabinet for taking such a trifle, with the example of Fraser and others, who got hundreds of thousands, before him.

• • •

Bryan, U. S. Presidential candidate, made 31 speeches in one day recently, which comes pretty near giving him the long-distance talking championship.

• • •

Debs, Socialist, says Roosevelt has reduced the office of President of the United States to the level of the ward heeling politician. Old World statesmen, with the Sackville West and Venezuela incidents in their recollection, would probably have thought, a few years ago, that the traditions of the Presidential office could not be degraded much lower, but perhaps Roosevelt succeeded in doing it.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Detroit got to the Cubs in easy style yesterday, hammering the Chicago pitcher hard and winning easily by 8-3. Cobb, of Detroit, opened the eyes of Windy City fans, getting four hits out of five times at bat, and stealing two bases in one inning on the great Kling. People who prophecied four straight for Chicago are not now talking so loudly. The score now stands Chicago 2, Detroit 1. Today's game will be played in Detroit. The best four in seven games will be played.

Once more an Englishman is sculling champion of the world. Yesterday Edward Barry beat George Towns, the Australian, by two lengths, rowing over the Thames course in 21.12 2-5.

EYE STRAIN ILLNESS.

Only those who have been relieved by the use of glasses understand what bearing the condition of the eyes has on the general health. There are today children sick because of eye strain. Their illness may be attributed to other causes, and they will continue sick until the TRUE CAUSE is discovered by the exercise of good common sense on the part of the parents. If your child complains of the eyes, see what the trouble is. Our optician can tell you. No excuse for negligence.

Lunatics Are Sent to Canada.

No little capital was attempted to be made out of some remarks of the Hon. Mr. Hanna, at a public meeting, in which he deprecated the bringing into Canada, under the immigration policy of the Dominion Government, of men of unsound mind and paupers totally unfit for the requirements of the country, and who, in many cases, became inmates of our poor houses, jails and asylums.

This was heralded forth to every part of the Dominion, by the Liberals, as an attack and slander upon old country immigrants.

It is needless to say no such insult was offered, nor was language used which could be twisted into any reflection upon proper immigrants being sent or brought into the country, except by a gross perversion of facts, and by falsehoods.

That such a class of people as those referred to by Mr. Hanna are sent to Canada is true. If a verification of this statement be required, let the sceptic read the lecture delivered by "G. H. Savage, M.D., F.R.C.P., Consulting Physician for, and Lecturer on Mental Diseases, Guy's Hospital, London, England, which can be found reproduced in full in the January number (1908) of "The Canadian Practitioner," and he will learn that Mr. Hanna did not put his points strong enough.

After discussing at some length treatment of the weak-minded, imbecile, idiotic-hypochondriac and men of like diseases, change of climate, etc., is advocated. The lecturer makes the following remarks, which are worthy the serious consideration of those who are promoting immigration through the North American Transportation Company at $5 a head:

"Among certain physicians," the lecturer says, "the idea seems to prevail that every lunatic ought to be sent travelling." And adds:

"Certain so-called "colonies" I find very helpful; there are epileptic, feeble-minded, and inebriate colonies. I do not like to give names, but I will describe one. A doctor has a farm of 1,200 acres. On that he has ten or a dozen small villas, bungalows, cottages, and in each of these is a farm bailiff, a cured patient, a city missionary, a cured inebriate, a cured morphinomaniac, or someone else who has experienced mental trouble. In each of these houses are two or three borderland cases, who have fallen in some way, and are out of step with society, yet who are not dangerous or suicidal. These individuals are absorbed into this colony, and they are gradually educated back to self-respect; they are trusted. The doctor himself knows nothing about payments that is arranged with the head of each house. The results are extraordinarily good. I had a letter from him this week, wishing I COULD GO DOWN AND SEE THE BATCH OF DISCHARGES WHICH HE IS SENDING TO CANADA."

These are the kind of immigrants to which Mr. Hanna referred, who are filling our houses of refuge and lunatic asylums, for which the Laurier Government is taxing the people $5 a head, and denounces those who object to such a policy.

The Battle For Health

EVERY DAY QUESTION, "HOW ARE YOU TO-DAY?" KEEP WELL BY TONING SYSTEM WITH

DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

How to keep well.

This is the problem Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has helped many thousands of people to solve by reason of their extraordinary blood forming and system building qualities.

The only sure foundation for health is rich, red blood and a vigorous nervous system.

Both of these result from the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. Even though you know of this great restorative as a cure for nervous exhaustion, prostration and paralysis, you may have overlooked it as a tonic to build up the system when it gets run down and you feel weak and miserable.

Mr. Wm. Graham, Atwood, Ont., writes:

"My wife has been ill for some time with nervous prostration, and we had two of the best doctors we could get but neither of them did her any good. She gradually became worse and worse, could not sleep and lost energy and interest in life. She was almost giving up in despair when a friend advised a trial of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"From the first box of this preparation my wife used we noticed an improvement and after using six boxes she is completely cured and as well as she ever was, eats well, sleeps well, and feels fully restored. I cannot say too much in praise of this valuable medicine and am satisfied that my wife owes her life to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This cure is certified to by Mr. C. H. McFarlane, druggist, Atwood, Ont.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help you fight "the battle of keeping well. The genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D. 50 cents a box at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates and Co.

Canadian Veterans of South Africa.

The following thoughtful and public-spirited letter to Col. Ponton from Horace Gillespie, who was one of the first Belleville boys with the Canadian Artillery detachment at the relief of Mafeking, will no doubt be read with appreciation by his old comrades, who, it is hoped, will profit by his good advice, when circumstances render it possible:

Green Glade, Alta., Oct. 3, 1908.

Dear Col. Ponton,—In a recent issue of a Belleville newspaper I noticed that you had received application forms of the bounty free Government grant of land for veterans. Now, I would like to see most of the boys located out here in the North-west. I see we also have the choice of scrip to the value of $160, of which a great many will accept as their bonus, just merely to have no further trouble. What I am writing this for is to kindly ask you to try and impress those who make application before you to accept the 320 acres and do homestead duties on it instead of the scrip. In the first place, what is $160, compared with 320 acres at the good prices that rule here; and besides the 320 acres there is the privilege of taking up another 160 acres as homestead after the duties are completed on the former. It is certainly a chance that no veteran should miss, old or young. True, there are considerable difficulties to overcome, for you have to go into a new country and develop it before there are any railway facilities, as that appears to be the way out here, for when a new railway is surveyed out the settlers flock in and take up all the land two or three years before the road is completed. I took up my homestead here seventy miles from town nearly three years ago, and only this fall have we got a railway service close, and next spring we will have a road nearer still. I have completed my homestead duties now and am only waiting for my application papers to take up my veteran's grant.

Another thing, you might tell the boys to beware of land sharks; do not trust anyone to pick out their land for them. Tell them to come and look the land over for themselves, for there is a lot of very poor land throughout the west here and some few men looking for jobs of locating who would not hesitate placing a fellow on a poor claim for a paltry fee.

Trusting that you can get all the boys to see into this as I do, and that by next spring I will see some old familiar faces out this way, for "Once a soldier always a soldier," I will remain,

Yours truly,
HORACE GILLESPIE.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FINE MEETING OF MR. PORTER'S SUPPORTERS LAST NIGHT.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the supporters of Mr. E. Guss Porter, ex-M.P., was held last evening at the Conservative Committee rooms, Robertson block. All the wards of the city were well represented by not only the stalwart workers of the party, but by many of the younger element who are taking an active interest in the contest. The early part of the evening was spent in committee work after which the gathering was addressed by the old war horse, Mr. W. P. Hudson, ex-M.P.P., and the candidate, Mr. Porter, both of whom made excellent addresses. The chair was occupied by Mr. Jas. Wallace.

MR. W. P. HUDSON.

The first speaker was Mr. Hudson who referred to graft which was going on and being upheld by the Liberal Government. It was time that a stop was put to this work, and he had no doubt it would be on the 26th inst. Millions of money was being made by the grafters, and the expenditure had, year by year, been going up by leaps and bounds, although Sir Wilfrid had said he would reduce the expenditure. If Mr. Borden came into power, and he had no doubt he would, there would be a change for the better. In concluding his address the speaker appealed to all lovers of good government to work for the Conservative cause.

THE POPULAR CANDIDATE.

Mr Porter upon rising to speak was most enthusiastically received and addressed the meeting at some length, dealing principally with the grafting connected with members of the Government and members of the Liberal party. In referring to the dividing of Hastings County he said it was unfortunate to divide Hastings County in the manner in which it had been divided. Formerly the County sent three Conservatives to Parliament, but this was too rich for the Laurier Government and they divided the County into two ridings, so that only two Conservatives could now be sent to Parliament. This was on a par with the record of the Liberal Government. To-day, they were, however, not a united party, as many prominent Liberals were espousing Conservative principles because the Liberal Government had sacrificed their principles and failed to carry out their promises and pledges to the people who placed them in power. Sir Wilfrid Laurier to-day, in his addresses, sneers at the scandals that have been exposed and which scandals the Liberal party has brought upon themselves. He (the speaker) believed the electorate of this country would rise up in their might and turn the Liberal Government out of power. Justice is going to overtake the Laurier Government. Is the Cabinet of the Liberal Government to-day of the same calibre as it was when that party went into poower? By no means. When the Laurier Government went into power, Hon. A. G. Blair, Hon. J. Israel Tarte, Hon. Clifford Sifton, Hon. C. H. Emmerson, Hon. Mr. Pugsley, Hon. C. S. Hyman were members of the Cabinet. Death has removed two of these ministers but previous to their demise they were kicked out of the Cabinet as were also the other men, some of them because of scandals connected with their names. Hon. Cliffred Sifton, after being seven years a Cabinet minister, was a multi-millionaire, although he only had a salary of $7500 per year. Other cases he could enumerate, but this was sufficient. Is it any wonder that there is a feeling abroad in the country that it is time for a change? which change he believed would soon take place. Hon. Mr. Borden was a capable and honest man and he (the speaker) had no doubt he would be returned to power on the 26th inst. (Loud applause.)

Cheers for the King and Mr. Porter brought the meeting to a close.

JOSEPH BANKSON, A PROMINENT INSURANCE MAN AND MUCH ESTEEMED CITIZEN OF BETHANY, ILL., STRONGLY RECOMMENDS

VINOL FOR OLD PEOPLE.

"I am past eighty years of age and for some time I had been losing strength and suffering from chronic cold and lung trouble, until I was seriously ill and could not go out of doors. My son sent me some Vinol. I commenced to take it and it has simply worked wonders for me. I feel better and stronger than I have for years, and my cough is all gone. There is no other medicine equal to Vinol to build up health and strength for elderly people." Joseph Bankson, Bethany, Ill.

This is because Vinol is the best cod liver and iron tonic in the world. It creates a hearty appetite, strengthens the digestive organs, makes rich, red blood and replaces weakness with strength. The beneficial effect of Vinol in cases of feeble old people is simply remarkable.

We invite all old people, delicate children, weak, run-down persons, convalescents, or those suffering from chronic colds, coughs or bronchitis in this vicinity to try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it does no good. We make this offer to show our faith in Vinol. J. S. McKeown, Druggist, Belleville.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Executive of the Philharmonic Society took place last night at the residence of Dr. Marshall, Bridge street. After general business, the coming season's work was discussed, and a committee was struck to select the music. One of the works in prospect is "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," which will be a real musical treat, both to the members of the Society and all lovers of good music. The committee expect to announce the nights for practice in the near future, when all the old members of the Philharmonic and many new ones will be made welcome.

"BABES IN TOYLAND" A GREAT PRODUCTION.

The stupendous musical extravaganza "Babes in Toyland" will be presented at the Carman opera house on Wednesday, Oct. 14. "Babes In Toyland will be found altogether superb from a spectacular point of view. It fairly bristles with tuneful hilarity and comedy, and one event of interest followed so closely on the heels of its predecessor that the audience are kept on the qui vive without a minute's cessation. This delightful musical play was written by Glen MacDonough, and Victor Herbert composed the music; the lyrics are full of wit and humor and musically the play is strong, there being no less than 30 musical numbers. "Babes in Toyland" is a mammoth glittering and wonderfully attractive production and enjoyed a run of over 450 nights in New York and one year in Chicago. This long run for a musical play is not at all surprising when it is taken into consideration that "Babes in Toyland" is the most elaborate and gorgeously staged musical extravaganza ever seen. All the costumes used in the production were imported and are dresses of which only a woman conversant with the dainty creations can describe. Theatre-goers are frequently told that they are to see a complete production in its entirety and this occasionally proves to be true. More often it is the other way. The forthcoming engagement of "Babes in Toyland will be one of the occasions when it is true. Following its long run in New York the entire production will be brought here. This includes all the magnificent scenery, expensive costumes, and a cast which in point of strength it would be hard to equal. The company numbers over 60 people, including a beautiful chorus of forty pretty girls. Song hits are numerous and include, Floretta, Barney O'Flynn, Castle in Spain, Beatrice Barefacts, I Can't Do That Sum, Jane, Slumber Deep, Before and After, He won't be Happy till he gets it, Bo Peep and The Moon Will Help you Out.

Prices 25, 50c, 75, $1, and $1.50.

ROLLING SKATING STARS

Reckless Recklaw and Fannie Leigh, roller skating stars, last evening gave a performance at the skating arena, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the many spectators present. They give a marvellous entertainment, many features being most astounding. Reckless Recklaw's performance with bicycles is certainly wonderful. The performers will appear at the Arena again this evening.

AT

Scantlebury'

We have recently purchased at 37c on the dollar, the entire stock of Mr. John Cornelius. The goods have been brought to our warerooms and put in order and are now on sale at less than one half their value.

The stock has been so minutely arranged that small quantities can be handled without any difficulty of shortages. This is to say, we know what we have of everything and these small quantities in many cases will be cleared out at one quarter their value. The Cornelius stock must all be closed out before the end of the year, as we cannot bother with small quantities in the regular working season and the advantage will be to the purchaser.

Never before such an opportunity of buying wall paper at such prices and this, too, right in the face of the advance of wall-paper prices during the past three months of 25 per cent. Wall paper will be higher in price in the future, but during this sale you will have the great advantage of bargain prices such at you will not recall or repeat.

With this stock of wallpaper we have 10,000 feet of room moulding purchased in the same stock, which will be sold at like bargains to those of wall paper.

THE LATE HENRI JULIEN.

In Montreal Man Canada Loses Foremost Newspaper Artist.

Mr. Henri Julien, the newspaper artist, who died suddenly in Montreal a few days ago, was in many respects a remarkable man. Nature endowed him with talent of a high order, and had not his whole life been practically devoted to the necessarily hurried and transient work of daily journalism, he would undoubtedly have left behind him many works of art that would have lived. As it was, he found time to do a number of pictures, both in oil and water-colors, illustrating the life of the French-Canadian habitant, whom he understood so thoroughly, and the picturesque side of whose life he was so competent to depict. In these pictures, unfortunately so few, with pencil and brush, he did for the habitant what the late Dr. Drummond did with his verses.

Perhaps it is not saying too much to claim for the late Mr. Julien the first place among the illustrators of daily newspapers on this continent. His work was true and correct, and he produced more than mere pictures with correct technique. His pictures illustrated the subject at hand, and made the pages they adorned glow with life and reality. The speed with which he did his work was the wonder of those who watched him, and the despair of those who attempted to be his imitators. The speaker in Parliament or at a banquet had not concluded his remarks before Mr. Julien had him sketched in all his characteristic attitudes, and the sketches were ready for the etcher. He was the first in North America to do this class of work for a daily newspaper, and to the day of his death, he remained the first, as regards the quality of his work.

He was born in Beauharnois County, Quebec, but his boyhood was spent in Ottawa. When but a youth he accompanied the expedition of the Northwest Mounted Police, which in 1870, proceeded from old Fort Garry to the foothills of the Rockies for the purpose of taking formal possession of the Great West for the Dominion of Canada. That was the event of his life, to which he seemed to look back with the greatest pleasure—to meeting the Indians who were then wild and picturesque, to hunting the buffalo that then roamed the prairies in vast herds, and to living that free, out-door life of which he was so fond, and which he followed to the last, as far as his work would permit.

A more modest, retiring man than Mr. Julien never lived, but his genial manner and kindness of heart made him friends wherever he went. He was claimed as a confrere, both by the newspaper men and the artists, and it is many a year since the followers of the two crafts, but especially those of Montreal and Ottawa, have lost a fellow-worker, who left behind him so many mourning friends.

It is fortunate that one specimen of Julien's more deliberate work is the property of the nation. It is his painting, "Chasse Galerie," which won high praise at a recent exhibition of the Royal Canadian Art Association, and was subsequently purchased for the National Gallery at Ottawa.

'Twixt East and West.

Alberni, the Vancouver Island port which may one day prove an important link in the round-the-world traffic of the Canadian Pacific, is already historically connected with the Suez route. This is through its association with Messrs. Anderson & Anderson, of the Orient line, who besides their business of shipowners and shipbrokers, had an interest in a shipbuilding and ship-repairing dock and yard at Rotherhithe, on the Surrey side of the Thames. About the year 1855 it was brought to the notice of this firm that there were in Vancouver Island large tracts of forest land containing Douglas pine and other valuable timber suitable for masts and spars, and for general ship-building purposes. In 1860 they sent out their agent, Capt. Stamp, to Vancouver Island, and he selected Alberni as the most suitable site on which to erect a sawmill, not only on account of the great wealth of timber, but in view of the ease with which that timber could be shipped to foreign markets. The business became large and important, until the mill was burned down. It was never rebuilt, as the fire coincided with a depression in the shipbuilding industry. In 1886 the Andersons surveyed a portion of their land into a town site, which was called Alberni, and in 1906 incorporated their interest into the Alberni Land Co. The Canadian Pacific Railway acquired a substantial interest in this company, thus giving the railroad access to the deep-water harbor.

Shriners Rest.

Very great interest is taken by Canadians in the completion of the sale of the Perry Castle at Whitby to Wm. L. Cheeseworth of Rowell & Co., Toronto.

The intention is to utilize it in establishing an international Shriners' rest. Prominent members of that Masonic order are behind the purchasers in their purchase to accomplish that object.

Constructed more than fifty years ago, this splendid home, built by the late registrar, John Ham Perry, at a cost of $60,000, has been unoccupied for a long period, and is in sad condition of ruin, except for a perfectly splendid grove of trees with which it is surrounded.

Of especial interest to Masons will be the Balm of Gilead and tall cedars of Biblical repute.

New Zealand's Trade With Canada.

J. S. Larke, the Canadian commercial commissioner at Sydney, reports that last year Canada sold to New Zealand goods to a value of 205,536, as against only £52,374 in 1902. In the same time we bought from New Zealand £78,015 worth as against £7,366 worth in 1902. New Zealand has prohibited the importation of prison-made goods, and as the United States has been sending there a quantity of harvesting tools made by the convicts there is a good chance of Canadian manufacturers to increase their trade with the southern colony.

FINDING FRASER RIVER

ITS DISCOVERER IS ONE OF CANADA'S HEROES.

Simon Fraser of North-West Co. in Face of Hardship and Danger Pushed Through Mountains Along Canyon of Great River at a Time When Indians Had Never Seen a Paleface.

Now that a considerable portion of our great Northwest is under the influence of cultivation and the magnitude of its future destinies is apparent, attention is being drawn towards the names of those who were the pioneers of that vast territory. The names of Gauthier de la Verenderie and Le Gardeur de St. Pierre head the list of those hardy pioneers. As early as 1740 or 1750, La Verenderie had forced his way to the foot of the Rockies in his searches for the far-off Western Sea. And when he was checked in his career Le Gardeur St. Pierre undertook the accomplishment of the perilous enterprise.

It was, however, principally in the latter part of the last century that the Northwest became known.

During the war of 1812 another of the Northwesters took possession of Astoria and led John Jacob Astor and party as prisoners over the Rockies to Fort William; but unquestionably one of the most valuable services rendered to Canada by the Nor'-Wester, was the exploring, a few years previous, by Mr. Simon Fraser, of the territory watered by the Fraser river, and now forming the Province of British Columbia.

Mr. Fraser was born in 1776, and descended in a direct line from Fraser of Culbokie, second son of Simon, first Lord Lovat, by his marriage with the daughter of Lord John Bizzell.

He came to Canada with his widowed mother and in 1792, he became an articled clerk to the North-West Fur Trading Co.—McTavish, Frobisher & Co. He appears to have spent his first year at the headquarters at Montreal, and the next year began his adventurous career, being despatched to Fort Arthabaska, then the principal trading post of the company west of Grand Portage. In 1802 he became a partner, and three years later came down to Fort William, when he was nominated to cross the Rocky Mountains for the purpose of extending the outposts and forming new trading connections with the Indians.

It was in the month of August, 1805, that he left Fort William on his voyage of discovery. According to notes left by him, his route lay through the Lake of the Woods, Lake Nepigon, up the Saskatchewan, then up the Peace river as far as Isle-a-la-Croise, then up Buffalo Lake to Fort Arthabaska, which was the rendezvous of this department. From this post he proceeded up the Fraser river to the foot of the mountains to a place which he named Rocky Mountain Portage.

After a trip of exploration he came back to Rocky Mountain Portage to spend the winter and in the spring of 1806 he started out westward again. It took him another year to make his observations of the mountain passes. Under orders to make all speed to locate on the river before the Americans he explored the river to its mouth and in 1807 reached the ocean.

He remained but a short time there on account of the hostility of the Indians. From the time he left Ferres until he arrived at the sea he met several large bodies of Indians, speaking different languages. They assembled to see the wonderful palefaces that had come amongst them. An idea may be formed of how they regarded white men from the fact that when hundreds of them were congregated together, at a discharge of a single gun they would all fall upon their faces on the ground, so great was their astonishment and terror.

After severing his connection with the North-West Co., on his return to the east, Mr. Fraser retired to St. Andrews, Glengarry, where he died in 1862, at the age of 86. The Cornwall "Freeholder" of that date says: "By the death of Mr. Fraser the country loses not only one of its most respectable and honorable residents, but one of the most illustrious men who ever settled within its borders. One of the few survivors of the five old 'Nor'-Westers,' Mr. Fraser's name, as a discoverer, and the first explorer of the golden stream which bears his name, will be remembered with honor long after most of his provincial contemporaries have been forgotten."

The Mosquito-Ridden Moose.

It is not often that the harmful and apparently unnecessary mosquito lends any assistance to man; but there are times in Canada when the little stinging torment does help the hunter. Mr. Roderick Macfarlane, retired chief factor of the Hudson Bay Co., declares that during summer, when the weather is warm and mosquitoes very troublesome, moose resort for protection to the shores of lakes and streams, and while standing in the water they sometimes seem quite indifferent to the near presence of man, and will then retire only after being repeatedly fired at.

"I myself," he says, "had proof of this on one occasion when ascending the Anderson river in the end of June, 1868. There were five or six in the party when we observed three full-grown moose in the water. As they were not in good condition, we did not care to kill them, but, in order to test the truth of this peculiarity, I made the Indians fire a number of shots very close to them, but to no purpose. In fact, we had to scream and yell at them before they got out and stalked away at a very leisurely pace."

The American Invasion.

A great rush of landseekers from the United States has been invading Winnipeg immigration office enquiring as to the best places to locate. These men are of an unusually good class, and are capitalists in a small $5,000 to put into a farm.

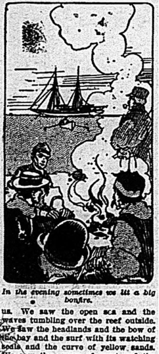
silence that followed and the ness with which Perdosa read- d himself to his work was sig- t enough of Captain Selover's elations with the men.

And how we did clean her. We stripped her of every stitch and sliver until she floated high, an empty hull, even her spars and running rigging ashore. I understood now the crew's grumbling. We literally went at her with a nailbrush.

Captain Selover took charge of us when we had reached this period. He and the nigger and Perdosa had long since finished the installation of the permanent camp. They had built us huts from the wreck, collecting stateroom doors for the sides and hatches for the roofs, huge and solid, with iron rings in them. The bronze and iron ventilation gratings to the doors gave us glimpses of the coast through fretwork. The rich inlaying of woods surrounded us. We set up on a solid rock the galley stove, with its rails to hold the cooking pots from upsetting in a seaway. In it we burned the debris of the wreck, all sorts of wood, some sweet and aromatic and spicy as an incensed cathedral. I have seen the nigger boiling beans over a blaze of sandalwood fragrant as an eastern shop.

First we scrubbed the Laughing Lass, then we painted her and resized and tarred her standing rigging, resized and rove her running gear, slushed her masts, finally careened her and scraped and painted her below.

When we had quite finished, we had the anchor chain dealt out to us in fathoms, and scraped, pounded and polished that. These were, indeed, days full of labor.



In the evening sometimes we lit a big bonfire.

Being busy from morning until night, we knew but little of what was about us. We saw the open sea and the waves tumbling over the reef outside. We saw the headlands and the bow of the bay and the surf with its watching seals and the curve of yellow sands. We saw the sweep of coast and the downs and the strange huts we had built out of departed magnificence. And that was all. That constituted our world.

In the evening sometimes we lit a big bonfire, sailor fashion, just at the edge of the beach. There we sat at ease and smoked our pipes in silence, too tired to talk. Even Handy Solomon's song was still. Outside the circle of light were mysterious things—strange wavings of white hands, bendings of figures, callings of voices, rustling of feet. We knew them for the surf and the wind in the grasses, but they were not the less mysterious for that.

Logically Captain Selover and I should have passed most of our evenings together. As a matter of fact we so spent very few. Early in the dusk the captain invariably rowed himself out to his beloved schooner. What he did there I do not know. We could see his light now in one part of her, now in the other. The men claimed he was scrubbing her teeth. "Old Scrubs" they called him to his back, never Captain Selover.

"He has to clean up after his own feet, he's so dirty," sagely proffered Handy Solomon. And this was true.

The seaman's prophecy held good. Seven weeks held us at that infernal job—seven weeks of solid, grinding work. The worst of it was that we were kept at it so breathlessly, as though our very existence were to depend on the headlong rush of our labor. And then we had fully half the stores to put away again and the other half to transport painfully over the neck of land from the cove to the beach.

So accustomed had I become to the routine in which we were involved, so habituated to anticipating the coming day as exactly like the day that had gone, that the completion of our job caught me quite by surprise. I had thrown myself down by the fire prepared for the same old half hour of drowsy nicotine, to be followed by the accustomed heavy sleep and the usual early rising to toil. The evening was warm. I half closed my eyes.

Handy Solomon was coming in last. Instead of dropping to his place he straddled the fire, stretching his arms over his head. He let them fall with a sharp exhalation:

"'Lay aloft, lay aloft,' the jolly bo's'n cried.
Blow high, blow low, what care we;
'Look ahead, look astern, look a-windward, look a-lee,'
Down on the coast of the high Barbare-e-e."

The effect was electrical. We all sprang to our feet and fell to talking at once.

"By God, we're through!" cried Pulz. "I'd clean forgot it!"

The nigger piled on more wood. We drew closer about the fire. All the interests in life, so long held in the background, leaped forward, eager for recognition. We spoke of trivialities almost for the first time since our landing, fused into a temporary but complete good fellowship by the relief.

"Wonder how the old doctor is getting on?" ventured Thrackles after awhile.

"The devil's a preacher! I wonder?" cried Handy Solomon.

"Let's make 'em a call," suggested Pulz.

"Don't believe they'd appreciate the compliment," I laughed. "Better let them make first call. They're the longer established." This was lost on them, of course. But we all felt kindly to one another that evening.

I carried the glow of it with me over until the next morning and was therefore somewhat dashed to meet Captain Selover with clouded brows and an uncertain manner. He quite ignored my greeting.

"Eagen," he squeaked, "can you think of anything more to be done?"

I straightened my back and laughed.

"Haven't you worked us hard enough?" I inquired. "Unless you gild the cabins I don't see what else there can be to do."

Captain Selover stared me over.

"And you a naval man!" he marveled. "Don't you see that the only thing that keeps this crew from gettin' restless is keeping them busy? I've sweat more with my brain than you have with your back thinking up things to do. I can't see anything ahead, and then we'll have trouble. Oh, they're a sweet lot!"

I whistled, and my crest fell. Here was a new point of view and also a new Captain Ezra. Where was the confidence in the might of his two hands?

He seemed to read my thoughts and went on.

"I don't feel sure here on this cussed land. It ain't like a deck where a man has some show. They can scatter. They can hide. It ain't right to put a man ashore alone with such a crew. I'm doing my best, but it ain't goin' to be good enough. I wish we were safe in Frisco harbor"—

He would have maundered on, but I seized his arm and led him out of possible hearing of the men.

"Here, buck up!" I said to him sternly. "There's nothing to be scared of. If it comes to a row, there's three of us, and we've got guns. We could even sail the schooner at a pinch and leave them here. You've stood them off before."

"Not ashore," protested Captain Selover weakly.

"Well, they don't know that. Don't let them see you've lost your nerve this way." He did not even wince at the accusation. "Put up a front."

He shook his head. The sand had completely run out of him. Yet I am convinced that if he could have felt the heave and roll of the deck beneath him he would have faced three times the difficulties he now feared. However, I could see readily enough the wisdom of keeping the men at work.

"You can wreck the Golden Horn," I suggested. "I don't know whether there's anything left worth salvage, but it'll be something to do."

He clapped me on the shoulder.

"Good!" he cried. "I never thought of it."

"Another thing," said I, "you better give them a day off a week. That can't hurt them, and it'll waste just that much more time."

"All right," agreed Captain Selover.

"Another thing yet. You know I'm not lazy, so it ain't that I'm trying to dodge work. But you'd better lay me off. It'll be so much more for the others."

"That's true," said he.

I could not recognize the man for what I knew him to be. He groped, as one in the dark or as a sea animal taken out of its element and placed on the sands. Courage had given place to fear, decision to wavering and singleness of purpose to a divided counsel. He who had so thoroughly dominated the entire ship eagerly accepted advice of me, a man without experience.

That evening I sat apart considerably disturbed. I felt that the ground had dropped away beneath my feet. To be sure everything was tranquil at present, but now I understood the source of that tranquillity and how soon it must fail. With opportunity would come more scheming, more speculation, more cupidity. How was I to meet it, with none to back me but a scared man, an absorbed man and an indifferent man?

CHAPTER XV.

PERCY DARROW, unexpected, made his first visit to us the very next evening. He sauntered in with a Mexican corn husk cigarette between his lips, carrying a lantern, blew the light out and sat down with a careless greeting, as though he had seen us only the day before.

"Hullo, boys," said he, "been busy?"

"How are ye, sir?" replied Handy Solomon. "Good Lord, mates, look at that!"

Our eyes followed the direction of his forefinger. Against the dark blue of the evening sky to northward glowed a faint phosphorescence, arch shaped, from which shot, with pulsating regularity, long shafts of light. They beat almost to the zenith and back again a half dozen times; then the whole illumination disappeared with the suddenness of gas turned out.

"Now, I wonder what that might be?" marveled Thrackles.

"Northern lights," hazarded Pulz. "I've seen them almost like that in the Bering seas."

"Northern lights your eye!" sneered Handy Solomon. "You may have seen them in the Bering seas, but never this far south and in August, and you can kiss the book on that."

"What do you think, sir?" Thrackles inquired of the assistant.

"Devil's fire," replied Percy Darrow briefly. "The island's a little queer. I've noticed it before."

"Debbil fire," repeated the nigger.

Darrow turned directly to him.

"Yes, devil's fire, and devils, too, for all I know, and certainly vampires. Did you ever hear of vampires, doctor?"

"No," growled the nigger.

"Well, they are women, wonderful, beautiful women. A man on a long voyage would just smack his lips to see them. They have shiny gray eyes and lips red as raspberries. When you meet them they will talk with you and go home with you. And then when you're asleep they tear a little hole in your neck with their sharp claws, and they suck the blood with their red lips. When they aren't women they take the shape of big bats like birds." He turned to me with so beautifully casual an air that I wanted to clap him on the back with the joy of it.

"By the way, Eagen, have you noticed those big bats the last few evenings over by the cliff? I can't make out in the dusk whether they are vampires or just plain bats." He directed his remarks again to the nigger. "Next time you see any of those big bats, doctor, just you notice close. If they have just plain black eyes they're all right, but if they have gray eyes, with red rims around 'em, they're vampires. I wish you'd let me know if you do find out. It's interesting."

"Don' get me near no bats," growled the nigger.

"Where's Selover?" inquired Darrow.

"He stays aboard," I hastened to say. "Wants to keep an eye on the ship."

"That's laudable. What have you been doing?"

"We've been cleaning ship. Just finished yesterday evening."

"What next?"

"We were thinking of wrecking the Golden Horn."

"Quite right. Well, if you want any help with your engines or anything of the sort, call me."

He arose and began to light his lantern.

"I hope as how you're getting on well there above, sir?" ventured Handy Solomon insinuatingly.

"Very well, I thank you," replied Percy Darrow dryly. "Remember those vampires, doctor."

He swung the lantern and departed without further speech. We followed the spark of it until it disappeared in the arroyo.

Behind us bellowed the sea. Over against us in the sky was the dull threatening glow of the volcano. About us were mysterious noises of crying birds, barking seals, rustling or rushing winds. I felt the thronging ghosts of all the old world's superstition swirling madly behind us in the eddies that twisted the smoke of our fire.

We wrecked the Golden Horn. Forward was a rusted out donkey engine, which we took to pieces and put together again. It was no mean job, for all the running parts had to be cleaned smooth and with the exception of a rudimentary knowledge on the part of Pulz and Perdosa we were ignorant. In fact we should not have succeeded at all had it not been for Percy Darrow and his lantern. The first evening we took him over to the cliff's edge he laughed aloud.

"Jove, boys, how could you guess it all wrong?" he wondered.

With a few brief words he set us right, Pulz, Perdosa and I listening intently, the others indifferent in the hopelessness of being able to comprehend. Of course we went wrong again in our next day's experiments, but Darrow was down two or three times a week and gradually we edged toward a practical result.

His explanations consumed but a few moments. After they were finished we adjourned to the fire.

Thus we came gradually to a better acquaintance with the doctor's assistant. In many respects he remained always a puzzle to me. Certainly the men never knew how to take him. He was evidently not only unafraid of them, but genuinely indifferent to them.

Yet he displayed a certain interest in their needs and affairs. His practical knowledge was enormous. I think I have told you of the completeness of his arrangements. Everything had been foreseen from grindstones to gas nippers. The same quality of concrete speculation showed him what we lacked in our own lives.

There was, as you remember, the matter of Handy Solomon's steel claw. He showed Thrackles a kind of lanyard knot that deep sea person had never used. He taught Captain Selover how to make soft soap out of one species of seaweed. Me he initiated in the art of fishing with a white bone lure. Our camp itself he reconstructed on scientific lines so that we enjoyed less aromatic smoke and more palatable dinner. And all of it he did amusedly, as though his ideas were almost too obvious to need communication.

We became in a manner intimate with him. He guyed the men in his indolent fashion, playing on their credulity, their good nature, even their forbearance. They alternately grinned and scowled. He left always a confused impression, so that no one really knew whether he cherished rancor against Percy Darrow or kindly feeling.

The nigger was Darrow's especial prey. The assistant had early discovered that the cook was given to signs, omens and superstitions.

From a curious scholar's lore he drew fantastics with which to torment his victim. We heard of all the witches, warlocks, incubi, succubae, harpies, devils, imps and haunters of Avitchi, from all the teachings of history, sacred and profane, Hindoo, Egyptian, Greek, mediaeval, Swedenborg, Rosicrucian, theosophy, theology, with every last ounce of horror, mystery, shivers and creeps squeezed out of them. They were gorgeous ghost stories, for they were told by a man fully informed as to all the legendary and gruesome details. At first I used to think he might have communicated it more effectively. Then I saw that the cool, drawling manner, the level voice, were in reality the highest art.

He told his stories in a half amused, detached manner, which imposed confidence more readily than any amount of earnest asseveration. The mere fact of his own belief in what he said came to matter little. He was the vehicle by which was brought accurate knowledge. He had read all these things and now reported them as he had read. Each man could decide for himself as to their credibility.

At last the donkey engine was cleared and reinstalled atop the cliff. The nigger built under her a fire of black walnut, Captain Selover handed out grog all around, and we started her up with a cheer just to see the wheels revolve.

Next we half buried some long hatches, end up, to serve as bitts for the lines, hitched our cables to them and joyfully commenced the task of pulling the Golden Horn piece by piece up the side of the cliff.

The stores were badly damaged by the wet, and there was no liquor, for which I was sincerely grateful. We broke into the boxes and arrayed ourselves in various garments—which speedily fell to pieces—and appropriated gimcracks of all sorts. There were some arms, but the ammunition had gone bad. Perdosa out of forty or fifty misfires got one feeble sputter and a tremendous bang which blew up his piece, leaving only the stock in his hand. A few tinned goods were edible, but all the rest was destroyed. A lot of hard woods, a thousand feet of chain cable and a fairly good anchor might be considered as prizes. As for the rest, it was foolishness, but we hauled it up just the same until nothing at all remained. Then we shut off the donkey engine and put on dry clothes. We had been quite happy for the eight months.

It was now well along toward spring. The winter had been like summer, and with the exception of a few rains of a week or so we had enjoyed beauti-

EFFECTIVE TORPEDOES.

The Improvement Most Needed Now In Naval Warfare.

The next great improvement in naval warfare will be on the lines of ways and means of repeating what the Romans did—ways and means of charging upon and grappling with the mighty war vessels of an enemy to sink them with the short sword of high explosives.

There is no one thing so much needed in naval warfare at the present time as a more efficient means of reaching battleships and cruisers with a sufficient quantity of high explosives for their destruction. In other words, there is a more imperative demand for improvements in torpedoes and torpedo boats than in any other branch of the naval service. The effective range of the modern high power gun is now about five miles, and it is the range of the guns that determines the distance between the lines of battle of modern fleets, and the fleet with guns of the longest range has the opposing fleet at its mercy.

A little while ago the automobile torpedo was thought to be a valuable adjunct to the armament of the modern battleship, but the range of the guns has now been so increased that such torpedoes become a useless incumbrance because of the shortness of their range, notwithstanding the fact that their manufacturers have done everything possible to perfect them and to increase their speed and range. Their range is necessarily limited to that attainable by the charge of compressed air they are capable of carrying.

During the past few years the pressure of the air has been increased from 1,300 pounds to the square inch to 2,250 pounds to the square inch and the weight of air from 60 pounds to 130 in the eighteen inch torpedo, and still the maximum range of the eighteen inch torpedo is only from 3,000 to 3,500 yards, practically about one-third of the range of the high power guns which determine the distance apart of the lines of battle, and the maximum rate of speed of this torpedo is about 35 knots.—Hudson Maxim in Metropolitan Magazine.

Newsstands at Sea.

For some time past the stewards on the ocean liners have added to their earnings by laying in a stock of periodicals and books and retailing them to passengers, but the regular news dealer has only just arrived. On such ships as the Lusitania and her sister ship it is quite a pleasant shock on the second day out to come across the news dealer's stall at the entrance of the barber shop or some other as natural place. The papers, it is true, do not bear the morning's date, but the magazines are of the latest issue and the novels the latest from the publishing houses. The stall is entirely new, and whether it has come to stay or not depends upon whether it pays. The rent is high, and besides paying for the privilege the dealer must also pay his passage.—Popular Mechanics.

Eel as Thick as a Cat.

The aquarium now has a sea monster, a spotted moray, which is a formidable name for a species of eel. It is eight feet long, as large in diameter as a fat cat and resembles an enormous eel, except that its head, with a mouth like an undershot bulldog, is crowned with a ridge of spikes. It came from Bermuda. Often the moray has been taken for a sea serpent by green fishermen, as it lives near the surface and often lies with its head on the rocks, seeking birds' eggs and crabs. Superintendent Morgan says this moray is not extraordinarily large, as they grow to fifteen feet and often swim with heads elevated above the sea.—New York World.

Beautiful New Costumes
At Very Moderate Prices.

The exquisite new Autumn costumes which we are showing have won the admiration of every woman who has visited our Ready-to-Wear Garment section.

The collection is the most complete, representative and authoritative offered for your selection. Styles are the newest of the new fabrics and colors the most fashionable—tailoring and finish the best.

There's a Costume Here For All Figures --A Style for Every Individual Taste.

Of course the Directoire mode is prominent the coat which gives to the figure long, straight lines and shows a slight Empire back, broad reveres and other characteristics of the Directoire period.

For conservative tastes there are plenty of simple, mannish styles and "in-between" models which are neither plain nor elaborate.

Among the fabrics are broadcloths in plain colors and striped effects, hard finished Worsted and serges, chevron striped serges, etc. Colors include greens, browns, blues, London smoke. wisteria, mulberry and black and two-tone and shaded stripes.

Prices for all Purses--and at every price a matchless value in style and serviceable quality.

We show Ladies Costumes, beautifully tailored and handsomely trimmed at

$17.50, 18.50. 20.00, 22.50, 24.50, 25.00, 27.50, 28.50, $35.00

Correct Styles In Ladies' Coats.

In variety, beauty of styles and greatness of values our display of Women's Fall and Winter Coats is easily the superior of any to be found in Belleville.

Coats in long, gracefully falling effects are the most favored. Those we are showing in a wide range of materials, in black, plain colors and fancy mixtures.

Prices Range From $7.50 to $25.00

In Ladies' Coats at $12.50 and $15.00, the values are exceptionally fine. In fact, we are certain you will find nothing to approach our styles at these low prices. Brief hints of the styles and prices follow:

Ladies' Rain Coats

These are shown in fitted and loose backs in cravenette, covert cloths and rubberized silks, all very stylish garments from $5.00 to $23.50 each

Children's Coats

For children from 2 to 10 years of age we show a variety of styles in Bear Skin, colored plush and colored cloths to sell from $2 to $10.

Misses' Coats

For girls from 10 to 18 years of age we show many very smart styles in navy, brown, green and cardinal plain cloths also some very pretty tweed effects to sell from $5.00 to $13.50.

Ladies' Fur-lined Coats

Every ladies' fur-lined garment is sold with Sinclair's absolute guarantee behind it. You will appreciate this fact for it means something—our prices are $50.00, $65.00. $67.50. $72.50, $75, $82.50 and $90.00.

$1.00 Taffeta Silks for 50c

This week we place on sale about 700 yards of Black and Colored Taffeta Dress Silks in solid colors and fancy patterns, silks that sell regularly at 75c, 90c and $1.00 per yard, beautiful silks for ladies' dresses, waists, etc., and we clear these for only

50c per yard

Quantity, Quality, Variety, Prices

These are the four outstanding attractions of our Dress Goods Department.

We claim all these and a visit to this department will verify our claims. in fact we know that no other store pretends to show a dress goods department equal to ours, the reason for this being found in the fact that we do the dress goods trade. See our goods—get samples and compare prices.

Cheese Board.

At the local Cheese Board on Thursday there was a good attendance of salesmen and buyers. Whilst the price of cheese showed a slight decrease from the week previous, nevertheless it is still bringing good returns. The price realized was 12 1-8c and 12 1-16c, at which figure nearly all were sold on the board. Forty-four factories were represented, and these boarded 2630 boxes of white and 118 boxes of colored.

The following factories were represented:

SOMETHING CAN BE DONE.

TO STOP THE INCREASE OF CATARRH IN BELLEVILLE.

Catarrhal troubles are increasing, not only in Belleville but all over the country.

Catarrh is a germ disease, and to cure it, germ life in the nose, throat and lungs must be destroyed, and this can be done only by breathing Hyomei.

There is no dangerous stomach drugging when Hyomei is used; no tablet or liquid mixtures whereby the digestion is often destroyed.

Breathed through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, its healing balsams penetrate the most remote air cells, destroying the catarrhal germs so that quick recovery follows. The complete outfit costs but $1.00, and J. S. McKeown agrees to refund the money should Hyomei fail to do all that is claimed for it.

DROWNED PERSONS.

Absence of Water in the Lungs Need Not Indicate Murder.

Several cases have been reported in the newspapers recently in which the absence of water in the lungs of persons found immersed in ponds and rivers has led to the conclusion that death had occurred before immersion and that the crime was therefore murder and not suicide. As the matter is of great criminal importance, permit me to call attention briefly to the report in 1862 of a committee appointed by the Royal Medical and Chirurgical society of London to investigate this question. It was a well known fact that in most drowned persons water was not found in the lungs, and it was supposed by many that in drowning a spasmodic contraction of the entrance of the windpipe took place, which prevented the entrance of water. The committee made a very careful and prolonged investigation and came to conclusions which I summarize as follows:

First.—Water does enter the lungs in drowning. In animals drowned by immersion in water the lungs, if examined immediately afterward, are full of water. If a dog be drowned in plaster of paris the plaster is found in the smallest tubes. In a guinea pig whose nose only has been immersed in mercury the globules of mercury penetrate the finer tubes.

Second.—If the examination be delayed for several hours or longer, as is generally the case, no water may be found in the lungs, absorption having taken place even after death. In experiments upon animals it was found that forty or fifty ounces of water could be introduced into the lungs without any of the liquid being detected there an hour or two afterward. In cases of undoubted drowning in human beings, when the examination was delayed for several hours after death, fragments of water plants and other foreign substances may be found in the windpipe and larger tubes without any water being detected in the tissue of the lungs. Absorption of water takes place in the lungs even after death, and therefore the absence of water in the lungs many hours after death has no bearing upon the question of murder or suicide. It is very important that this fact should be generally known.—A. Brayton Ball in New York Times.

Van Dycks That Were Forgeries.

The trial of art dealers at Genoa for smuggling seven famous Van Dycks from the Cattaneo palace has resulted in an acquittal. It was proved that six of the pictures had never left the palace, the smuggled works of art being forgeries. This recalls the outburst of indignation in Italy some years ago concerning a Raphael which was secretly conveyed to America for a well known millionaire. That it was a genuine Raphael the most skillful experts in the United States had no doubt, and it bore the great artist's unmistakable signature. But, much to Italy's relief, a closer examination of the canvas proved it to be a clever forgery, which was afterward traced to a studio in Rome whose "old masters" were turned out by the dozen.—London Chronicle.

Unique Straw Hat.

The proprietor of a fashionable cafe at Marienbad is the possessor of a straw hat which he values at $1,000. The hat is not a costly variety of panama, but is rather a rough looking straw hat. Yet it is the pride of the proprietor's life because it is woven of straws through which the crowned heads of Europe have at various times sucked cooling drinks dispensed in the owner's establishment. For many years this king worshiper had been collecting straws from the royal lips, scorning mere nobles or statesmen. When the collection was large enough the hat was manufactured.

A Roundabout Bite.

In San Francisco the campaign against rats as spreaders of the plague is a subject of universal discussion. The topic has reached even the children.

"Wot they hunting up all rats fer?"

"Aw, don't yer know nothing? Rats has the plague, an' if you see one you'd better look out, 'cause you'll get it, too, maybe."

"If you just see a rat, do you get it?"

"Aw, don't you know nothing? You've got the plague when you've been bit by a flea what's been bit by a rat what's been bit by a sailor."—San Francisco Call.

No Use.

"Ginevra," pleaded the young man in deep, impassioned tones, "I must speak! The voice of my heart can be stifled no longer! Every impulse of my nature, every fiber of my being, every surging emotion of my soul clamors for utterance! Sensible as I am of my own unworthiness, realizing to the full the presumption of which I am guilty in daring to aspire to your hand, I have no excuse, no palliation, save that with the deathless, inextinguishable devotion of a heart never before touched by the sacred fire, I love"—

"Oh, Arthur," yawned the beautiful maiden, "why will you persist in making those utterly useless noises!"—Chicago Tribune.

Rastus on Trial.

Rastus was on trial for the theft of a turkey and took the stand on his own behalf.

"I didn't steal no turkey, squar. I stoled a rail."

"Well, Rastus, how did those bones get in your back yard?"

"They done come dar without my permishun, an' I ain't 'sponsible. You see, squar, I wuz needin' firewood. so I took de rail an' toted it home, an' der wuz a turkey on it, a great big fellah. Well, sah, what's on my lan's mine, an' I didn't give 'im no time to run off neither, squar."

The squire deliberated a few seconds. Then he said, "Case dismissed."—Harper's Weekly.

Since Child's Life was Saved by Psychine.

Mrs. E. Obediah of Ohswekin, Ont., declares that Psychine saved her child's life. It was then suffering from Pneumonia. This was in March, 1907. On August 11th, 1908, 17 months after, she wrote:

"The condition of my family's health is decidedly good. I give Psychine to each member of my family, eight in number and I consider their good health is due to Psychine which we recognize and believe to be the greatest of Tonics. My husband and myself pin our faith to Psychine because it has done so much for us in times past when hard pressed with sickness. I would be glad if you referred me to any skeptical person and you can use my name for this purpose."

Quiet Session of The City Council.

Little Business of Importance Done, Though the Session Lasted Nearly Three Hours.

The City Council had a quiet session last night. Nothing of startling importance transpired, though it was nearly 11 when "orders of the day" was reached. The absentees were Ald. Blackburn, Green and A. R. Thompson.

SEPARATE SCHOOL SEWERAGE.

Messrs. Butler and Wims appeared on behalf of the needed sewer for the new Separate School. The situation was now acute. There were only two propositions feasible. To connect with either Church St. or Front St. sewers. The Board wanted to know whether, if they built the sewer themselves, they would be the sole owners? If not, would the city assist in building and take over the sewer as a part of the city sewerage system? They must have an outlet and would like a definite answer. The connection with Church St. would be the least costly.

It was resolved to instruct the City Engineer, with a committee, to look into the matter and see what plan would be suitable, with power to act. The committee is composed of the Mayor, Ald. Deacon and Panter.

A SIDEWALK DISAGREEMENT.

A deputation was present re a proposed sidewalk on the west side of William St., south of Bridge. Some residents wanted it and some didn't. The city was going to build the walk, but stopped when certain residents of the street, who did not want it, threatened to go to law.

Mr. C. M. Stork thought some kind of a walk should be built. The present walk might easily cause serious accident. A walk from Bridge St. to Mr. Ross' residence would, he thought, answer all purposes.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, while not wishing to oppose any civic improvements, did object to people who lived on the other side of the street coming and asking for a walk on the west side, for which other people had to pay. Some walks built on streets were really nothing but private walks. If the Council decided to build the walk he would pay his share rather than go to law, though he thought the proposed walk was inequitable. The sidewalk at present was in fair repair.

Mr. John Taylor said he owned 300 feet of vacant land on William St., and failed to see why he should be compelled to pay for that distance of granolithic walk which nobody would use.

Messrs. P. Ross and H. Knight were in favor of having the walk built.

Mr. James Cummins was decidedly opposed to the walk being built.

The deputation was informed that the Council would do its best to satisfy all the parties concerned.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell — "You'll have some trouble in doing that. (Laughter.) Continuing, he complained that the Council did not leave the streets in proper condition, after building granolithic walks.

The deputation then withdrew.

After some discussion it was resolved to build the walk from Bridge St. to Mr. Ross', if the weather holds good, and take up the old walk on the continuation of the street.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The reports of the various standing committees, as already published, were read and adopted, also some accounts, as follows:

P. J. M. Anderson	$ 5.00
Victoria Industrial School	32 81
B. A. Sanford	5.00

ACCIDENT INSURANCE AFFAIRS.

The Guarantee company which carries the city's insurance wrote re condition of certain city walks. It was insinuated that some walks were not repaired as they should be.

Referred to City Engineer, with instructions to use all endeavors to keep the walks in repair, and at once take action when defective walks are reported.

THE WARD SYSTEM.

A petition requesting the Council to return to the Ward system of election of Aldermen was presented. Referred to the Assessor and City Clerk, to see if the proper percentage of electors had signed the petition.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Vermilyea said a Mr. Sprague, living outside the city, asked that he be allowed to obtain and use city water. What did the Council propose to do?

The sense of some members of the Council was that outsiders should have the water if they paid all installation expenses. Others thought only city people should have city privileges.

No action was taken.

COW HERDING.

The City Clerk said he had received complaints that boys in the city took charge of more cows than they were able to properly herd and look after. Did the Council want to do anything?

The Council didn't.

Golden Jubilee of Archdeacon Bogert.

The following despatch refers to a brother of Rev. D. F. Bogert, rector of St. John's church, this city:

Ottawa, Oct. 12—Venerable Archdeacon Bogert, rector of St. Alban's Anglican church, on Saturday celebrated his golden jubilee, the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination as deacon. To mark the occasion Holy Communion was celebrated at 7.30 in St. Alban's church, when a large congregation of the Church of England clergyman of the city, parishioners and friends of Archdeacon Bogert were present. Following this service the Archdeacon entertained many clergymen to breakfast at Hotel Cecil.

During breakfast hour the Archdeacon was presented with a large gold cross by the Church of England clergy at Ottawa. In the evening his congregation tendered him a reception.

Venerable James John Bogert, archdeacon and rector of St. Alban's church, Ottawa, was born in Brockville, Ont., on August 2, 1835. When but a boy he left for Guelph where he received his early education under Rev. Arthur Palmer. Later he attended Trinity College, at Toronto where he graduated in 1855, receiving his degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Fifty years ago he received his degree of M.A., and the same year he was ordained deacon by the late Dr. Strachan, bishop of Toronto. In 1859 he was ordained priest and six years ago received the degree of D.C.L.

His first charge was at Brampton, where he served for some time as curate. Later he removed to Prescott Anglican church as curate and in 1852 he was made rector of St. Mary Magdalene church, at Napanee. In June 1881, he was appointed rector of St. Alban's in this city and in 1897 at the formation of the new diocese of Ottawa he became its first archdeacon.

"MY KIDNEYS HURT ME ALL THE TIME"

Gin Pills Cured Them. Free Sample Box Leads to Cure.

Only those who have been tortured with Kidney Trouble can appreciate how Mr. Trumper suffered. Being a railroad man, he was called upon to do all kinds of heavy work. The constant strain of lifting, weakened the kidneys.

I received the sample box of Gin Pills and was greatly benefitted by them. My kidneys were in such bad condition I could not lift or stoop without pain. In fact, they pained me nearly all the time. I have taken three boxes of Gin Pills, working all the time at heavy work on the railroad and did not lose a day.

McINTOSH BROS

LAURIER IN TOWNSHIPS.

Farnham and Granby Scene of Liberal Rallies.

Farnham, Que., Oct. 13.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke here yesterday on his tour of this province. The weather was chilly, and the populace seemed affected by the atmospheric conditions. Both French and English met at this centre, which used to be a purely English part of the eastern townships, and the proceedings were bi-lingual in character.

About 5,000 people gathered to meet Sir Wilfrid, who was accompanied by Hon. Sydney Fisher and Hon. L. P. Brodeur.

Dealing with general politics Sir Wilfrid said no one could find what sort of policy the Conservatives were offering. Last year there was the Halifax platform of Mr. Borden, which proved a stillborn infant forgotten as soon as born, and in this election it was not heard of.

The Liberals in 1903 called a convention and laid down a policy, and this was still being followed.

"It is charged by the Conservatives," said Sir Wilfrid, "that we have abandoned our principles. That is a strange objection. If our own followers had made it, it might be reasonable, but why should the Conservatives, when they have nothing better to offer?"

As the charges of extravagance Sir Wilfrid argued that there had been an increase of revenue which fully justified increased expenditure.

Sir Wilfrid was accorded a very warm welcome at Granby on his arrival there from Farnham. He was met at the station by Mayor Milner and a committee of citizens. A procession of 500 torch-bearers was lined up, headed by the town band. Sir Wilfrid and Messrs. Brodeur and Fisher were escorted to a carriage, and the procession paraded the principal streets.

GRAFT ANYWAY, SAYS DEBS.

Socialist Candidate Says People Lose Whoever Wins In U.S.

Philadelphia, Oct. 13.—Eugene V. Debs, Socialist candidate for President, addressed two meetings on Sunday. Thousands of workingmen heard him. Mr. Debs denounced the present form of Government, the social system and the Democratic and Republican parties. Among other things, he said:

"We are on the verge of the greatest organic change in all history. First, we abolished kings and then slavery, and now we are to abolish the capitalists and save the workingmen from the horrible system. Let us hope that the third step will come in peace—but come it will."

Paying his respects to President Roosevelt, he said: "Roosevelt is the Don Quixote of American politics. He wears a rough rider hat and enjoys looking ferocious. If he ever did anything besides shoot a Spaniard in the back I have not heard of it. He has reduced the office of President of the United States to the level of the ward heeling politician."

"With the Republicans it is 'Wall street and Taft,'" declared the speaker, "and with the Democrats it is 'Tammany and graft.'"

AGREE ON CONFERENCE

Russian View Regarding Balkan Trouble Adopted by Britain.

M. Iswolsky Impresses Necessity of Congress to Settle Crisis Upon Sir Edward Grey—Scope of Questions Must Be Enlarged—Customs House Seized—Moral Support Promised to Servians.

London, Oct. 13.—M. Iswolsky, the Russian Foreign Minister, has succeeded in impressing upon Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary of Foreign Affairs, the necessity not only that a conference of the powers should be held to settle the crisis in the near east, but that this conference should take under advisement other questions besides those involved in the annexation by Austria of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the declaration of Bulgarian independence.

This change of front on the part of Great Britain, which has caused great surprise, was announced by the Foreign Office at the conclusion of a long conference between Sir Edward Grey and M. Iswolsky, following a meeting of the Cabinet in the morning, at which Sir Edward set forth the position he had taken and explained the views of the Russian Foreign Minister.

Sir Edward's secretary, in making the announcement, said:

"It may be affirmed with certainty that both Ministers concur in the necessity for a conference, and that the pour parlers at the Foreign Office, following as they do upon the Franco-Russian negotiations on the same subject, has smoothed away some of the difficulties which were in the way. It is now regarded as probable that the latest events in the near east also necessitate the enlarging of the scope of the questions to be discussed at the conference."

Further than this nothing could be ascertained officially as to the questions M. Iswolsky desires to include.

It is doubtful whether Russia is anxious to re-open the Dardenelles for the present; for if this is done it must be for all nations, and Russia is not likely to desire that while her fleet is so weak. Besides, other treaties in addition to the treaty of Berlin, would be involved.

The only point in her previous stand Great Britain is continuing to insist upon apparently is that no modifications of a treaty can be permitted without the consent of all parties to that treaty, and at her proposal the powers have instructed their ambassadors at Constantinople to re-affirm this principle. What end can be served by this is not stated by the Foreign Office, but it can hardly be expected that either Bulgaria or Austria-Hungary will consent to restore the legal status in Bulgaria and Bosnia and Herzegovina before the questions of independence and annexation are considered, as the powers have decided must be done with respect to the Island of Crete."

Berlin, Oct. 13.—The Lokal Anzeiger publishes a despatch from Belgrade saying that Servian customs officials on the frontier have taken forcible possession of a Bulgarian custom house and that the people of Belgrade have burned another Austrian flag on the public square.

Belgrade, Servia, Oct. 13.—It is said in political circles that Great Britain and France have promised Servia their moral support if she maintains a peaceful course, and have suggested also that Servia might be given the Sanjak of Novipazar, with Turkey's consent.

Prince Peter of Montenegro, son of the reigning Prince Nicholas I., has telegraphed to Crown Prince George of Servia, saying:

"I am delighted at the spirited and very practical words you yesterday spoke to an equally enthusiastic gathering of our dear brethren. I cordially embrace you, dear cousin, and pray God we soon may meet on the crimson field."

Vienna, Oct. 13.—The inflammatory speeches of Crown Prince George of Servia, who is inciting the people to war, while his father, King Peter, has observed an attitude of caution, causes considerable uneasiness in official circles in Belgrade, according to despatches received here. There is less fear of a war than of a dynastic crisis and an attempt to place the crown prince on the throne.

The Servian Premier has tried vainly to suppress the crown prince, for it is feared that he may lead bands of volunteers against Bosnia, or do something equally rash.

Gompers Latest.

Washington, Oct. 13.—"In performing a solemn duty at this time in support of a political party, labor does not become partisan to a political party, but partisan to a principle," declares President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor in a circular issued yesterday regarding labor's attitude in the campaign.

The circular is addressed to "men of labor, lovers of human liberty."

Dreyfus Hits Back.

Paris, Oct. 13.—Major Dreyfus has forced The Patrie, under threat of prosecution, to print his answers to the charges which The Patrie and other French papers have made against him in a campaign which they have been carrying on in connection with the decision of the court of cessation.

Balloon Endurance Contest.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—Forty balloons got away yesterday afternoon without incident in an endurance contest. There was one British entrance, the remainder being German.

The balloons streamed in a long line northwards. The pilots have agreed to descend if the North Sea is sighted.

Killed While Hunting.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—A 16-year-old boy named William Burke was killed by the accidental discharge of a rifle in the woods near Kingsmere Sunday afternoon. He was hunting with two small companions at the time.

Butchers.

There was a good, strong market for the best finished butchers, which are scarce these days. One load of choice picked butchers' heifers were sold by picked butchers' heifers was sold by Dunn & Levack at $5 per cwt., which weighed 1200 lbs. each, but they were exceptionally good, as cattle are coming now. Picked lots sold at $4.75 to $4.85; loads of good, $4.40 to $4.70; medium, $4.15 to $4.30; common, $3.75 to $4; cows, $2.50 to $3.75; canners, $1 to $2.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. & W. Murby were on the market, as well as several others, who were looking for distillery cattle. The Messrs. Murby sold one load of good, 1100-lb. steers at $3.85, and they quote feeders, 1000 to 1100 lbs. each, at $3.60 to $3.85; feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs. each, at $3.25 to $3.65; good stockers at $3 per cwt.; common stockers, $2.25 to $2.50; distillery bulls, $2.50 to $2.75.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—(Special.)—At the Central Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 10 were 2767 cattle, 2335 sheep and lambs, 2550 hogs and 382 calves, while the supply this morning was 1700 cattle, 1250 sheep and lambs, 1300 hogs and 250 calves. A weaker feeling developed in the market for cattle this morning and prices declined ¼c per pound for all grades. This was due to the fact that the offerings were much larger than a week ago, and, as they consisted principally of small stock of lightweights, the demand was only fairly good for such, but there was a good enquiry for good to choice heavy cattle, which were scarce. The cause of the increased receipts is said to be due to the high prices ruling for feed and the scarcity of hay in some sections of the country, which are forcing farmers to sell their surplus stock before the winter sets in. Cables from Liverpool on Saturday stated that trade in cattle was slow, but noted a firmer feeling in the market at an advance in prices of ¼c to ⅜c per pound, as compared with those of a week ago, which tended to increase the demand from local exporters; but, as suitable stock was scarce, the volume of trade in this direction was small. Local butchers paid 4½c to 4⅝c for choice beeves, 4c to 4¼c for good, 3½c to 3⅝c for fair, 2⅜c to 3¼c for common, and 2c to 2½c for inferior, per pound. There was no further change in the condition of the market for lambs since this day week. The supply was much larger, but, as the demand from local buyers was good, an active trade was done, and prices were maintained, with sales of choice lots at 5c to 5¼c, and good at 4½c to 4⅝c per lb. There was no improvement in the demand for sheep for export account, owing to the continued low prices that are being realized for them in all the foreign markets, consequently trade was slow; but in spite of this fact values ruled about steady, and sales of choice lots for local account were made at 3⅝c, and culls at 3¼c to 3½c per lb. A fair trade was done in calves, and prices show no change. Sales of stall-fed stock were made at 2½c to 4½c per lb., live weight. Owing to increased receipts of hogs and lower cable advices from Liverpool for Canadian bacon, a weaker feeling has prevailed in the market, and prices are 25c per 100 lbs. lower than a week ago. The demand at this reduction was good from local buyers, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $6.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

The exports of live stock for the month of September were 15,796 cattle, 2425 sheep, making a total for the season of 68,418 cattle and 7102 sheep, as compared with 71,981 cattle and 4365 sheep for the same period in 1907.

MURDER TRIAL STARTS

Evidence All Taken in Young Hearing at North Bay.

Three Construction Camp Men Are Arraigned For Killing Comrade—Dead Man Warned to Leave Wright Alone—Cook Says He Saw Wright Thrust Knife Into Victim—Dying Statement Cast.

North Bay, Oct. 14.—The trial of Thomas Wright, James Quinn and Michael Morris, for the murder of Fritz L. Young at Iroquois Falls, on the G.T.P. construction, May 30, is creating intense interest, the courthouse being crowded. The case for the prosecution was closed by Prosecutor Groswicke early yesterday afternoon, and T. W. McGarry, attorney for Quinn, who swore that Wright displayed a knife and threatened to use it on Young if the latter did not leave him alone. This happened at the camp fire before the tragedy and after Young and Wright had quarreled in the dining tent. Witness begged Wright not to use the knife, but to fight it out with [illegible]. Wright returned to the [illegible] tent and the fight ensued. M[illegible] ran into the tent, followed by witness and both attacked Young, while Wright stepped back and then rushed forward, striking Young in the abdomen.

Interference by Jack Milligan caused a cessation of the battle, which was to be renewed outside, but at the door Young said, "I'm knifed," and lifting his shirt, revealed a bad gash in the abdomen, from which the intestines protruded.

Witness then left the tent and saw Wright go to the river, throw something in and wash his hands. Wright then told witness that "none of them took notice to me giving it to him."

Quinn declared Wright was half drunk when the tragedy occurred. Next day Wright tried to induce Quinn and Morris to get out of the country, but they refused. During their incarceration in jail Quinn swore that Wright had asked him and Morris to stand by him and make one fight, treating them with ham and eggs secured from outside.

Eye-witnesses of the tragedy saw no weapon used, but Patrick Lynch, cook at the camp, swore that Wright struck Young in the abdomen, making a peculiar motion unlike a blow.

Wright's counsel, G. T. Bull, endeavored to introduce as evidence the murdered man's conversation with Cook Milligan on the trip to McDougall's Chutes after the tragedy, a dying declaration in which it is alleged the murdered man accused Quinn of stabbing him. This evidence was excluded, as it could not be proved that Young realized he was dying.

Prosecutor Groswicke pointed out to the jury the peculiar part of the case in that Quinn's evidence at the inquest made no mention of any admissions by Wright or having seen him throw anything into the river, followed by hand-washing.

Constable George Kielty of Matheson, however, testified that Quinn told him of Wright's threats when the prisoners were at Matheson after the inquest. All three were handcuffed to bedposts in the same room at the Hotel Abitibbi.

Justice Britton charged the jury this morning.

Convent Opened.

Wallaceburg, Ont., Oct. 14.—The ceremony in connection with the formal opening of the Ursuline Convent was celebrated here yesterday by His Grace, Archbishop McEvoy, D.D., of Toronto.

COUNTERFEITER CONFESSES.

Thomas N. Crozier, Held at Oakville, Admits Crime.

Oakville, Oct. 14.—Thomas N. Crozier of Toronto, charged with uttering counterfeit bills, has made a confession.

Further evidence bearing both on his case and that of his son, Milton Who Has Confessed to Counterfeting. Crozier, who is charged with him, had been found, and both were yesterday remanded a week, when they appeared here before Magistrate Shields. They will come up at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon next at Milton. The pair were photographed here before appearing in court.

In his confession, the older man told Inspector Parkinson of the Dominion Secret Service and Chief McCreary of Oakville that he had passed the bills in Oakville and had also passed others in Toronto and Buffalo.

THOMAS CROZIER.

He still, however, denies that he passed the two Farmers' Bank tens at the Toronto exhibition. In his confession he made yet other disclosures which the police refuse to make public.

It has come to light that a man known as "Scotty," confined in the Milton jail as a vagrant on the day when the Croziers were taken there after their first appearance in court, found a note scribbled on a sheet of paper obviously meant for the son. In this Crozier senior instructs him to say that he was given the bills at Guelph, and did not know that they were bogus.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR.

In Contractor Mayes Story of Bribery Date Was Misread.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 14.—In Contractor Mayes declaration as published there is an important typographical error. Mayes is made to say that his interview wth Hon. Dr. Pugsley respecting the $2,000 note paid to Pugsley was on Oct. 18, 1907. It should be Oct. 16, 1905, or at a time when Pugsley was not Minister of Public Works.

Mayes has written to Dr. Pugsley explaining that it was a typographical error in the copy.

The affidavit, however, has created greater consternation in this province than anything of a political nature in recent years. Dr. Pugsley's evening papers last night denounce Mayes as a blackmailer and liar, but The Globe, the other Liberal paper, calls upon the Minister to make Mayes prove or retract the statements made in the declaration.

Balloon Lost at Sea.

Berlin, Oct. 14.—A wireless message received yesterday from Arnold, the conductor of the St. Louis balloon in the Gordon-Bennett race, says "Lost everything in the North Sea last night."

The balloonists were picked up by a fishing schooner. The balloon left Berlin on Sunday. Several others have landed close to the sea.

Sent Up For Trial.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—Michele Caluori, the Italian lad who in a drunken frenzy on Sunday night killed his father and mother, was yesterday sent up for trial, being held criminally responsible.

The murderer claims to be only 15 years of age, and asserts that he was so drunk he scarcely knew what he was doing.

Ralls Committed.

Cobourg, Oct. 14.—Richard L. Ralls, the postmaster at Fennella, in the township of Haldimand, who was arrested last week for neglecting to deliver letters, was brought before Magistrate Henry F. Holland yesterday morning. He was committed for trial in the December sessions.

Comfort and independence abide with those who can postpone their desires.—Success Magazine.

The Platform Emphasized.

Mr. Borden Reiterates Planks at Cornwall Meeting.

Government Has Organized System of Obstruction Ever Since 1899, Despite Which Squandering of Millions Had Been Brought to Light—Watchword If Elected, Says the Leader, Will Be "Restitution."

Cornwall, Oct. 14.—Three thousand people overflowed the old Victoria rink here last night and many hundreds were unable to get within the doors to hear R. L. Borden.

Every paragraph of the Halifax platform was gone over. Mr. Borden emphasized the plank in favor of separating the state-owned railways from party influence, comparing the Intercolonial Railway with the T. & N.O. road, which he said, was managed by a commission in the interests of the people. He also cited as proof of this that the T. & N.O. commission was absolutely unpopular with every member of Parliament of the constituencies through which the road passed.

Repeating his evidences of graft, Mr. Borden charged Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Government with having organized since 1899 down to the present time a thorough system of obstruction, adding that no man could realize the odds against which the Conservatives in Parliament had to fight in the past ten years. It was an astonishing thing that so much had been brought to light, yet it had been established that the people's money to the extent of millions had been squandered.

Touching Sir Wilfrid's candidature in Ottawa, he said the man who ought to be withdrawn was Sir Wilfrid, "the man who has violated his trust by handing over the public domain to such men as Fraser." When the Conservatives attained power they would have only one watchword, and it would be "Restitution."

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

An earthquake has been recorded in Utah.

The U. S. National Suffrage Association is in session in Buffalo.

The inquest into the recent wreck at Brantford has been postponed to Oct. 2.

The Canadian Club of Boston banquetted Ambassador Bryce, with 1,500 present.

The Midland Prince punctured the forward compartment in the Neebish Channel on Monday.

Bruce Wilson, Y.M.C.A. secretary at Brantford, has accepted a similar position at New Rochelle, N.Y.

Lyman C. Mann of Chicago, accused of murdering Mrs. F. G. Thompson, is released on $25,000 bonds.

Commander Spain, Dominion wreck commissioner, has left for Winnipeg to deliver judgment in the disaster to the steamer Pioneer.

Foster George has been arrested in St. Louis and $25,000 in stolen jewelry recovered. He was betrayed by a woman to whom he refused money.

Two of the principals (man and woman) accused in the "white slave" cases at Chicago have jumped their bail of $25,000 and escaped to France. There are thirty indictments against them.

The Servians troops now under arms, including the reserves recently called out, reach a total of 120,000 men. They will be kept to the colors for another month, pending a settlement of the situation.

Town Half Burned.

Stettler, Alta., Oct. 14.—Fully one-half of the business portion of the town was burned yesterday morning and Leslie Mellers lost his life.

Fire broke out in Beck's bowling alley and had made great headway before discovered.

Leslie Miller, who slept over Riggs & Whyte's store, was suffocated in bed. The body will be sent to Grand Valley, Ont., by the Oddfellows.

Taft Train In Accident.

Sterling, Ohio, Oct. 14.—The first casualty to the Taft special in all its travels occurred at 10.20 yesterday morning as the train pulled into a siding at this place. The front truck of the Presidential candidate's car and the rear truck of a Pullman just ahead of it left the tracks.

The cause of the accident was ascribed to the spreading of the rails.

1,000 Farms For Sale.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—A list of 1,000 farms for sale in Ontario is being prepared by the Bureau of Immigration. It is for use in Great Britain, where it will be circulated among the class of small tenant farmers and renters who desire to emigrate and own their own land. It is believed that many valuable settlers will be obtained by this means.

Aims to Be High Flyer.

Paris, Oct. 14.—Wilbur Wright, the aviator, has told Lazare Weiller, head of the syndicate that has purchased the French rights to the Wright Bros. machine that he will attempt some flights for height. There is no reason, he is reported to have said, why he should not go up to a height of 3,000 feet.

Commissioners at Convention.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Chairman Leitch, vice-chairman Ingram and H. M. Rittson, members, and Secretary Small of the Ontario Railway Board, are attending the street railway convention at Atlantic City. They will visit Pittsburg subsequenly for the test of street car fenders to be made there.

Twenty-Two Koreans Killed.

Seoul, Oct. 14.—It has just been learned that twenty-two members of the "Ilchinhol," an organization of Koreans favorable to Japan, were killed by Japanese gendarmes at Chloado a few days ago. It is said the victims were mistaken for a band of insurgents.

Robbed; Suicides.

New York, Oct. 14.—Back in the ghostly dimness of the big oven room of a bakery he was to open yesterday at 27 First avenue, as a branch of the east side shop, where he had baked Jewish cakes for twelve years, David L. Marcus, 54 years of age, was found early yesterday, a rubber tube from a gas jet in his mouth, dead. At his side, in his ancient Hebrew script, was a note, "there were three masked men who robbed me of $960. They took it from my pockets. There were six of them in all; they were Italians. Marcus."

His misfortune is believed to have caused his suicide.

Enters British Cabinet.

London, Oct. 14.—Lord Fitzmaurice, Parliamentary Secretary of the Foreign Office, has been given a seat in the Cabinet as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, vice Viscount Wolverhampton of Wolverhampton, who probably will be appointed Lord President of the Council, vice the Earl of Crewe, or Lord Privy Seal, in sucession to the Marquis of Ripon, who resigned last week on account of advanced age. Lord Fitzmaurice will continue to represent the Foreign Office in the House of Lords.

A Daring Burglas.

New York, Oct. 14.—Representing himself to be a real estate agent, a well-dressed young man gained access to the home of Summerfield McLean, a wealthy Brooklyn publisher, yesterday, and while Miss Beatrice Masten, a younger sister of Mrs. McLean, was showing the man over the premises he overpowered her, bound her arms and legs with wire, tied a gag over her mouth and got away with about $1,000 worth of jewelry and valuables.

Ferry-Boats Collide In Fog.

Detroit, Oct. 14.—Several girls were slightly injured by flying glass from broken windows, and 100 more had a narrow escape from death, when the ferry steamer Ariel, running between Walkerville, Ont., and Detroit, collided in a fog yesterday with a small freighter. There were about 100 girl employes of local factories aboard the ferry.

Burglars Used Hand-Car.

Halifax, Oct. 14.—About midnight Monday night the D.A.R. station at Berwick was broken into, the safe carried out and placed on a hand-car, and taken down the track about a mile, where it was blown open and the contents taken.

Three men were seen loitering around the station early in the evening.

Drop Political Appointees.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—The report of the board of conciliation which dealt with the difficulties between the I.C.R. and its freight clerks has been accepted by the I.C.R. management. The report recommended a rearrangement of the staff and the dropping of a number of clerks who were appointed through political influence.

'Quake Recorded.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—The seismograph at the Dominion Observatory recorded a severe earthquake shock just after midnight and lasting 2 1-2 hours. The seat of the shock is estimated to be 2,300 miles away.

Laurier Speaks at La Prairie.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed a large meeting at La Prairie yesterday, while Hon. Sydney Fisher spoke at Westmouth. Both Ministers were received with enthusiasm.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

Battle of Hastings, 1066.
Archbishop Bond appointed Primate of all Canada, 1904.
Josh Billings died 1885.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Cheer up. Even the most retiring citizen may be an alderman if the ward system comes back again.

* * *

Hurry up with the winter. We'd rather shovel snow than fight flies.

* * *

Rumor says that there may be three Mayoralty candidates in the field next January, and it is hinted that, in case there are three, there will certainly be four.

* * *

What's come over the ambitious gentlemen, that they all want to be Mayor at once.

Drillshed will be officially opened in January, it is said, with a grand promenade concert. Whether Sir Fred. Borden, minister of Militia, will be here to do the cakewalk depends greatly on circumstances and what happens on the 26th of this month.

* * *

"What the U. S. people want is the doer," says the Buffalo News. The Laurier crowd ought to suit the U. S. people. They've been doing everybody.

* * *

A Boston man died while struggling with a collar button. What a mortality there would be if every man who has trouble of that kind were to follow his example!

* * *

New Yorkers appropriated $1500 for rubber boots for its firemen. Now the money is gone and they can only find one $4 pair of boots. There's a case it would take the editor of the Globe to explain.

* * *

Japan wants fifty million cats at once. She ought to be able to get about half of them in West Belleville.

The following, from the editorial columns of the Buffalo News, shows how the policy of the Laurier Government is looked at by a disinterested neighbor:

"A correspondent writes of the ruined state of the woolen industry of Canada owing to the Liberal policy of letting foreign goods come in at greatly reduced rates of duty. The News has often mentioned that case but it delights the free trader to see domestic industry depressed for the benefit of outsiders."

A western paper says that Laurier resembles the late P. T. Barnum because he loves to humbug people. The resemblances ceases there! Barnum fooled the people ALL the time. Laurier's limit has been reached.

* * *

A former resident of this city, now in the States, writes to us as follows: "I naturally suppose all interest is centred in your coming elections as we are in ours, and you certainly need a change as bad as we need to keep "Teddy's policies in motion."

* * *

Speaking in Picton, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth said he thought it was time for a change. No doubt of it.

* * *

The output of Scotch whiskey decreased by 2,000,000 gallons. Judging by that, it is not hard to cipher out a victory for temperance.

* * *

Fruit crop report says plums are plentiful. There will, however, be fewer for the Grits after the 26th.

* * *

If "Slippery Bill" Pugsley is so well up in the rake-off art as they say he is, why not get him to come here and try it on the dead leaves which ornament many boulevards?

* * *

The belt goes to Hamilton. In that city a voter told a canvasser that he was going to vote for Laurier this time, because he thought he'd been trying to get into office long enough. Kingston couldn't beat that.

* * *

"The "Three Little Maids" company has disbanded. The small maids were short of small change.

* * *

The best thing Laurier can do is to yank Pugsley out of the field and run himself.

* * *

It looks as though the hunter who was shot at in mistake for a moose had been taking too many horns. There's a timely warning in the incident.

* * *

In 1904 Grit orators replied to arguments by saying "Feel in your pockets: then vote against Laurier if you can." They are not saying that now, but the same rule will work, just the same, Workingmen who feel in their pockets — and find nothing there — will vote against Laurier, and that's the chief reason why Mr. Borden will be the next premier. Grit extravagance has brought hard times; Conservative level-headedness will restore prosperity. The history of Canada shows that it always worked out in that way.

A telegram in the Toronto News of the 13th inst. says: George Boulter, the local fishery overseer, yesterday caught prominent fishermen hauling in seine nets near Point Ann in Big Bay. Mr. Boulter and the owners of the fishing resort at Point Ann waited in a motor boat all night, and made the seizure as the nets were nearly all pulled in. The seine is almost two miles long, and is valued at $400. This is the case to which The Intelligencer called attention the other day.

Editors and lawyers in Calgary are polite to each other. The "Eye Opener" and McGillicuddy slander case was before the Court on the 12th inst., when the "Eye Opener" lawyer referred to the "patriarchal appearance" of Mc., whose retort was "Better look like a patriarch than a swill barrel." That was naughty of you, Brother Dan.

In the Saskatchewan Valley Land Deal, the Grit grafter secured the land for $250,000, and sold immediately after for $2,000,000. Who wouldn't be a relative and supporter of Sifton?

The Grits have been circulating a report that Mr. Porter has retired from the contest in West Hastings. The wish, no doubt, is father to the thought. Retired! Not a bit of it. On the night of the 26th Toronto will hear of his election by 1000 or 1500 majority.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley, on being shown the statements made by Mr. Contractor Mayes in his affadavit re the dredging rake-off, replied "He's a liar." Does Mr. Pugsley suppose for a moment that anyone would doubt that's what he would say?

Mayes, the contractor who made the affadavit, has written a letter to Mr. Pugsley, stating that the date of the transaction was a "typographical error," that the note given was in 1905, not in 1907, consequently Pugsley was not Minister of Public Works when he insinuated the money out of Mayes. While not quite so bad, how far is he relieved from crime in telling Mayes, when asking for the money that it would be well for him to have a friend in Ottawa, when dealing with the Government?

Mr. Pugsley now says the note given by Mayes was on account of professional services rendered. This is the same story told and excuse given by Mr. Pugsley when his attention was called to his drafts upon the New Brunswick Treasury. "Oh!" he answered "The Government is owing me for professional and other services. Yet he forked over some $6000. It's lucky to be a lawyer.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will soon be all right again. What's Coming?

The Hon. Mr. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, told the people the other day that there was a "Tory plot hatching, which was to be sprung upon the electors when it would be too late to reply to it."

What is it, Mr. Graham? Tell us all about it; you seem to know, for you say it is in type in an office in Toronto. Who told you it was in type? If you know, why not expose it at once?

Here is Graham's charge: "I charge the leaders of the present Conservative campaign with having engaged and are paying a clever journalist, not a Canadian, to introduce certain United States campaign methods into Canada, and under an arrangement with them he has prepared copy for a booklet that is to contain nefarious charges concerning the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, as well as some of the men connected with it.

"That copy has been put in type, it is now standing in the City of Toronto ready for printing, the proofs have been submitted to and read by certain Conservative leaders, approved of by them on behalf of the party."

If the contents of the forthcoming 'booklet" are not true, what has our Lott Sunday interviewer to fear? Come, old fellow, out with it!

Now that the Hon. George is at detective work, let us suggest that he makes special inquiry in Brockville as to where the bogus ballots were printed for use at a late bye-election in Brockville.

• • •

On the other hand Mr. Foster informed the assembled crowd in Toronto that a villainous pamphlet was soon to be issued by the Liberals. So bad is it that when taken to a certain printing office in Toronto the printer declined to touch it, saying he would not print it for $500, but it is coming, notwithstanding.

It looks like lively times ahead.

Libel Suits Galore

The vindictive and personal character of the present election contest is resulting in a number of libel suits and criminal prosecutions for slander.

McGillicuddy, editor of the Calgary News, is under arrest for libelling the editor and publisher of the Calgary "Eye Opener." "Mc" attempted to "open the eyes" of its Calgary readers, and found himself in the clutches of the jailor.

Mr. H. S Clements, Conservative candidate in Kent, has filed information charging Dr. Oliver Merlin with having circulated statements to the effect that he (Mr. Clements) was engaged in a poker game in a place raided by the police, and that $80 on the table at the time was taken by Mr. Clements, who kept the money.

• • •

The Hon. George E. Foster has entered and commenced an action for libel against Mr. J. W. Levesque, M. P.P., of Laval, for alleged statements made by Mr. Levesque regarding Mr. Foster's connection with the Foresters. One thing is certain, whoever loses the lawyers will gain.

Campaign Funds.

Mr. T. W. McGarry, M.P.P. for South Renfrew, at a meeting held in North Lanark, made the following serious statement:

"I am reliably informed that every contractor who is engaged in construction work on the National Transcontinental Railway has been called on to contribute, and contribute largely, to the campaign funds of the Liberal party. One of the largest contractors, who lives in South Renfrew, and whose contract I am told amounts to fifteen millions of dollars, has been called on to contribute 3 per cent. of that amount, or $450,000, to the campaign funds. But he holds in his pocket a promise that he will get his money back in some other way."

Not at all unlikely. It is just what they have done in the past, and will do again.

Bribery! Bribery!

Under any other circumstances the news from St. John, N.B, would be startling. Read the statement made by the Premier of New Brunswick on the 12th inst. Those who have followed events in that province since the change of Government expected some such development. The half is not yet told.

The "Y's" Work.

The "Y" executive met at the home of the President, Mrs. J. Williams, on Oct. 7th, to complete the work for the old year, appoint Superintendents, Vice-Presidents, etc., also to discuss the plans for the new year. It was thought advisable to hold our meetings on the second and fourth Tuesdays at 4 p.m., at the home of the President, also to have the millinery and candy tables at the Rummage Sale.

The following will give your readers an idea of the work done this past year:

Total receipts, $200.77.

This was raised by the Rummage Sale, two excursions, ices and collections. Some of our friends donated money and clothing to help the poor last winter; $27.50 was expended for flowers, fruit, etc., for the sick, bereaved and needy; $6.50 sent to Union Missionary Fund and White Cross work; $21 to Y.M.C.A.; 168 bouquets and potted plants with texts on them; 72 quarts of milk; 5 dozen eggs; 3 1-2 dozen oranges; 14 loaves bread; $2 worth of meat; a turkey to Home for Christmas, also gifts; 12 families were helped with clothing, milk, coal or whatever was most needed.

Too much praise cannot be given the Flower Mission helpers. They have visited the Hospital each week, and carried flowers to the sick and bereaved. The occupants of the Home for the Friendless were not forgotten. Five parlor meetings were held, with an average attendance of 78. Refreshments were served at each and papers or debates on cigarette evil, local option, timber camp work, object of the "Y's", etc., read.

A committee went to the Teachers' Convention and asked that scientific temperance be taught and examinations given by all the teachers, and that suitable prizes be given. We also asked that the teachers would do all in their power to abolish the use of cigarettes.

A Loyal Temperance Legion was started at the Mission with a pledged membership of 60. Average attendance, 36.

Pledge cards and pin badges are provided the members. During the summer a picnic was held, where sandwiches, cake, ice cream, candy, etc., were served and much enjoyed by the L.T.L., as was an evening given by them earlier in the season. In December Miss Jamieson, the "Y" evangelist for New York state, gave several addresses on total abstinence and Christian work. In the spring Mr. Beale spoke to our school boys on Personal Purity. He is the White Cross missionary for the Provincial Union. Those who were privileged to hear him were well pleased with the way in which he handled this subject. In a meeting of the "Y's" and "W's" at Bridge St. he tried to impress on the mothers the necessity of teaching their boys and girls that their bodies were temples for their souls, and that they should be taught intelligent purity as well as honesty and truthfulness, which are now taught by the mothers, and not left for them to get their knowledge "any old way."

We send magazines, papers and books to the timber camps, and any one having these or Surprise soap coupons to give us we will gladly send them on their mission. The coupons off Surprise soap last year supported the Travellers' Aid, Miss Cowan, at the Union Station, Toronto, who aided 1500 persons.

We are trying in our weak way to work for the Master and ask the cooperation of our temperance people in carrying out the object of this society, which is to meet together for prayer and conference, to educate public sentiment to the standard of total abstinence, to train the young and to enter into any Christian work to which the Lord may call.

A WHITE RIBBONER.

THE BATTLE FOR HEALTH

How to keep well.

This is the problem Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food has helped many thousands of people to solve by reason of their extraordinary blood forming and system building qualities.

The only sure foundation for health is rich, red blood and a vigorous nervous system.

Both of these result from the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food. Even though you know of this great restorative as a cure for nervous exhaustion, prostration and paralysis, you may have overlooked it as a tonic to build up the system when it gets run down and you feel weak and miserable.

Mr. James W. Weaver, Pt. Dalhousie, Ont., writes: "For three years I never knew what a full hour's sleep meant. Heart pains and headaches almost drove me wild. Eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food have entirely cured me."

The portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on every box. 50 cents, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Death at Tweed.

After a short illness, Mrs. James Finley passed away at her home in Tweed, aged 73 years. Deceased, whose maiden name was Mary Ann Prentice had resided all her life in Hungerford and Tweed, and was widely known and respected. She is survived by her husband, three sons and four daughters. James and Herbert of Montreal, William, of Regina, Mrs. Elliott of Hungerford, Mrs. Murphy of Montreal, Mrs. Amey of Toronto, and Mrs. McDonald, of Tweed.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"BABES IN TOYLAND."

The Olean "Times" has the following to say of "Babes in Toyland" Co., which appears at the Carman tonight: "In the line of musical extravaganzas, Olean was never favored with anything better than "Babes in Toyland," which was presented by an excellent company at the opera house last evening. It is of that pleasing variety that makes one forget the cares and worries of daily life, and old and young enter into the spirit if the piece, the former renewing their acquaintance with the nursery characters of childhood, and the two hours or more spent with Contrary Mary, Tom the Piper's Son, Jack and Jill, Bo Peep Red Riding Hood, Little Boy Blue, Simple Simon, Tommy Tucker, Little Miss Muffett and the rest of the legend folks, pass quickly and pleasantly. Eddie Redway as "Alan" made a very decided hit, as did Anna Miller as "Jane," and the song "Beatrice Barefacts," by Vera Stanley and Joe Kearney called forth repeated encores. The musical numbers are all good, and they are plentifully sprinkled throughout the play. "I Can't do that Sum," by Jane and the Piper children, was another that caught the public fancy. For an opening attraction, Manager Havens certainly gave the people a good one, and the large audience left the house, well satisfied.

Prices 25, 50c, 75, $1, and $1.50.

Tenth Anniversary of His Grace Arch-Bishop Gauthier.

Kingston Freeman: Sunday next, the 18th inst., will be the tenth anniversary of the Episcopal consecration of His Grace the Most Reverend Archbishop Gauthier. We feel sure that we are expressing the heartfelt wishes of every Catholic in the Archdiocese when we convey to His Grace the expression of our sincere congratulations and loyal homage on the approach of so welcome an event. The ten years just passed of His Grace's administration have indeed been most fruitful in material and spiritual progress. Our magnificent Cathedral has been exteriorly beautified by the erection of those substantial and superbly ornamental buttresses, while its interior has been enriched by the installation of a splendid new organ, universally conceded to be one of the finest church instruments in the Dominion. Our schools have been enlarged and equipped, and our college and convent are every year making substantial progress. So that to-day it may be truly said that with our excellent provision for primary and secondary education we have the most complete Catholic educational system in this province.

Through His Grace's suggestion and encouragement churches, presbyteries and schools have been built in every quarter of the diocese. It is, however, in the daily and less conspicuous acts of his episcopal duty that His Grace has endeared himself to the hearts of our Catholic people. In this metropolitan city where His Grace resides, we have better opportunities, perhaps, than others have, to see the real beauty and loveliness of His Grace's character. His unaffected dignity, his edifying piety, his generous charity, his paternal solicitude for his people's welfare, his kindly sympathy for the poor and afflicted won, from the first days of his sojourn amongst us, our respect, admiration, reverence and love, and these sentiments have grown in strength and intensity, day by day, throughout the years of His Grace's episcopacy.

By our separated brethren, we are proud to say, His Grace is held in the most profound esteem. His broad Catholic spirit, his charm of manner, his urbane condescension, his interest in all that makes for the social and moral improvement of our city, are deeply appreciated by our non-Catholic fellow-citizens.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS.

Died in Consecon.

Mrs. John Elmer, of Consecon, died on Monday night, after a lengthy illness, from a cancer. Deceased, who was about 55 years of age, was a sister of Mrs. Hugh Collins, of this city, and was a lady who was highly respected. A husband and family survives.

TWEED.

Mr. James Finley, jr., of Lachine, P.Q., was here this week, attending the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Jas. Finley, sr.

Some thirty-five faithful Grits turned out to the East Hastings convention, held in the opera hall here on Friday last. The atmosphere was rather chilly.

Reopening services were held in the Methodist church on Sunday. The whole interior has been renovated.

W. R. Prentice, of Foxboro, attended the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. Jas. Finley, which took place on Thursday last.

Thos. McCann is erecting a large addition to his store on Victoria street.

Farm work is being greatly retarded by reason of the dry weather. Water is also becoming scarce in many places.

VICTORIA.

Miss Blanche Pope of Plainfield, was the guest of Miss Lulu Reid last week.

Miss Alma Sagar represented the Victoria E. L. as delegate to the convention at Northport on Wednesday last.

Miss Alberta Adams attended the convention at Northport last week.

Mrs. Archie Alyea died very suddenly at her home on Thursday. The funeral took place on Saturday.

Miss Azella Calnan returned home from Rochester, where she has been spending a week or so.

The tea meeting at Albury on Tuesday evening of last week, was in every respect a great success. A number from Victoria attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart of Belleville, with Mr. and Mrs. A. Stewart of Rednerville, were visiting at Mr. J. F. Weese's on Sunday last.

Address And Presentation.

Immediately after the prayer meeting at West Huntingdon Presbyterian church, a surprise was in store for Rev. Mr. Annesley, the pastor, when the members and friends of St. Andrew's, through Miss Post, read and presented an address containing the congregation's appreciation of his earnestness and zeal in the work while with them, also giving expression to their indebtedness to him for his many words of encouragement and feeling sorry that he could not remain longer with them. Accompanying the address, was a handsome sealed package of money, which Mr. Annesley was asked to accept as a token of their gratitude for his many and faithful services rendered. Mr. Annesley suitably replied, thanking them for their very great and quite unexpected kindness, which he thought was entirely unmerited by him.

WATCH YOUR TONGUE.

IF FURRED AND COATED, IT'S A LOOKING GLASS STOMACH WARNING.

When it is the morning after the night before, you do not have to look at your tongue to know that your stomach is upset, the head is aching, no appetite, nerves on edge with all the sunshine of life clouded.

The real time to watch the tongue is all of the time. If it is coated with a white fur, or possibly with dark trimmings, even though the stomach does not tell you by the acute pains of indigestion that it needs help, yet the coating shows that you are getting into a bad way and that there is need of Mi-o-na.

Mi-o-na is so positive, so sure, so reliable in its curative action upon the stomach that J. S. McKeown, the local agent, gives a guarantee of satisfaction with every 50 cent box or money back.

Bring your visiting card plate to The Intelligencer office. We will do your engraving promptly, as cheap as elsewhere, guaranteeing first-class workmanship.

GREAT CLEARING SALE OF WALLPAPER

AT

Scantlebury's

We have recently purchased at 37c on the dollar, the entire stock of Mr. John Cornelius. The goods have been brought to our warerooms and put in order and are now on sale at less than one half their value.

The stock has been so minutely arranged that small quantities can be handled without any difficulty of shortages. This is to say, we know what we have of everything and these small quantities in many cases will be cleared out at one quarter their value. The Cornelius stock must all be closed out before the end of the year, as we cannot bother with small quantities in the regular working season and the advantage will be to the purchaser.

Never before such an opportunity of buying wall paper at such prices and this, too, right in the face of the advance of wall-paper prices during the past three months of 25 per cent. Wall paper will be higher in price in the future, but during this sale you will have the great advantage of bargain prices such at you will not recall or repeat.

With this stock of wallpaper we have 10.000 feet of room moulding purchased in the same stock, which will be sold at like bargains to those of wall paper.

Remember the Place of Sale

Trusses

Our success in fitting Trusses is phenomenal. Yet it is not to be wondered at. For 48 years, we have studied, tested, examined, invented. To-day, we guarantee to fit every ruptured person with a truss, that is not only easy and comfortable, but also a truss that will retain the rupture.

Our ability to help the afflicted, is limitless. Our Artificial Limbs enable those—who have lost one or both legs—to walk, ride bicycle, and even skate. Other helps for Spinal Curvature, Ununited Fractures, and other deformities, are made to order. If you are afflicted in any way, write us for the appliance to help you.

NERVOUS DEBILITY Thousands of young and middle aged men are annually swept to a premature grave through EARLY INDISCRETIONS, EXCESSES AND BLOOD DISEASES. If you have any of the following symptoms consult us before it is too late. Are you nervous and weak, despondent and gloomy, specks before the eyes, with dark circles under them, weak back, kidneys irritable, palpitation of the heart, bashful, dreams and losses, sediment in urine, pimples on the face, eyes sunken, hollow cheeks careworn expression, poor memory, lifeless, distrustful, lack energy and strength, tired mornings, restless nights, changeable moods, weak manhood, premature decay, bone pains, hair loose, sore throat etc.

BLOOD POISONS Blood Poisons are the most prevalent and most serious diseases. They sap the very life blood of the victim, and unless entirely eradicated from the system may affect the future generation. Beware of Mercury. It only suppresses the symptoms—OUR NEW METHOD cures them.

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT alone can cure you, and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches, and ulcers disappear, the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency vanish, the eye becomes bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and vital systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. Dont let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars. We will cure you or no pay.

THE FLAG GOES BY.

Hats off!
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums,
A flash of color beneath the sky—
Hats off!
The flag is passing by!

Blue and crimson and white it shines
Over the steel tipped ordered lines.
Hats off!
The colors before us fly,
But more than the flag is passing by.

Sea fights and land fights, grim and great,
Fought to make and save the state;
Weary marches and sinking ships,
Cheers of victory on dying lips;

Days of plenty and years of peace;
March of a strong land's swift increase;
Equal justice, right and law;
Stately honor and reverend awe;

Sign of a nation great and strong
To ward her people from foreign wrong;
Pride and glory and honor—all
Live in the colors to stand or fall!

Hats off!
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums,
And loyal hearts are beating high—
Hats off!
The flag is passing by!

As evidence of the manner in which political heelers are fed at the public expense Mr. Smith, ex-M.P. for North Wentworth, stated at a meeting in Dundas that the Government had paid $900 for an engine, while he (Mr. Smith) paid but $600 for one of exactly the same kind. Why, he asked, should this be, except to fill the pocket of a grafter?

* * *

The Hon. Mr. Hanna put it well when he said: "The old saying, 'All roads lead to Rome,' should in Canada just now read, 'All scandal trails in the Department of the Interior lead to Sifton.' The misgovernment of the Yukon under Sifton was so gross as nearly to cause a rebellion there. It was he who engineered the Treadgold concessions, under which the working miners became virtually slaves to a monopoly. He also was responsible for the appointment of Commissioner Congdon, under whom the licensing of drinking dives, gambling hells and places of vice went to a length that would have disgraced the lowest dives in New York City. He was the author of a railway to the Yukon, which, if practicable at all, would have cost a hundred millions, and from which nothing but the patriotic action of the Conservative Senate saved us. If the scheme had gone on there was an enormous gold land grant to be handled by Siftonian favorites and mining privileges without end.

A SECRET DIVULGED.

Whereby a Hint Is Given to Wives and a Warning to Husbands.

"Oh, dear," sighed the pretty caller as she viewed her friend's new bonnet, fresh from the store, "I wish my husband would allow me to buy such a love of a bonnet!"

"He would, my dear, if you knew how to handle him," answered the lady of the house.

"No; it is a waste of words to try to talk with him," said the pretty caller, with another sigh. "I saw a dream of a bonnet downtown the other day, and the price was just what you say you gave for yours—$25. But when I mentioned the price my husband flew into a rage and declared that $10 was every cent that he would advance me to buy a bonnet with and if I couldn't make that do I would have to do without."

"Exactly," commented the lady of the house dryly. "You can't expect any other treatment when you approach your husband like that. My husband acts just the same way whenever I ask him for money. But this creature called 'man' is very easily handled if you go about it in the right way. Now, when I saw this bonnet downtown I made up my mind that I would be the happy possessor of it, so that night at the dinner table I began going into raptures over a bonnet that I had seen while shopping, the price of which was only $50, and then I added as an afterthought that I had quite made up my mind to buy it.

"'What!' roared my husband. 'Fifty dollars for a bonnet? I guess not! You'll have to put up with $25, and not a cent more do you get!'

"As that was exactly the amount that I wanted I am afraid that the tears I shed were somewhat forced. But I gained my point, and that was what I was after."—Detroit Free Press.

UNHAPPY MARRIAGES.

Secret of Success Lies In Holding One's Tongue.

"It is the little rift within the lute," sang Tennyson, "which by and by shall make the music mute." And it is the little quarrels, the disagreements allowed to multiply and prolong themselves, that end by spoiling married life altogether and make havoc and ruin of what began with such fair promise.

Some people seem to hold the opinion of an old English ballad, "The falling out of faithful hearts, renewing, is of love." They think that quarrels made up draw people closer together, but this is one of the greatest mistakes possible. Every quarrel makes it easier for the next to follow and harder for the breach to heal.

But after the first quarrel all that is at an end. There is an unexpressed feeling that there is nothing more to lose, and nothing can be more fatal to mutual respect and affection than this. The small barrier which has served to keep one's worst side in check has been thrown down, and after this the won't side has it all its own way.

A friend of mine was once about to marry a widower whose first marriage had turned out an unhappy one. Everybody knew that the cause had been the perpetual quarrels that went on between himself and his wife, and when my friend asked me to wish her joy I am afraid I did it in a half hearted kind of way. My friend noticed it, for she was very quick, and she rather took me aback by saying quietly:

"I see you don't think it very much a matter of congratulation. You are thinking of Harry's last attempt. But I mean mine to turn out very differently."

"How are you going to insure that?" I asked.

"Easily enough. Harry and his first wife were neither of them ill tempered. They only got into a confirmed habit of wrangling because neither would give in to the other. Now, I am going to try quite a different method. It takes two to make a quarrel. I am not going to be the second. If Harry finds I never respond he will soon give up his foolish habit of squabbling."

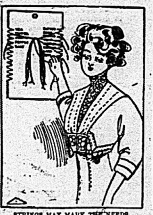
As she had prophesied, he soon began to find quarreling a poor amusement, and, having no one to argue with, he gradually got out of his argumentative ways. When I used to remark to his wise little wife on the success of her course of treatment she only smiled and said quietly:

"Ah, if people only knew what a secret of happiness lies in holding one's tongue!"

NOVEL KITCHEN REMINDER.

Ingenious Device Saves Time and Thought For Busy Housewives.

A Tennessee genius has invented a kitchen reminder that should earn him the thanks of busy housewives. Like many time saving devices, it is simpler than the system it supplants. A card or board is notched on two sides, and opposite each month is written the name of some household article or article of food, such as soap, starch, sugar, eggs, etc. A series of strings or rubber bands are then tied around the card, loosely enough that they may be moved into any notch desired. Instead of writing out a daily list for tradesmen the housewife needs simply to attach the string in the notches indicating the article required. The same results can be obtained by having a bundle of strings tied in a knot in the center, with their free ends long enough to be fastened in the slits on the edges of the card.



STRINGS MAY MARK THE NEEDS.

Names of Dances.

The position taken by the dancers gives the name to the "quadrille"—literal English for "a little square" in the French tongue. From the French we got also "country dance," which, as a matter of fact, has no reference to rural frolics. "Contredanse," which has reference to the position of the couples opposite each other, is readily corrupted into "country dance."

"The polka" is a Polish dance, the name being derived from the Bohemian word "pulka," meaning half, and refers to the half step which occurs in this measure.

The old time and stately "minuet" derives its name from the Latin minutes—small, applying to the short steps peculiar to this dance.

The "waltz" is German—waltzen, meaning to revolve—the circular motion of the couples easily explaining the connection. The "reel" is suggestively obvious. "Jig" is, of course, from the French gigue.

Obvious.

"The oak is my favorite tree," said she.
She paused, and he took the cue.
"If I have a favorite tree," said he,
"It is undoubtedly yew."
—Harper's Weekly.

TO "TOSS UP" A SALAD.

Hostess May Express Originality In the Arrangement of Salad Course.

A salad bears to a meal much more significance than merely a separate course, and the style of salad should be determined by the course it is to follow. To serve after a first course, possibly rich with sauces, the salad must be a crisp vegetable with a simple French dressing, and this is also applicable to roasts and the game course. This tends to aid the digestion of the rich food and prepare one's appetite for what is to come. Cucumbers or tomatoes are the preference with fish; escarole, celery, watercress or chicory with game; lettuce, celery or watercress with apple, pineapple or orange, and grape fruit is the choice for roasts. It does not necessarily follow that in serving a light salad with a fish course one cannot serve another salad during the meal. No salad, however, must be served after the one served with the game or roast.

"Tossing up" a salad might indicate to some that a salad could be thrown together hurriedly and carelessly; but, on the contrary, care and time must be expended on any salad to thoroughly mix and daintily garnish it. Potato requires turning over and over in the dressing, and this may be done early and set aside to absorb the dressing, while celery and apple salad should be served immediately after dressing it, as by long standing it wilts and becomes discolored.

The addition of garlic, particularly in potato salad, is very much liked by epicures, and half a clove of it crushed and rubbed around the edge of the bowl will be quite sufficient to give it flavor.

The serving of salad in individual portions has led to great originality in pleasing effects. Lettuce leaves and watercress with minced parsley are a firm standby, but other vegetables, particularly such as supply a strong color note, are also much used. White turnips in their natural state, if washed clean, show a beautiful surface of pearly tints merging into mauve and amethyst. Celery knobs show artistic lines of brown on white when vigorously scrubbed. Peppers are green, tomatoes scarlet, and apples range from pale green to lemon, from pink to ruby red. Scooped out so as to form hollow shells, any one of these serves as a holder for some tasty salad easily heaped within. Sprays of cress and parsley wreathe the outside of the salad cup thus constructed.

Among the various popular dressings for salad are found the favorite mayonnaise dressing, the always popular French dressing and the newer boiled or cream dressing. Heavy salads served with mayonnaise or with egg and cream dressing are much improved by a previous marinading with oil and vinegar or lemon juice before the final dressing.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

When cold sores appear, a bit of absorbent cotton which has been saturated with camphor spirits is very effective.

Hollow places under the eyes can be filled out by massage and the constant use of a good skin food. Much benefit will come from bathing the eyes every morning with cold salt water and by applying occasionally a compress of rosewater.

When powder does not adhere nicely to the face it is because the skin is too dry. Anoint the surface every night with a good skin food after having washed the face in warm water. This will get the skin in good condition. Before applying the powder to the face it is well to anoint it first with a little cream, wiping off the thickest before the powder is used.

A conspicuous feature of the face is the eyebrows, but these are rarely arched or even regular, yet nothing can be simpler than to rub them with vaseline twice a week, or, better, three times, taking care to smooth the hairs at each stroke in the way they should grow. This treatment continued faithfully for years will not only give desirable shape to the brows, but will create a good color.

There is a beauty specialist who assures her patients that there is nothing to compare with the pillow nap, as she calls it, for producing beauty. The sleeping out of doors fad in "down to zero" days and other "dares" to colds, which call forth remonstrances from old fashioned persons, will be thrown into the shade, the specialist says, by this new beauty sleep. She places three little rose leaf pillows, which she calls ear pillows, under a patient's head. Heaped on the couch "in such a way as to rest the nerves" are other pillows filled with various compounds. There are three large square pillows filled with pine needles loosely packed and several of clover top and lavender.

Mexican Proverbs.

He who never ventures will never cross the sea.
There's no gain without pain.
Flies cannot enter a closed mouth.
Behind the cross is the devil.
A cat in gloves will never catch rats.
To the hungry no bread is dry.
A book that is shut makes no scholar.
A good laundress washes the shirt first.
No evil will endure a hundred years.
When the river is passed, the saint is forgotten, says the Family Doctor.

Household Hints.

Discolored cups and dishes used for baking can be made as new by rubbing the brown stains with a flannel dipped in whiting.

If a short strip of kid from a glove is sewed to the center of a necktie the roughness of the leather will hold the ties in place against a polished collar.

I OWE MY CURE TO ZAM-BUK

HAD PILES FOR 13 YEARS!

PAIN SO BAD AT TIMES HE FAINTED

One of the best points about Zam-Buk is that it cures hronic cases of piles as well as those of more recent tanding. Captain A. W. Strachan, R.E., of St. Catharines, Ont.), a man who has served his country in India, hina, Japan and Egypt, says.

"Nobody has suffered greater agonies than I have through iles. For near 13 years this terrible scourge afflicted me and t times the pain was almost too much for me to bear—especially hile enduring the heat and fatigue of foreign duty.

"I think I tried almost every remedy known in India, China, Japan nd Egypt. While in India I was in the hospital for three weeks with leeding piles, and thought I would be compelled to give up the Service.

"I have had to fall out when on the march as I could not ndure the pain any longer. Once I was picked up on the field for ead—the pain from the piles was so great that I had fainted.

"An Army officer told me about Zam-Buk having cured a friend f his, so I decided to give it a trial. From the first annointing with his great herbal balm, I was relieved, but even after using one box I ardly dared to hope it would cure me permanently. I had got so uch relief from it, however, that I decided to persevere, and by the ime I had used several boxes, to my great joy I was completely cured.

"Zam-Buk is worth its weight in gold. It has cured me and given e now over six months of perfect ease—something which I have ot had for thirteen long years! I trust this statement of mine will ad other sufferers to try Zam-Buk and prove its great healing virtue."

What Zam-Buk is, and What it Cures

Zam-Buk is composed of the essence and extracts of healing erbs. It contains no animal fat or mineral poison. It never oes rancid like other ointments, never stains, never clogs he pores of the skin. It heals cold sores, eczema, chapped ands, ulcers, badly poisoned wounds, scalp sores, open ores due to blood poisoning, itch. It heals lacerations, ruises and all skin eruptions and diseases. All druggists nd stores sell at 50c a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., oronto, for price.

THE MYSTERY

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE
And SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

ful skies. The seals had thinned out considerably, but were now returning in vast numbers ready for their annual domestic arrangements.

Our Sundays we had mostly spent in resting or in fishing. There were many deep sea fish to be had, of great palatability, but small gameness. They came like so many leaden weights. A few of us had climbed some of the hills in a half hearted curiosity, but from their summits saw nothing to tempt weariness. Practically we knew nothing beyond the mile or so of beach on which we lived.

Captain Selover had made a habit of coming ashore at least once during the day. He had contented himself with standing aloof, but I took pains to seem to confer with him, so that the men might suppose that I, as mate, was engaged in carrying out his directions. The dread of him was my most potent influence over them.

During the last few days of our wrecking Captain Selover had omitted his daily visit. The fact made me uneasy, so that at my first opportunity I sculled myself out to the schooner. I found him, moist eyed as usual, leaning against the mainmast doing nothing.

"We've finished, sir," said I.

He looked at me.

"Will you come ashore and have a look, sir?" I inquired.

"I ain't going ashore again," he muttered thickly.

"What!" I cried.

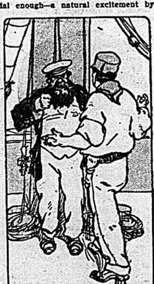
"I ain't going ashore again," he repeated obstinately, "and that's all there is to it. It's too much of a strain on any man. Suit yourself. You run them. I shipped as captain of a vessel. I'm no dock walloper. I won't do it—for no man!"

I gasped with dismay at the man's complete moral collapse. It seemed incredible. I caught myself wondering whether he would recover tone were he again to put to sea.

"Man, you must!" I cried at last.

"I won't, and that's flat," said he and turned deliberately on his heel and disappeared in the cabin.

I went ashore thoughtful and a little scared. But on reflection I regained a great part of my ease of mind. You see, I had been with these men now eight months, during which they had been as orderly as so many primary schoolboys. They had worked hard, without grumbling, and had even approached a sort of friendliness about the campfire. My first impression was overlaid. As I looked back on the voyage with what I took to be a clearer vision I could not but admit that the incidents were in themselves trivial enough—a natural excitement by a superstitious negro, a little tall talk that meant nothing. It must have been the glamour of the adventure that had deceived me—that and the unusual stage setting and costuming. Certainly few men would work hard for eight months without a murmur, without a chance to look about them.



I gasped with dismay at the man's collapse.

In that of course I was deceived by my inexperience. I realized later the wonderful effect Captain Selover threw away with his empty brandy bottles. The crew might grumble and plot during the watch below, but when Captain Ezra Selover said work they worked. He had been saying work for eight months. They had from force of experience obeyed him. It was all very simple.

CHAPTER XVI.

So there I was at once deprived of my chief support. Although no danger seemed imminent, nevertheless the necessity of acting on my own initiative and responsibility oppressed me somewhat.

Truth to tell, after the first I was more relieved than dismayed at the captain's resolution to stay aboard. His drinking habit was growing on him, and afloat or ashore he was now little more than a figurehead, so that my chief asset as far as he was concerned was rather his reputation than his direct influence. In contact with the men I dreaded lest sooner or later he do something to lessen or destroy the awe in which they held him.

Of course Dr. Schermerhorn had been mistaken in his man. A real captain of men would have risen to circumstances wherever he found them. But who could have foretold? Captain Selover had been a rascal always, but a successful and courageous rascal. He had run desperate chances, dominated desperate crews. Who could know that a crumble of island beach and six months ashore would turn him into what he had become? Yet I believe such cases are not uncommon in other walks of life. A man and his work combine to mean something, yet both may be absolutely useless when separated. It was the weak link.

I put in some time praying earnestly that the eyes of the crew might be blinded and that the doctor would finish his experiments before the caldron could boil up again.

My first act as real commander was to announce holiday. My idea was that the island would keep the men busy for awhile. Then I would assign them more work to do. They proposed at once a tour into the interior.

We started up the west coast. After three or four miles along a mess formation where often we had to circle long detours to avoid the gullies we came upon another short beach and beyond it a series of ledges on which basked several hundred seals. They did not seem alarmed. In fact, one old bull, scarred by many battles, made toward us.

We left him, scaled the cliff and turned up a broad, pleasant valley toward the interior.

There the later lava flow had been deflected. All that showed of the original eruption were occasional red outcropping rocks. Soil and grass had overlaid the mineral. Scattered trees were planted throughout the flat. Cacti and semitropical bushes mingled with brush on the rounded side hills. A number of brilliant birds fluttered at our approach.

Suddenly Handy Solomon, who was in advance, stopped and pointed to the crest of the hill. A file of animals moved along the sky line.

"Mutton," said he, "or the devil's a preacher!"

"Sheep!" cried Thrackles. "Where did they come from?"

"Golden Horn," I suggested. "Remember that wide, empty deck forward? They carried sheep there."

The men separated, intending fresh meat. The affair was ridiculous. These sheep had become wild as deer. Our surrounding party with its silly bared knives could only look after them open mouthed as they skipped nimbly between its members.

"Get a gun off the old man, Mr. Eagen," suggested Pulz, "and we'll have something besides salt horse and fish."

I nodded.

We continued. The island was like this as far as we went. When we climbed a ridge we found ourselves looking down on a spider web of other valleys and canyons of the same nature, all diverging to broad downs and a jump into the sea, all converging to the outworks that guarded the volcano with its canopy of vapor.

On our way home we cut across the higher country and the heads of the canyons until we found ourselves looking down on the valley and Dr. Schermerhorn's camp. The steam from the volcanic blowholes swayed below us. Through its rifts we saw the tops of the buildings. Presently we made out Percy Darrow, dressed in overalls, his sleeves rolled back and carrying a retort. He walked, very preoccupied, to one of the miniature craters, where he knelt and went through some operation indistinguishable at the distance. I looked around to see my companions staring at him fascinated, their necks craned out, their bodies drawn back into hiding. In a moment he had finished and carried the retort carefully into the laboratory. The men sighed and stood erect, once more themselves. As we turned away Perdosa voiced what must have been in the minds of all.

"A man could climb down there," said he.

"Why should he want to?" I demanded sharply.

"Quien sabe?" shrugged he.

We turned in silence toward the beach. Each brooded his thoughts. The sight of that man dressed in overalls, carrying on some mysterious business, brought home to each of us the fact that our expedition had an object as yet unknown to us. The thought had of late dropped into the background. For my part I had been so immersed in the adventure and the labor and the insistent need of the hour that I had forgotten why I had come. Dr. Schermerhorn's purpose was as inscrutable to me as at first. What had I accomplished?

The men, too, seemed struck with some such idea. There were no yarns about the campfire that night. Percy Darrow did not appear, for which I was sincerely sorry. His presence might have created a diversion. For some unknown reason all my old apprehensions, my sense of impending disaster, had returned to me strengthened. In the firelight the nigger's sullen face looked sinister, Pulz's nervous white countenance looked vicious. Thrackles' heavy, bulldog expression was threatening, Perdosa's Mexican cast fit for knife work in the back. And Handy Solomon, stretched out, leaning on his elbow, with his red headgear, his snaky hair, his hook nose, his restless eye and his glittering steel claw—the glow wrote across his aura the names of Kidd, Morgan, Blackbeard.

They sat smoking, staring into the fire with mesmerized eyes. The silence got on my nerves. I arose impatiently and walked down the pale beach, where the stars glimmered in splashes along the wettest sands. The black silhouette of the hills against the dark blue of the night sky, the white of breakers athwart the indistinct heave of the ocean, a faint light marking the position of the Laughing Lass—that was everything in the world. I made out some object rolled about in the edge of the wash. At the cost of wet feet I rescued it. It was an empty brandy bottle.

GUESSING THINGS.

How Dottie and Johnny Amused Themselves In the Country.

Dottie and Johnny were spending a week at the same farm. Such fun as they had feeding the hens, poking the pigs, milking the cows and fishing in the brook with bent pins at the end of long strings! What cared they whether they caught the minnows that swam in the clear water! They had fun in their own innocent way, and they were happy.

One morning, after they had romped and played until Dot was tired, the two threw themselves on the soft grass under a spreading chestnut tree, and Johnny said, "Oh, say, Dot, let's play guessing things!"

"Don't know how," answered Dot.

"Easy as rolling off a log. I will think of something, and you must be asking me questions. Try to guess what I'm thinking about."

"All right," assented Dot. "Now think."

"Guess what's in my pocket?" asked Johnny, opening the game.

"That is easy," laughed the little girl. "Marbles and tops and a ball. I know, 'cause I saw you put them in."

"Nup. I'm thinking of something else."

"Then," said Dot, puckering her brow, "a bubble pipe, a key, a fishing line and pin."

"Again I must say nup," said Johnny. "Sure I have all them things, but I'm thinking of something else."

Dot put on her thinking cap for the third and last time. "Is it a whistle, a knife or a nail?"

"No, no, no!" cried Johnny. "Now, you've had three guesses, and your turn is up, so I'll tell you."

"Well, well!" said Dot impatiently.

GAME OF LOCATION.

Knowledge of Geography Wins the Prize In This Contest.

A game in which geographical genius will shine is called "location."

Two captains are chosen from among the players, and these in turn choose their sides until the party is equally divided. For convenience it is well to seat the parties in two rows, facing each other. Chance decides which captain shall begin the game. This he does by calling the name of a city or town and then counting ten. Before he has finished counting his opposite opponent must call out the location of the city—that is, the state or country in which it is situated. If he answers correctly, he in turn calls the name of a place, and the second player in the opposite row must locate it before ten is counted. Should any player fail to answer before ten is counted or answer incorrectly he or she must drop out, and when there is only one player left on either side that one wins the prize.

How to See a Ghost.

Look steadily in a good light for thirty seconds at the cross in the eye of the pictured skull; then look up at the wall or ceiling or look fixedly at a sheet of paper for another thirty seconds, when a ghostlike image of the skull will be developed.

One Industry of the Ant.

Out in Burma and the far east, where sandalwood is worth its weights in silver, the pestiferous ant is a valuable assistant to the loggers of that precious timber. The hard and fragrant heartwood alone has value, but as the tree grows this valuable heart is overlaid by a soft and worthless layer forming two-thirds of the trunk. When a tree is felled and cut into lengths the loggers let the timber lie. At once the ants begin work upon the soft wood, which is sappy and sweet enough to attract them. In a few weeks, less than a month in the case of the largest butts, the ants deliver the heartwood free of all the worthless sapwood.

Lingering Sweetness.

She finished all her raisin cake
  And, sighing, said to me,
Oh, dear, I'm jus' thirsty as
  I possibly can be!"

I offered her some water, but
  "Oh, thank you, no!" she said.
I offered milk and lemonade,
  But still she shook her head.

"Why don't you take a drink?" I asked
  The thirsty little maid.
She answered, "It would take away
  The taste of cake, I'm 'fraid."

AN UP TO DATE METHOD.

Net Curtains Pulled Up and Down When Laundered.

Methods of dyeing the threads used in the manufacture of madras curtains are being continually improved upon, so that they have now reached such a state of perfection that these hangings may be washed as safely as a pocket handkerchief and by the same simple means.

Not long ago it was necessary to use either salt or vinegar to "set the colors" before laundering, but nowadays this is entirely unnecessary.

An authority says curtains can be washed at home quite as satisfactorily for a few cents as though one paid 50 cents a pair for cleaning by a professional.

According to a successful cleaner, this process should be followed: Make suds with warm water and white soap. Then the water is put into an immense tub or vat that has revolving arms something like those found in washing machines.

Next the curtains are thoroughly shaken in order to free them from dust. Then they are placed in wide meshed bags like the string shopping bags. The revolving arms send the water through and through both bags and curtains. When clean they are taken from the suds and, still in the bags, are rinsed in clean water.

The bags are used to protect the curtains from the revolving arms which of course might catch the meshes and tear them.

This authority advises home cleaners to make the suds, then immerse the curtains (not using bags) and souse them up and down with the hands without rubbing until all the dirt has disappeared. They must then be rinsed in clean cold water, hung up to dry and well shaken, when they are ready for use again.

When madras curtains were made in cream and one coloring only, it was quite safe to lay them in salt or vinegar, as the color called for, but since as many as four shades are often combined in one curtain what would brighten one might darken or dull another, so the greatest care is taken in drying the yarns before weaving.

The warp only in madras curtains is of cotton. The pattern or design, no matter whether just white, one color or a variety of tints, is always of wool. This holds color better than cotton; hence there is no reason for "setting" before washing curtains.

A line of madras curtains that will not fade is shown in some stores. They are called the "sundour" and come in a variety of pretty design colorings. The best part of it is they are no more expensive tha average madras curtains.

A Grit Canard re Mr. E. Guss Porter.

Globe Says it is Announced That He Will Retire From Contest in West Hastings—A Silly Falsehood.

To-day's Toronto Globe contains the following:

"It is announced that Mr. E. Guss Porter, ex-M.P., Belleville, will retire from the political field as the Conservative candidate, in West Hastings, and that Dr. R. Elgin Towle, of Springbrook, will be the choice of the Conservatives for the coming contest."

The above is almost too ridiculous to discuss, but to prevent misapprehensions it may be stated positively that Mr. Porter has no thought of retirement from the contest. He is in the fight to stay, and that he will win is a foregone conclusion.

It is hard to see what object The Globe could have in publishing such a ridiculous falsehood.

Horse Thieves Made Daring Haul Near Corbyville.

Some time between 9 o'clock last night and this morning Mr. Joel Brenton, who resides near Corbyville, had a horse, phaeton and harness stolen from his stables. The horse was a dark bay animal of medium size, and the vehicle a covered top phaeton, with silver mounted set of harness. A buffalo robe and a colored lap rug were also taken. There is no clue at present as to who stole the outfit.

Political Pointers.

Reports from the Townships of Huntingdon and Rawdon are most encouraging for Mr. Porter. These two Townships will, no doubt, give a larger Conservative majority than ever before.

The record of the Laurier Government looters is almost enough to make Conservative newspapers apologize to Premier Ross of Ontario for denouncing him so severely. Compared to the Laurier record the sins of poor Mr. Ross were merely childish misdemeanors — nothing really sinful, just naughtiness which merited a slap on the wrist.

It is rumored in Prince Edward that efforts are being made by Laurier's emissaries to get Currie, Liberal to retire in favor of McMullen, independent Liberal, but without avail. It looks as though both candidates are in the field to stay. One of them, it is thought, will lose his deposit.

Reports from North Hastings say that Mr. Porter is meeting with the most gratifying success in his meetings and canvass.

The organization in this city was never in better shape than at present. Confident predictions are made that Mr. Porter's majority, this election, will be the biggest on record.

Sifton praises the Globe and the Globe praises Sifton. Latest modern instance of "birds of a feather."

These, being the days of political disclosures, perhaps Hon. Mr. Graham can tell us who printed the fraudulent ballots in the Comstock-White bye-election in Brockville. Some people think the Hon. George knows, but he will hardly tell.

At Coe Hill last night there was a fine meeting in the interests of Mr. Porter. The attendance was large, and the popular candidate was given a most flattering reception. Mr. Porter and Mr. Mikel were the speakers, and their remarks made a deep impression on the audience. Things around Coe Hill could hardly look better from a Conservative point of view.

An East Hastings Liberal was in the city to-day, and was asked by a merchant, "What sort of a run do you think McCargar is going to make?" The reply was: "I don't believe he'll do any better than Dan Poucher did."

At Sign of the Scales.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

James Johnson, who resides outside of the city, pleaded guilty this morning, before Ald. Panter, who presided over the police court session, to being drunk and disorderly, and was fined $5.

Young Trenton Man Was Murdered And Thrown in Canal.

Cornelius Brssuard Met a Violent Death in Wicked Chicago—Was 23 Years Old.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—The body of a young man, apparently murdered and thrown into the drainage canal, was found floating at Lemont, Ills., yesterday by the police.

A Chicago bank deposit book, and a memorandum book, both bearing the name of Cornelius Brussard, Trenton, Ont., Canada, was found in the pockets.

The man was apparently 23 years of age.

A fracture of the skull evidently caused death.

The body apparently had been in the water a week, and the police believe the man was murdered in Chicago, and the body floated down the canal.

Mr. W. H. Scholes Died This Morning.

Shortly before noon to-day Mr. William H. Scholes passed away at the hospital, to which institution he was taken a few days ago. For some time the deceased had been in failing health, suffering with a general breaking-up of the system. Mr. Scholes was well and favorably known in the city. In the year 1842 he was born in Ireland. Some 45 years ago he came to this city, where he had since resided. He was for some time engaged as a clerk, and was also in the grocery and dry goods business for several years, but retired. For five years the deceased was a member of the Northwest Mounted Police, doing duty on the western frontiers of Canada. He also did duty for his country during the Fenian raid of 1866, being at the front. Deceased was a member of the Veterans' Association. In religion he was a Methodist and in politics a Conservative. A widow but no family survives.

Police Notes

A pair of leggings were last night found outside of a store.

At 7 o'clock last night an Irishman named James Robertson was arrested for being drunk and acting disorderly on Front street.

At about 10.30 on Monday night a large light of glass was broken at Mr. Webster's residence, on Bridge street, by some party outside, who skidooed before identification.

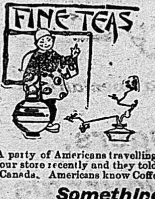
"Give Me Tea Like My Neighbor Gets."



This request is heard at our counter every day. People are beginning to understand why we supply so many people with Teas and Coffees.

We supply nearly all the largest consumers of Teas and Coffees in Belleville. Why?

Because our Teas and Coffees possess cup qualities not to be found in other lines at the same money.

We do not make this statement without proof. The fact is attested to by new customers made every week.

A party of Americans travelling through Belleville partook of Coffee, when demonstrated at our store recently and they told us, "it was the Best Coffee they had tasted since coming to Canada. Americans know Coffee—They use it like we use Tea.

Something else about Our Teas

If you have been using one line of Tea for a long time and perhaps have grown a little tired of it—come to us. We have some delightful blends. One is our "Pikoe Mixture," another is our Gunpowder Blend, another is our Ceylon Mixture.

Some of these Blends have three or four different teas in them. Try them.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO FEEL "DOPEY"

—to have headaches—an easily-tired body—a stuffy-feeling brain—even for part of the time. There are too many keen alert men and women, always at their best, to give much chance of success to one thus handicapped.

These things are the direct results of a sluggish liver—constipated bowels—dry skin — overworked kidneys — in short, of a body whose sewers are clogged.

Nothing opens up these outlets of the waste, and clears the system of poison so gently, yet so effectively, as "Fruit-a-tives." "Fruit-a-tives" are the juices of oranges, apples, figs and prunes combined—by a process that greatly increases their medicinal value —with valuable tonics and internal antiseptics, and made into tablets.

Take one or two "Fruit-a-tives" every night, eat plenty of ripe fruit, and see how quickly your brain clears and headaches leave you. 50c a box—6 for $2.50. Trial size 25c. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Murder Trial Opens.

Sault Ste. Marie, Oct. 14.—The grand jury Monday brought in true bills for murder against the Scigliano brothers in connection with the killing of Baega Pacioceo here in July, and a true bill for manslaughter against Tony Makie of Michipicoten for the death of Isaac Saari. The trial of Isaac Scigliano opened with Edward Meredith, London, prosecuting, and the defence in the hands of W. H. Hearst and J. O'Flynn. A peculiar features of the case is that Italians show no reluctance to testify against accused as is usually the case. Self-defence will probably be Scigliano's plea.

Double Murder.

Oswego, N.Y., Oct. 14.—When Chas. Ward, surprised at getting no response to his rapping at the house of his neighbors, John and Peter Bohli, 50 years of age, at Ingalls Crossing, this county, broke in the door yesterday morning and entered, his investigations disclosed the fact that the two brothers were dead on the floor of the kitchen, both with several bullet wounds in their bodies and their heads battered in with an axe. Burglary was the motive, and tramps are suspected.

Found Guilty.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Walter Dixon was found guilty of the theft of $475 from Bert McInnis in the sessions yesterday morning.

George Ware was also found guilty of indecent assault on Margaret Catherine Gains, a colored idiot girl.

DISCARDED.

From home I sent you just a week ago,
Not that my love for you was growing less,
But that it grieved and saddened me to know
How quickly time could mar your loveliness.
And, though to let you leave me I was loath,
A change, thought I, might benefit us both.

When first your dazzling beauty caught my eye
You were indifferent to the staring crowd
And quite unconscious of the fact that I
To make you mine impulsively had vowed.
For all things have their price and may be bought,
And you had yours, though somewhat high, methought.

And now, all torn and tattered, you've come back,
Your color faded, and your looks forlorn.
And all in one short week—alas, alack!
A costlier shirt than you I've never worn.
But what avails this fretting and this fuss?
The laundries always treat one's linen thus.

An Important Item.

Mr. Splurge—If it hadn't been for your extravagant vacation this summer we wouldn't be so deep in debt now.

Mrs. Splurge—Never mind, dear. I'll go to the mountains instead of the seashore next summer.

Mr. Splurge—Huh! You think that will be more economical?

Mrs. Splurge—Of course. I won't need a new bathing suit then.—Catholic Standard and Times.

McINTOSH BROS

CROWD STORMS HOUSE

Mob of 100,000 Unemployed in London Help Suffragettes.

British House of Commons Is Attacked For Three Hours and Five Thousand Soldiers and Police Are Required to Repel Besiegers—One Woman Gains Floor But Is Ejected by Officers—Thirty-Six Arrested.

London, Oct. 14.—The unemployed of London, acting together with the women suffragists, are practically compelling Parliament to hold its meetings in a state of siege. Early yesterday afternoon several hundred shabbily-dressed representatives of the workless gathered at Westminster and brought with them a large crowd of the curious. Squads of police, mounted and on foot, endeavored to disperse the demonstrants, but they were only driven down one street to reappear up another.

The climax of the suffragette campaign was reached last night when an enormous mob hemmed in Parliament and stopped the traffic in all streets leading to Westminster. For more than three hours the crowds scuffled good-naturedly with the police, interfered with theatre-goers, broke windows and disorganized things generally in the centre of London.

The heroine of the day was Mrs. Travers Symons, formerly secretary to James Keir Hardie, the Socialist and Independent member of Parliament, who reached the door of the House of Commons by strategy. The House was solemnly debating a bill to prevent children from cigarette smoking, when the woman dashed past the doorkeeper to a position in front of the Speaker's chair and shouted shrilly: "Leave off discussing children and talk about the women."

Three officials seized Mrs. Symons and carried her out bodily. She was led to the outer door and dismissed. As a result of the coup an order was issued that hereafter women should not be admitted to the building on any pretext whatever, and in the future the historic grille will not screen feminine spectators.

The appeal issued by the suffragettes a few days ago for 50,000 persons to help them "rush" Parliament at 7.30 o'clock last evening was the most successful stroke yet. Not less than twice that number responded to the call, and nine-tenths of these were young people, who came to see the fun. There were also a few hundred of the unemployed and their sympathizers.

Parliament was in a state of siege. A close triple line of police was drawn around the three sides of the square in front of the building. The yard between the gates swarmed with police and 200 guarded the terrace in the rear against assault by water, which the women twice attempted.

A small force of police boats also patrolled the Thames approaches.

All the mounted police in London and suburbs had been mobilized at this centre and loads of hay were unstacked in the streets for the horses. The whole police force, together with cavalry, infantry and marines, numbering more than 5,000, was kept busy in restraining the pushing, struggling masses, and especially about Trafalgar square, where the Nelson monument looked down upon dense crowds in all directions, with busses, motor cars and cabs, mostly filled with sightseers, trying to thread their way through.

The police kept the streets adjoining the House of Commons clear; elsewhere they endeavored to the best of their ability to keep the people moving. The crowd cheered, sang songs and hooted, giving voice to all the sarcastic remarks that a London crowd is capable of. These were aimed in a semi-good-natured manner at the suffragettes, who, distinguished by their sashes, swarmed everywhere, distributing tracts.

A delegation of thirteen suffragettes which approached the police cordon and was formally refused admission to Parliament, attempted a football rush, but the police repulsed the women with the least possible roughness. Two bodies of the unemployed, however, which approached the line were driven off, with little saving grace, one across Westminster bridge and the other to St. James' Park.

The police were pelted with vegetables and some with stones in a few minor skirmishes that occurred, but nobody was seriously hurt.

Twenty-four suffragettes and 12 of the unemployed were placed under arrest. Many persons fainted in the crush; a few were trampled upon and taken to the hospitals.

Mrs. Pankhurst, Miss Christabel Pankhurst and Mrs. Lawrence were summoned to court Monday for inciting a breach of the peace. Yesterday morning they coolly refused to obey the summons, but agreed to surrender themselves at Police Court in the evening, which they did, spending the night in the Bow street station.

The suffragettes and unemployed have kept practically the whole police force on duty continuously for forty-three hours.

A Grain Blockade.

Moosejaw, Oct. 14.—There is a serious car shortage in Moosejaw at the present time. Every elevator in town is full and farmers without loads of wheat are being turned away. Only three cars a day are being furnished by the C.P.R. Reports from country points tell a similar story. Farmers have large quantities of wheat still in fields, and the supply of cars is extremely limited.

First Prize For G.T.R.

Toronto, Oct. 14.—A cable was received yesterday announcing that the Grand Trunk Railway had been awarded the grand prize for their building and exhibit at the Franco-British Exhibition.

This is the highest award that can be given.

WHAT COLLINGWOOD WANTS.

Citizens Tell Their Needs to Paterson at His Meeting There.

Collingwood, Ont., Oct. 14.—With characteristic enterprise the citizens of Collingwood last night seized upon the visit of Hon. William Paterson, Minister of Customs, to impress upon that distinguished gentleman what was required to build up here a great ship building, ship repairing and marine entry port. The opera house was well filled.

"Men take more interest in things when they are alive than when they are dead," said he in justifying the improvement of the waterways.

"I call the Crow's Nest Pass transaction one of the best ever accomplished, and I don't call it a scandal. The Government never gave away an acre of coal lands. It had none to give. Sir James Whitney looks after them. The crown lands of British Columbia belong to that province and they gave coal lands as a bonus for the building of a much-needed railroad for which they had granted a charter. Now that section of country is the scene of happy homes and thriving towns and villages."

The settlers from the United States, he said, had brought into this country last year, duty free, nine million dollars' worth of settlers' effects.

These settlers had also brought in dutiable supplies valued at ten million dollars. One million dollars was paid for new immigration. Thus, summarized the Minister, Canada got the immigrants and was still one million dollars to the good.

Leighton G. McCarthy, ex-M.P., also spoke.

WAR CLOUD PASSES.

Danger of Fighting In the Balkans Steadily Grows Less.

Paris, Oct. 14.—The danger of a declaration of war from Servia is considered over for the present, and advices received yesterday from official sources indicate that the danger point in the Balkans has shifted back to Bulgaria. While the report that Bulgaria has delivered an ultimatum to Turkey, regarding the recognition of her independence inside of three days is denied, there is reason to believe that Bulgaria is determined to make a move if Turkey and the powers persist in their refusal to accept her independence as an accomplished fact. It is believed here that if the Bulgarian army crosses the Turkish frontier Great Britain will land troops for the protection of Constantinople.

Found In Red River.

Winnipeg, Oct. 14.—The body of Emile G. Smith, civil engineer of Ottawa, was found in the Red river here yesterday morning, and it is presumed he committed suicide. He had been engaged on the G.T.P. construction work near Vermilion Bay, but had been confined in the hospital for a time last summer, leaving there against the orders of his physician. He had also been in the city for the greater part of August, but little or nothing is known of his recent movements. The body was still warm when found.

Fatal Fire at Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 14.—Ten Italians escaped from a burning building, once used for a roller rink, which was burned Monday night.

Felix Cretelle, a youth who went into the building after some property, lost his life. Loss, $3,500.

Typhoid at Regina Barracks.

Regina, Sask., Oct. 14.—An epidemic of typhoid fever has broken out at the police barracks here, and thirteen cases are now being treated in the Military Hospital. Only two nurses are available for all these patients.

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Frank Emsley, Lindsay, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"When I wrote to you some time ago, I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the feminine organs and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do.

"A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman.

"I most heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer with female troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Unchanged—Hogs Are Down at the Chicago Market.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—London cables for cattle are steady at 11½c to 12¾c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9½c to 10c per pound.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Oct. 13.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market, as reported by the railways, were 108 carloads, composed of 1951 cattle, 1121 hogs, 3155 sheep and lambs and 143 calves.

Exporters.

There were none reported, excepting a few that might be picked out of the loads of butchers. Export steers of good quality are worth about $5; bulls, $3.50 to $4, and real choice quality bulls would bring $4.25 or perhaps a trifle more.

Butchers.

Good to choice quality butchers were quoted as selling at from $4.25 to $4.70; medium, $3.70 to $4; cows, $2.50 to $4; canners and bulls, $1 to $2.35 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

Few good quality feeders or stockers were on sale. H. & W. Murby report a fair demand for the best, but the common are slow of sale. Messrs. Murby bought 160, ranging in weight from 700 to 1050 lbs., and quote feeders at $3.40 to $3.75 for good, and $2.75 to $3.25 for medium; common stockers, $2.25 to $2.50 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

There was, as usual, a fair delivery of milkers and springers, amongst which were some of good to choice quality, which sold at $30 to $55, and one at $75. The demand from Montreal is the chief factor in keeping prices where they are. The average price was around $50.

Veal Calves.

Receipts light, with prices steady, at $3 to $6.50 for the bulk, with a very few new, milk-fed calves at $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Over 3155 sheep and lambs were on sale, which caused prices to go lower, especially for lambs. Export ewes sold at $3.25 to $3.50; rams, $2.50 to $2.75; lambs, $4 to $4.70 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris quoted prices lower, as follows: Selects, fed and watered, $6.25, and lights at $6 per cwt.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 13.—Cattle—Receipts, 300 head; slow and steady; prime steers, $5.75 to $6.25.

Veals—Receipts, 250 head; active and 25c lower, $6 to $9.

Hogs—Receipts, 12,000 head; slow; heavy steady; others 10c to 25c lower; mixed, $5.60 to $6.05; yorkers, $5 to $5.90; pigs, $4 to $5; roughs, $4.50 to $5; stags, $3.75 to $4.25; dairies and grassers, $5.25.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Beeves—Receipts, 617; feeling steady. Liverpool and London cattle and beef markets unchanged. Exports to-day, none.

Calves—Receipts, 647, mainly westerns; veals about steady; grassers easier; veals, $7 to $9.50; culls, $4.50; grassers, $3.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 3300; market steady; sheep, $2.25 to $4; culls, $2; lambs, $4.25 to $5.75; culls, $3.50 to $4.

Hogs—Receipts, 1649; feeling steady.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Cattle—Receipts estimated at about 8000; market steady; steers, $4.40 to $7.75; cows, $3.25 to $5.25; heifers, $3 to $4.25; bulls, $2.50 to $4.50; calves, $3.50 to $4.50; stockers and feeders, $2.60 to $4.65.

Hogs—Receipts estimated at about 20,000; market 10c to 15c lower; choice heavy shipping, $6.15 to $6.25; butchers, $6 to $6.15; light mixed, $5.25 to $5.85; choice light, $5.90 to $6.10; packing, $5.70 to $5.90; pigs, $3.50 to $5.50; bulk of sales, $5.70 to $5.85.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts estimated at about 18,000; market steady; sheep, $4.25 to $4.75; lambs, $4.75 to $5.85; yearlings, $3.85 to $5.

Cheese Markets.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 13.—At a meeting of the cheese board held here to-day, 700 were offered; 215 sold at 12c, balance at 11 15-16c. Board adjourned for two weeks.

Wants Bigger Navy.

Boston, Aug. 14.—Declaring that Japan was ready to make insulting demands of the United States did she dare, and that the only way to guard against such was to increase the navy, U. S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge launched into a stirring and vigorous plea for a bigger and better navy at a Republican ratification meeting in Tremont Temple.

Bishops Prohibited.

Paris, Oct. 14.—According to The Figaro the Bishops of France have received a circular from Cardinal Merry del Val, the papal secretary of state, absolutely forbidding them, in the future, to attend the lectures of the state faculties.

Porter Sues Millionaire.

New York, Oct. 14.—A negro porter is suing Millionaire Brady for $20,000 for false arrest in Montreal.

The Montreal police chief declares that Brady signed the theft charge.

HINDU PROBLEM SOLVED

Pacific Coast Orientals Will Go to British Honduras.

Two Thousand East Indians, Many of Whom Are Starving, Will Be Moved as Result of Negotiations Between Canada and Central American Colony — Government Will Help Pay Fares.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 15.—J. B. Harken of the Department of the Interior, announced last evening that the Government had solved the Hindu question so far as the Province of British Columbia is concerned.

The entire Hindu colony, consisting of over 2,000, is to be moved from British Columbia to British Honduras.

The plan is being carried out as a result of negotiations which have been carried out between Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Lord Strathcona, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and the Government of Honduras. The later was in London recently and personally talked over details of the scheme with Strathcona.

Harken was sent from Ottawa by Sir Wilfrid and will leave to-day with two Hindu delegates from Honduras to arrange details of the colony at that end of the line.

The Hindus are anxious to move, and the Imperial Government will assist in the cost of transporting them to their new home.

Scores of members of the Hindu colony here are not only out of work, but actually starving. Much suffering will result this winter if they are not moved.

The present plan is to charter two ships to carry them to Panama and send them across the Isthmus, thence to their destination.

They will be employed building the railway in Honduras.

Candidate Hanan Hurt.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 15.—A serious accident befell George Hanan, the Niagara Falls Conservative candidate for the County of Welland yesterday morning, when he and Thomas Emery, a liveryman, were driving towards Stamford. The horse took fright at a Grand Trunk engine on Victoria avenue crossing and ran away. Mr. Hanan leaped from the rig, sustaining a sprained ankle and a shaking up which will confine him to his bed for a week or ten days. Mr. Emery, who stuck to the rig, was thrown out and suffered a broken leg and arm, and, it is feared, internal injuries. Both men were taken to their homes in the hospital ambulance.

Capitalist Drives Car.

New York, Oct. 15.—Because he would not accept part payment from fire insurance companies on losses in the San Francisco fire, Patrick McFadden, who for 11 years made his home at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco, is now driving a Chambers street horse car; and he said yesterday he would keep on driving till he got his full insurance.

Before the disaster McFadden reckoned his income between $10,000 and $15,000. Even now he might settle with the insurance companies for $6,500, but he prefers to work for $2 a day.

Former Official Sentenced.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 15.—James Milne, formerly general superintendent of the British Columbia Electric Railway, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary yesterday morning on a charge of securing money from the company by means of orders passed by him in his official capacity. There were 23 charges against him and he pleaded guilty. This is the culmination of a series of prosecutions by the company against employes who have secured money by padding pay lists.

The Times on the Elections.

London, Oct. 15.—(C. A. P.)—The Times, discussing the elections, says Laurier is one of the great leaders of the imperial movement and points out that there is a tendency to dissociate the Premier from the record of his Government. However complimentary this is to Laurier, it is unfavorable to the prospects of his party. The Times is inclined to think the Government will be returned with a considerably reduced majority.

Duck Hunter Drowns.

Lindsay, Oct. 15.—A drowning accident occurred yesterday morning at Bald Point, Sturgeon Lake, Andrew Lawson of Beamsville was the victim.

It appears that the unfortunate young man, in company with W. A. Sinclair, Mr. Lewy and Mr. Culp, also of Beamsville, were engaged in duck-hunting off the point. Lawson was about 29 years of age and a druggist by profession.

The Ontario Tour Closes.

Mr. Borden Winds Up at Brockville with Big Ovation.

Leader and Hon. Mr Hanna Enter Graham's Stronghold and Are Greeted With Crowded House and Overflow Meeting—Obstruction Measures of Government Denounced—Moral Decadence Has Set In.

Brockville, Oct. 15.—Mr. Borden's last meeting in Ontario was a record-breaker.

Here, in the home of Hon. Mr. Graham, Minister of Railways, there is one of the keenest political fights of the campaign and the liveliest interest was taken in the double-header addressed by Mr. Borden and Hon. W. J. Hanna. Special trains from several points in the riding and the adjoining constituencies of Leeds and Grenville brought several hundred people to town, but many who journeyed long distances were rewarded with no more than a glimpse of the visiting Conservative leaders as they were driven through the streets.

The great strain of the Cornwall meeting Tuesday night left Mr. Borden's voice in bad shape, consequently his two speeches last night were rather brief.

Two large buildings were crowded. The opera house has a seating capacity of 1,600, and it was filled long before the arrival of Mr. Borden and Mr. Hanna. An overflow meeting was held in Victoria Hall, which holds nearly 1,000 people.

The first part of the leader's address was devoted to a denunciation of the Government for its obstruction to the efforts of the Opposition to "Lift the Lid," and he especially noted his own efforts to bring about the prosecution of the Brockville and West Huron election thieves.

There had been a moral decadence among the leaders of the Liberal party, said Mr. Borden, discussing the Liberal platform. They had wantonly and deliberately abandoned the principles for which they stood before their advent to power. The Liberal leaders, even within the narrow limits of the Province of Nova Scotia, preached free trade in one county and protection in another.

Contrasted with this lack of consistency Mr. Borden pointed to his own record, which was one of persistent advocacy of the National Policy of protection in the east as well as in the west.

The Conservative leader discussed the Halifax platform and pointed to some of the administrative acts of the Government, concluding, "I firmly believe that the people of Canada are determined that there shall be a change, and when that comes it will be accepted by us as a victory of the Conservative party, and as a victory of the people of Canada over the maladministration of the Government in the past 12 years, and especially in the past four years, because it has been only in the past four years that these men have become intoxicated with power and have thrown all discretion to the winds.

Ten Years For Maiming.

Windsor, Oct. 15.—Charles White was yesterday sentenced to ten years in Kingston Penitentiary, after being convicted by a jury at Sandwich of maiming and disfiguring Joshua Pierce. The charge of attempted murder was dismissed.

Some months ago White entered Pierce's home and gave him a brutal beating. Mrs. Pierce was charged with complicity in the assault, but Chancellor Boyd took the case from the jury.

Found Drowned at Island.

Toronto, Oct. 15.—The body of Mrs. J. W. Cheeseworth, 332 Markham street, was found in ten feet of water in the Centre Island slip yesterday.

Mrs. Cheeseworth had been suffering from melancholia, induced by ill-health.

She was missed from her home Tuesday night at 10 o'clock.

Blacksmith Kills a Deacon.

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 15.—I. H. Whaley, a deacon of the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church of this city, was struck and killed by J. M. Green, a blacksmith, here Tuesday. Green struck Whaley in the face with his fist. In falling Whaley's head struck the railroad track, death following an hour later.

Kaiser Invents a Brake.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Emperor William has invented a new hub brake for railroad trains and automobiles, which is described as offering the greatest possible guarantee against accident arising from the failure of existing brakes to operate when called upon.

Negligence Is Not Proven.

North Bay, Ont., Oct. 15.—J. P. Leamy sued the Nipissing Mining Co. for damages for injuries received from stray explosives struck by his pick. Plaintiff lost one eye and was badly crippled. Justice Britton ordered nonsuit as negligence was not proven.

HAINS' BROTHERS ON TRIAL.

Case Goes Before Grand Jury at Long Island City.

New York, Oct. 15.—The long-deferred investigation into the death of Wm. E. Annis, who was shot and killed at the Bayside Yacht Club house in August by Capt. Peter C. Hains of the United States army, was begun by the Queen's county grand jury at Long Island City yesterday. Capt. Hains and his brother, T. Jenkins Hains, are now under arrest, Capt. Hains charged with the murder and his brother as an accomplice.

Boys Eat Cordite.

London, Oct. 15.—Principal Wyatt of St. George's school discovered yesterday afternoon that a number of pupils had been eating cordite, taken from cartridges. One boy ate so much of it that at noon he fainted. The youths when questioned about it, said they had read about the alleged murderer, Private Moir, eating the stuff and they were sampling it to observe its effect.

Australia's Prosperity.

Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 15.—(C.A.P.)—Sir W. Lyn, delivering the budget statement, said the unprecedentedly large custom revenue, £11,645,000, was attributed to the new tariff and the higher price of produce. Lyn pointed out that Australia's imports were £51,000,000 and exports £72,000,000, while the corresponding Canadian figures were £60,000,000 and £52,000,000.

Salome Shocks Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Oct. 15.—Director of Public Safety Edward G. Lang last evening attempted to stop the "Salome dance" given by Miss Blanche Deyo with the "Joe" Weber Co. at the Duquesne Theatre. He declared he was barred from the stage door, after he had made arrangements to secure entrance, so he could order down the curtain should he find the dance immoral.

Spirit Lamp Explodes.

Hamilton, Oct. 15.—Fire which started from the explosion of a spirit lamp in the warehouse of the Domestic Specialty Co. Tuesday gutted the building and almost entirely destroyed its contents. The loss has not yet been estimated. Fireman W. Aitchison sustained severe cuts on the hands from broken glass.

Would Not Work; Deported.

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—Immigration officials have deported George Blench and he is now on his way back to England. He was up in the Police Court lately on a charge of vagrancy. It is said that no less than four situations were obtained for him, but he would not work.

Corn Husker Takes Arm.

London, Ont., Oct. 15—While working a corn husking machine on his father's farm at Strathburn, Dougall McCallum had his left arm so badly lacerated by getting it caught in the machine that it was necessary to amputate it.

House Burns; Woman Hurt.

Maxwell, Ont., Oct. 15.—Fire started by the explosion of a lamp in the hands of Mrs. James Radley here on Tuesday night destroyed a dwelling-house and severely burned Mrs. Radley's hands.

Allan Liner In Collision.

London, Oct. 15.—(C.A.P.)—The Allan liner Ulunda, Liverpool for Halifax, collided with the bark Santa Anna, in the Irish Sea, and has returned damaged, towing the bark.

Band to Tour England.

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—The bugle band of the 43rd Regiment is making arrangements for a trip to the old country.

Pleads Guilty.

Toronto, Oct. 15.—In the sessions yesterday Albert Love, a mail carrier arrested for the theft of money letters, pleaded guilty at the solicitation of his wife, who with two children were in court. He broke down in the dock. He will be sentenced later.

Defines Unwritten Law.

Hamilton, Oct. 15.—Police Magistrate Jelfs delivered a lecture last evening on the unwritten law. He said that Thaw and his friends had a misconception of the term, which the speaker interpreted as the law of God or conscience.

TIMELY TOPICS.

What funny things we hear since Baron Munchausen became news editor of the Globe.

• • •

A Toronto paper says Mr. McCargar is running for satisfaction. And most people thought he was running for exercise.

• • •

"A Voter" asks where he can get the best campaign literature. In The Intelligencer, friend.

• • •

If we knew the man who was responsible for the beautiful weather we'd certainly vote for him, no matter what his politics were.

• • •

Yankee baseball season is over. Now, perhaps, Taft and Bryan can get an inch or two nearer the centre of the stage.

• • •

"A Voter" writes: "I think Billy Panter should be Mayor next year. For thirteen years he's been an industrious and painstaking alderman, whose word was as good as his bond. Now that he wants to be Mayor before retiring, I, for one, think it a shame that he should be up against a possible three cornered contest. That's not a fair way to treat one of the best aldermen this city ever had."

• • •

The remarks of "A Voter" will find favor with a great many people in this city, but what does he expect US to do? Sandbag the third candidate? Unfortunately we're not living in Oklahoma.

• • •

No use talking, you just can't keep West Hastings out of the political limelight. Last election bogus ballot-boxes made us famous. This election, announcing Mr. Porter's retirement is the method adopted by the enemy. It may be that the last has not yet been heard of this little matter.

TIMELY RHYMES.

Autumn comes with honeyed ways,
Golden dress and mountain haze—
How they allure!
Yet she has some deep design
On this pocketbook of mine,
Of that I'm sure!

Autumn lays her frosty hand
On Matilda's shoulder and Matilda purrs
On my shoulder like a kit,
Then I know I've gotta git
A set of furs!

Dr. Mary Walker declares that tuberculosis comes from tobacco smoke, and Dr. Robert Sangiovanni says it comes from tight lacing. It's a case of theory with both of 'em.

This—from a Kingston paper -- may be true—of Kingston people: As soon as some men give a dollar to the church or a charitable institution they at once commence to figure out the best way to get caught in the act.

Out of the windows of the Grit committee rooms fly several flags. In addition to one Union Jack there are two Tricolors. The Tricolor, by the way, is quite appropriate for a party which stand for French domination. But what do these flags with the yellow star in the centre stand for? Is that to be the flag of the "Independent Canada" which Laurier is on record as wishing to see?

• • •

The Montreal Star's London correspondent wires, on the 14th inst., Colonel Biggar, Canadian Director of Militia Transport, is here conferring with the War Office, and learning the latest methods of the Army Service Corps. The British War Office may adopt the type of camp cooking range which is being manufactured for the Canadian Government. It is hoped also to put on a better basis, the arrangement for British army commissions to Canadian officers. It is felt that the new McGill military course should assist.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier wired to the Secretary of the Dauphin Liberal association that "Chevrier resigned of his own accord, and so did Fraser. Absolutely no truth whatever in statement in Ottawa that he intended to ask Burrows to retire froom the contest." Everyone knows that Chevrier did not "resign of his own accord," he and Fraser were both forced to resign, and Laurier knows it. As for Burrows, Laurier dare not tell him to resign, Burrows is Sifton's brother-in-law! That's enough to keep him in the field.

• • •

The Hon. Mr. Aylesworth told the electors at Richmond that the reason the names of the trans-Atlantic Company were not divulged was that the men who carried on the business had to work in Europe, where in most of the countries, every young man had to spend a certain number of years in the army, and it was a criminal offense to attempt to induce men to emigrate. For that reason the names were not revealed. Now will he tell us why Mr. Smart, late Deputy Minister of the Dept. of Interior, burned all the books containing the records, and the correspondence of this company?

Borden for Premier and Better Government.

This Joker May Be Liable for Penalty of $500 and Costs.

Some wag has been playing what no doubt he though was a practical joke by sending the following telegram to the Toronto Globe and other papers of that city. The Globe does not say from where or from whom it received the information that Mr. Porter was to retire and that Dr. Towle was to be the Conservative candidate. It simply says

"It is announced that Mr. E. Guss Porter, ex-M.P., Belleville, will retire from the political frield as the Conservative candidate in West Hastings, and that Dr. R. Elgin Towle, of Springbrook, will be the choice of the Conservatives for the coming contest."

Why was this falsehood put in circulation? It could only be for one purpose, that of affecting the election. It behoves Dr. Towle to take steps to find out who the culprit is that has used his name, and have him punished.

The probability is that the offender in this particular does not know that there is a provision in the new election law providing for the punishment of offenders of this character, with a fine of "not less than $100, and not more than $500 and and in default imprisonment for the publication of any FALSE statement of fact in relation to personal character or conduct of any candidate."

That the publication of such rumor, being false, affects the election and the conduct of the candidate is beyond doubt. Now, Mr. Porter, go for the joker. Let's have no more of these Grit tactics.

Another Indian Met Suspicious Death.

Mr. P. J. M. Anderson, County Attorney, went to Deseronto to-day, for the purpose of investigating the death of a member of the Mohawk tribe, who died on Monday.

Queen's Decides For Separation.

Kingston, Oct. 15. — (Special.) — Queen's University trustees have decided for separation from the Presbyterian Church.

The conviction of the trustees was that the altered conditions with which the University has to deal in these later times calls for the removal of the denominational disabilities in the charter of the University.

The resolution was carried by 16 to 3.

A Family Jar.

A hurried call was sent to the police station about 9.30 last night, it being stated that a family quarrel was in progress in a house on Dundas street, and it was feared that some one would get hurt. An officer responded, but found all was quiet when he arrived. The husband, it appears, was intoxicated, thus causing all the trouble.

Farmer's Cruelty.

Napanee, Ont., 14—A few days ago Chief Graham was called to Amherst Island and arrested Joseph McFarlane, for cruelty to animals, he having cut to pieces with an axe a bull, his own property, but a son having sold the animal, the father was incensed over the matter. Bailiff Grier went to the island, yesterday, to subpoena witnesses for the trial here to-day.

Not Trenton Man.

It was not a Trenton man who was murdered in Chicago, as reported yesterday. Cornelius Brussard, the victim, came from Preston, Ont., and has been identified.

Tweed Pedagogue Got Big Surprise.

Chemical Test Went Wrong, With Dire Results.

Tweed, Ont., Oct. 15.—A peculiar accident occurred at the public school here yesterday afternoon. The principal, Mr. Blake, was conducting a chemical experiment and while he was passing ozone through a glass tube containing logwood in order to show its bleaching powers, an explosion took place. Glass and acid flew in all direction about the room. Mr. Blake's hands and face were cut in a score of places, and several of the scholars were also more or less injured. No serious results, however, are anticipated. Colin Helm, son of Mr. H. P. Helm, local manager of the Bank of Montreal, also was burned about the face and eyes.

Mrs Johnston Buried.

Yesterday afternoon the remains of the late Mrs. Isabella Johnston were interred. Services at the family residence, South Front street, were conducted by the Rev. R. S. Laidlaw, pastor of St. Andrew's Church. A number of beautiful floral designs were contributed by friends. The bearers were: Messrs. W. Webster, W. P. Hudson, J. Fenn, W. Mallock, A. Leslie and Col. Stewart.

EYE STRAIN ILLNESS.

Only those who have been relieved by the use of glasses understand what bearing the condition of the eyes has on the general health. There are today children sick because of eye strain. Their illness may be attributed to other causes, and they will continue sick until the TRUE CAUSE is discovered by the exercise of good common sense on the part of the parents. If your child complains of the eyes, see what the trouble is. Our optician can tell you. No excuse for negligence.

Daily Intelligencer.

British Columbia.

A political war is raging furiously in Vancouver, B.C., not as in the past, between Conservative and Liberal, but between erstwhile friends and workers in the Laurier ranks.

The combat is between Joe Martin and McInnes, late Governor of the Yukon Territory. The News-Advertiser, in commenting upon this war, says: "The spectacle is rendered the more interesting by the fact that but a few years have elapsed since Mr. McInnes was playing as Jonathan to Mr. Martin's David. There is no reason to doubt the veracity of Mr. Martin's charges against Mr. McInnes, while there are other sources from which corroboration can be had of the accusations that Mr. McInnes made on Thursday last in his denunciation of his one-time guide, philosopher and friend—Mr. Martin."

Adding, "That it is not improbable that many Liberals will be thankful that these exposures have preceded and not followed the day of the elections, and thereby have decided them to cast their votes for the Conservative candidate."

Martin and McInnes are old political chums and know each other, hence what they say of each other may be accepted as correct.

The Vancouver Province expresses its views plainly upon the situation and the responsibility of Sir Wilfrid as Prime Minister. It says, and says truly:

> "The Liberal party and the Liberal Government, in this election, are standing cringingly behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier's personality. Is the charge made, and is it made, very emphatically, that Ministers of the Crown have enriched themselves and their friends and supporters at the expense of the people? The reply is that Sir Wilfrid's hands are clean. Are these same members of the Cabinet accused of personal habits which, in public men, set a very bad example to the country? We are told that Sir Wilfrid's private life is stainless. Is attention drawn to sinister transactions conducted or approved by departments of Government? The assurance is given that Sir Wilfrid knows nothing of them. Do evidences of incapacity and recklessness pile up against the executive heads of the Administration? Laurier, the cry is, is the greatest statesman which Canada has known. Denials are not given or given only half-heartedly of the misdeeds and delinquencies of the Government. The evidence is usually too strong to admit of successful denial, but everything is to be excused because Sir Wilfrid Laurier is at the head of affairs. For that single reason no account is to be taken of the wretched mismanagement of public affairs, the reckless dissipation of public money, the theft of the real estate assets of the Dominion, the impurity and incapacity and corruption of Ministers!"

All this kind of defence is the veriest nonsense. Under our system of Government there is no divided responsibility for the acts corrupt or otherwise of members of the Cabinet.

Are there any people simple enough to believe that Sir Wilfrid did not know what was transpiring in and out of his Cabinet, so far as his Ministers were concerned? If he did not know he is unfit for the position he occupies as Premier.

He knew well what was transpiring day by day, not only in his Cabinet, but in the daily walks of his colleagues, for his attention was repeatedly called to them, not only by the press, but by others in Ottawa. So that his posing as the ignorant and innocent partner in the Augean stable of politics is the veriest subterfuge.

Bourassa.

This gentleman has spoken. In a speech delivered on the 2nd inst. in Montreal he told his hearers that though he did not intend to take part in the campaign, which ends on the 26th of this month, he personally favored Alderman Giroux, the Conservative candidate in St. James' Division, his own constituency, because he thought him better fitted for the position.

His reasons for remaining neutral he declared, were that:

> "He did not wish to compromise his Conservative friends in the provincial elections by turning towards Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the Federal elections, and, similarly, he would not compromise his Liberal supporters by going to the aide of Mr. R. L. Borden."

Or, in other words, I having received support from both parties in my contest against the Rouge Premier of Quebec, I do not intend to offend either section of my supporters, but I will support Mr. Giroux in the contest now going on in St. James' Division because I like him and he supported me. That's about it.

Mayes vs. Pugsley.

Some one lies and that, too, without stint.

Pugsley does not deny that he made demand upon Mayes for the $2,000, but declares it was for services rendered as the solicitor and law adviser of Mayes.

Mayes in reply declares that Mr. Pugsley's last legal service for him was the Connolly case several years before, when Mayes gave him thirteen hundred dollars. There was no more coming to Mr. Pugsley, and when the latter asked for the money he made no mention of services.

Pugsley declares that Mayes attempted to levy "blackmail" and "sought to sell him the dredge Beaver for $150,000, of which $20,000 could go to the Liberal campaign fund, and that he said he had ordered Mayes out of his office."

Mayes admits that he tried to sell Pugsley his dredge, but adds that "he refused to pay any rake-off to middlemen on dredging. He could then get no more business, and therefore he did try to sell his dredge, but he offered no rake-off, and Mr. Pugsley's statement that he ordered him out of his office is untrue. Mr. Pugsley always treated him with the utmost geniality."

The main fact is that Mayes paid thirty-six thousand dollars to McAvity, whose influence got him the contract, and that the latter never invested a cent nor performed any service stands absolutely uncontradicted.

Pugsley denies that he had anything to do with the bargain between Mayes and McAvity, but admits that he sent Mayes to McAvity in the first place, and does not deny that twice after he was Minister he advised Mayes to keep up his payments to McAvity.

If he advised the continuance of payments to McAvity, the presumption is that he must have known something of the bargain. If not, why advise a continuance of payments?

What does McAvity say to all this? He verifies Pugsley's statement that Mayes wanted to sell Pugsley his dredge, but when spoken to upon the subject absolutely refused to say a word, and his counsel, Perley Barnhill, did the same. There seems to be nothing he can say, for Mayes has every cheque, ten in all, that he gave the middleman and they all bear McAvity's endorsement.

The typographical error in date of the transaction, while it relieves Pugsley of having demanded and received the $2,000 when a member of the Laurier Cabinet, leaves the main facts of the whole boodling transaction standing out in bold relief, showing how public money is squandered to enrich party friends and corrupt the people.

The end is not yet. At a public meeting in St. John last night an affidavit was read, made by Mr. Mayes, in which the telegraphic report says he goes into details and refutes strongly the statement made by Mr. Pugsley that he asked the Minister to buy his dredge, offering therewith a rake-off of $20,000 for Liberal campaign purposes.

A Filthy Condition.

See that dandruff
See that dirty coat

Many a man, otherwise scrupulously clean is dandruff dirty. The small persistent germs of dandruff working all day as well as night are constantly throwing off the small white dandruff scales which falling on the shoulders of a coat gives it a filthy appearance, which is repulsive to the friends of the victim.

Many men allow this condition to exist because they believe there is no cure for dandruff; they have tried various so called cures with unsatisfactory results and naturally condemn all.

The famous prescription is called Parisian Sage, is now put up in America, but only by the Giroux Mfg. Co., of Buffalo, N.Y., Fort Erie, Ont. It is for sale in Belleville by J. S. McKeown, who guarantees it to cure dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed to do more; it will make short thin hair grow long, lustrous and luxuriant, it will stop hair from falling out; it will cure all diseases of the scalp. J. S. McKeown guarantees it—every bottle of it. The price is only 50 cents and if you want to stop the filthy dandruff flakes from lodging on your coat and disgusting your friends, get a bottle at once.

The world's annual match bill is $185,000,000.

Political Pointers.

News from North Hastings is to the effect that Conservative stalwarts were never in better fighting trim than at present. The Coe Hill meeting was a record-breaker, in fact, all through the North the heather is fairly on fire with enthusiasm for Conservative principles.

It is expected that a large crowd of Conservative stalwarts will attend the nomination meeting at Trenton on Monday next. The men from the North will be there in force, and the result should be a meeting to gladden the hearts of supporters of Mr. Porter. Transportation arrangements have been completed. The advertisement in another column will show what they are.

GRAND MEETING AT STIRLING LAST NIGHT.

An enthusiastic meeting in the interest of Mr. E. G. Porter, ex-M.P., was held at Stirling village last night. The opera house was filled to the doors with an appreciative audience which listened with rapt attention to the addresses given.

Mr. C. J. Boldrick was chairman of the meeting.

The speakers were the popular Conservative candidate, Mr. Porter, Mr. J. W. Pearce, M.P.P., and Mr. W. S. Morden. The reception accorded Mr. Porter was exceptionally cordial, and this village will give a good account of itself on the 26th inst.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Chicago beat Detroit 2-0 yesterday, and the Cubs are now world's champions. Critics agree that the losers were outclassed. The Chicago players will divide $27,669, and the Detroit players $18,446. Manager Jennings, of Detroit, says stage fright beat his men.

Stallings, late of Newark, will manage the New York Americans next season. They need somebody.

Four hits on Monday and three on Tuesday. What's the use of trying to figure out why Detroit didn't win?

Bitten by a Dog.

Mr. H. A. Kerr, wine clerk at the Crystal Hotel, yesterday afternoon was patting a dog when the animal turned upon him and bit him severely upon the left hand. The wound was cauterized and no serious results are anticipated. The canine was subsequently destroyed.

Cheese is Down.

At the Cheese Board this afternoon the best price realized was 11 7-8c, against 12 1-8c last week. It is said that Old Country markets are overstocked with cheese.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA

"BABES IN TOYLAND."

There was a good attendance at the above attraction last night, and the production, in many respects, gave excellent satisfaction, though it was not so complete as on its last appearance in this city. The scenery and costumes were splendid, and the principals, some of them, at least, were excellent in their parts, but the production, as a whole, hardly compared with the first production here. The company had its own orchestra last night, which provided fine music.

JOHN GRIFFITH COMING.

John Griffith, who for many years has been an almost annual visitor, and who on each succeeding appearance has added to his reputation as a tragic actor of extraordinary ability, will be the attraction at the Carman opera house next Tuesday evening. Mr. Griffith is this season offering several of Shakespeare's plays, but will be seen here in his first success, "Faust." Those who witnessed his splendid acting last season will welcome the return of this truly great artist with sincere pleasure.

The attraction is under the auspices of the I.O.O.F.

GREAT CLEARING SALE OF WALLPAPER

Scantlebury's

We have recently purchased at 37c on the dollar, the entire stock of Mr. John Cornelius. The goods have been brought to our warerooms and put in order and are now on sale at less than one half their value.

The stock has been so minutely arranged that small quantities can be handled without any difficulty of shortages. This is to say, we know what we have of everything and these small quantities in many cases will be cleared out at one quarter their value. The Cornelius stock must all be closed out before the end of the year, as we cannot bother with small quantities in the regular working season and the advantage will be to the purchaser.

Never before such an opportunity of buying wall paper at such prices and this, too, right in the face of the advance of wall-paper prices during the past three months of 25 per cent. Wall paper will be higher in price in the future, but during this sale you will have the great advantage of bargain prices such at you will not recall or repeat.

With this stock of wallpaper we have 10.000 feet of room moulding purchased in the same stock, which will be sold at like bargains to those of wall paper.

TIMELY TOPICS

The Plain Girl.

Volumes could be written about the unnecessary sorrows of the plain girl. Not one girl in a thousand is ugly, but a large proportion are what might be termed badly turned out. Now, if the plain girl only knew it, this is her golden age. Things have advanced since the days of our grandmothers, when the pensive, delicate creature that sighed and arched her brows and was wonderfully fair to look upon not only demanded but commanded the slavish worship of men. After all, there is no phase of femininity so attractive as the plain girl that is as neat as a row of new pins and whose wits have been sharpened by the fact she has no beauty to trade on or foolishly offer as a substitute for brains. Of course there are men who always will follow in the train of prettiness, but it may be taken almost as an invariable rule that if happiness does not come to the plain girl before marriage it comes to her after marriage, for the plain girl usually wins the discriminating man, the man who is fully awake to the truth that beauty is only skin deep. In the ranks of society within the last few years the plain girl has had things practically her own way. She has defeated her lovelier sister time after time in fair competition for desirable matches, and she has done it simply because the plainness which is her secret sorrow has driven her to mental alertness.

Weeds or Flowers?—A Word to Girls.

Nothing but plenty to do can possibly keep our minds fresh and sweet and wholesome and strong and hence strengthening for others. Feeling is the only part of a woman's nature which will develop of itself. Her mind will not grow unless definitely cultivated, and no more will her conscience, but if she leaves the field fallow weeds of foolish feelings and fancies spring up on all sides.

This is why it is your duty not to allow yourself to be idle, not only because God expects you to bring your sheaves with you at the last day, but because your field cannot stand empty. If good grain is not there, weeds will be. And manual work--gardening or housework—gives more fresh air to the mind than anything else.

If you ever, as Punch expresses it, "find your doll stuffed with sawdust," if life seems a disappointment and you are a prey to foolish fancies who have lost your spring, then try being really tired out in body by useful work and see if you do not find it an effectual tonic.

A Backhanded Compliment.

The following backhanded compliment, paid to Dr. Edward Everett Hale, is said to have been very much enjoyed by him:

In his younger days he was about to leave a parish, and a good old lady was bewailing the fact and insisting that the church would be ruined thereby. Dr. Hale, says Judge, flattered by her words and manner and wishing to console her, said:

"But, sister, the man who will succeed me is a fine preacher and a splendid fellow. You'll soon see that everything is all right and get used to it."

"No, no, I won't," she answered tearfully. "I don't get used to this changing. I've seen six changes in preachers now, and it's got worse and worse all the time."

Pear and Orange Preserve.

A dozen pears, a cup of sugar, the juice and a little of the rind of an orange. Peel and cut the pears and place in the kettle. Put sugar and juice over them, then another dozen, another cup of sugar and juice and rind, and so on, as many as you wish to use. Fix them at night and let them stand all night. In the morning put on the stove and cook until the peel is tender. Do not put in one drop of water. Two and a half dozen Bartletts will fill about six pint jars.

At a Japanese Auction.

Japanese auctions are conducted on the silent plan. Each bidder writes his name and bid upon a slip of paper, which he places in a box. When the bidding is over, says Home Notes, the box is opened by the auctioneer and the goods are declared the property of the highest bidder.

PACK DRIVING.

Freighters In B.C Are Daring Men and Expert With Horses.

The skilled pack freighter in the Cariboo district of British Columbia disdains the use of reins. His charge is piloted with a jerk line, operated from the back of the "nigh wheeler" saddled for his accommodation. To prevent the awkward predicament of two big freight outfits meeting, in precarious places, on the mountain roads, loud tinkling bells are worn on the lead horses, in the musical accompaniment of which there is perpetual augury of their passage. Serious accidents are not common in the records, although incidents might be cited where grievous misfortune has befallen the freighting outfits. It is customary for the freighter to carry his "kitchen" along with him. He camps by the wayside, in summer, and turns his horses to the bunch grass.

Owing to its well-established trails and equipment for transport Ashcroft, B.C., is a common rendezvous of exploratory excursions into the northern country. All the types given to lonely adventure and organized expedition sojourn in the little frontier town—landseeker and surveyor, prospector and woodsman, the envoy of capital, the gold hunter with the pack on his back. In such picturesque and cosmopolitan humanity is found Ashcroft's predominant sociological cast. The well-worn highways of old Cariboo are convenient to this northern migration, which scatters thence into the obscurities and hazards of the wilds. Supplies are transported by pack train, from Ashcroft, for the Hudson Bay Co. at Fort George, and to points in the Nechaco, Chilcotin, and other territories of the north. For this service the hardy and sure-footed mule is commonly used. Long trains of these little animals, each bearing its apportioned weight, may be seen traveling north from Ashcroft in the early spring. Packing is done on contract, by experienced men. Supplies for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway are transported over the Ashcroft route. They are freighted to Soda Creek and transferred to steamers there for shipment, 200 miles up the Fraser, to Fort George. A large increase in this business is anticipated with the development of construction work in British Columbia.

TOWN WITH A FUTURE.

Col. Turnbull Discusses Prospects of Fort Churchill.

Lieut.-Col. T. T. Turnbull of Montreal, who a few years ago went over the proposed route of the Hudson Bay Railway, has been in Montreal recently. His trip north was taken for the purpose of examining the route and he went into the matter very carefully, traveling about 2,000 miles and getting a solid business idea of the project.

"I am satisfied," says Col. Turnbull, "that Fort Churchill is bound to be a great factor in the shipping trade of this country, and I am pleased to see, after many years, that the work of getting a line in is being undertaken. There is a great future ahead of the country which will be opened up by the line, as there are agricultural possibilities there which are not generally appreciated. North of Norway House I saw some of the finest flowers which I have ever seen in my life. Perfect vegetables are grown at points north of there, while the country in its natural state produces berries, wild fruits and other vegetation, which indicates that vegetables and cereals can be grown there successfully. What is really wanted is a two or four track line, capable of being fed by all of the existing railways which run through the wheat belt of the west, not only in Canada, but in the western States. Such a line would handle a vast amount of traffic from Washington, Montana, Wyoming, Nebraska, Oregon, the Dakotas, Iowa and Idaho and some from as remote a state as Wisconsin. Cereals and cattle could be handled cheaper over such a line than at present by any known route. The temperature of the country is much in favor of cattle and live stock shipping."

Juvenile Delinquents.

An order-in-council has been passed defining requirements which must be complied with before the Juvenile Delinquents' Act, passed at the last session of Parliament can be brought into force in any city, town or municipality. They are as follows:

1. That a proper detention home has been established and will be maintained for temporary confinement of juvenile delinquents, or of children charged with delinquency. The institution should be conducted more like a family home than like a penal institution, and must not be under the same roof as, or in immediate vicinity of, any poice station, jail, lock-up or other place in which adults are or may be imprisoned.
2. That an industrial school, as defined by clause (h) of section 2 of the act, exist, to which juvenile delinquents may be committed.
3. That there is a superior court, or county court judge or justice, having jurisdiction in city, town or other portion of a province in which it is sought to have the act put in force willing to act as juvenile court judge, and that the remuneration of such juvenile court judge (if any) has been provided for without recourse to federal authorities.
4. That remuneration for an adequate staff of probation officers has been provided by municipal grant, public subscription or otherwise.
5. That some society or committee is ready and willing to act as juvenile court committee.

Dreamed of Accident.

Ten-year-old Myrtle Cooper of Toronto recently experienced partial realization of a dream that she had her left arm and leg broken. The dream came several nights ago.

As she was playing in front of the Dovercourt school she was struck and knocked down by a rig. No bones were broken, but her left arm and leg were severely bruised, at the exact spots where she had dreamed that they were broken.

THE TENTH LIEUT.-GOVERNOR.

Hon. J. M. Gibson Has Had Brilliant and Varied Career.

Hon. J. M. Gibson, recently sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, is the tenth to hold the office. His predecessors have been: Major-General H. W. Stisted, July 1, 1867; Hon. W. P. Howland, P.C., C.B., July 14, 1868; Hon John W. Crawford, Nov. 5, 1873; Hon. D. A. Macdonald, P.C., May 18, 1875; Hon. John Beverley Robinson, June 30, 1880; Hon. Sir Alexander Campbell, K.C.M.G., P.C., Feb. 8, 1887; Hon. Sir George A. Kirkpatrick, P.C., May 30, 1892; Hon. Sir Oliver Mowat, G.C.M.G., Nov. 18, 1897; Hon. Sir W. Mortimer Clark, April 21, 1903.

Mr. Gibson had a distinguished career at Toronto University, carrying off the Prince of Wales' prize and the silver medal in classics and moderns, and the prize in oriental languages. He took the law course and his LL.B., with gold medal in 1869. He organized the Hamilton Art School, and has always taken an interest in educational matters as member of the school board and the university senate.

He was an active volunteer in 1860, and was a lieutenant at Ridgeway in 1866. He commanded the 13th Battalion for several years, and is a recognized authority on rifle shooting. He was a member of the Wimbledon team in 1874, 1875, and 1879, and won the Prince of Wales badge and £100 in the last year. In 1881 he commanded the Canadian team at Wimbledon, which defeated the British team and won the Kolapore Cup. He was on the Creedmoor teams in 1876 and 1880, and has several times been president of the Ontario Rifle Association. As honorary president of the Veterans' '66 Association, president St. Andrew's Society, Hamilton. Grand Master Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada, and in other offices he has been widely known.

His political record is with the Liberal party. He fell with the Ross Government.

Mr. Gibson was born on Jan. 1, 1842, and is therefore in his 66th year. He has been married three times and his present wife, a daughter of the late Judge Mallock of Brockville, is very popular in society.

HORSE RUSTLERS.

Bad Gang Has Been Rounded Up In West After Stiff Chase.

The arrest and conviction recently at Moosejaw of Joseph Convery for horse-stealing, the arrest of Kid Royals and Josh Birch in Montana, and the sentencing of a fourth man named Hofferson to the North Dakota penitentiary, breaks up a bad gang of horse-rustlers, who have been operating in southern Saskatchewan and the States adjoining to the south for some time. These were the leaders. Convery admitted working with a gang which stole a large number of horses in the ranching country near the boundary, south of Moosejaw, but claimed that he was forced by the gang to be with it. He had horses in his possession, for the stealing of which he was found guilty. "Kid" Royals was a notorious outlaw, and was shot by a sheriff in Montana recently. He was car-jumping desperado and horse-thief, and the residents all along the Yellowstone and in North Dakota are breathing easier. He is the most notorious horse-thief that ever operated in Montana, but was finally captured near Manhattan, a little town near Bozeman, and is now in Deer Lodge penitentiary. Royals was serving a ten-year sentence. He was needed at Bozeman as a witness, as he was to turn state's evidence. On his way to Bozeman, he jumped through the window of the train and made his way to hiding places known to him. Hundreds of horses were stolen between the time of his escape and his capture, and everyone traces the thefts to Royals. The desperado was seen on the streets of Manhattan and recognized. The sheriff hurried from Bozeman, surprised the man, who is celebrated for his quick gun play, and put him under arrest.

Welcomed His Namesake.

After Sir Wilfrid Laurier's meeting at Clinton recently the private secretary to the Premier received the following quaint little note:

Clinton, Sept. 23.

Welcome!

Sir Wilfrid Laurier,—I feel it my duty to make known to you I was given my name in your honor twelve years ago by my parents.

We are proud to welcome you to our town. Three cheers for Sir Wilfrid Laurier!

Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!

(Signed) Wilfrid Laurier Dickinson.

Master Wilfrid Laurier Dickinson received two days later the following reply:

Berlin, Ont., Sept. 24, 1908.

My dear young friend,—I have your very kind favor of yesterday, welcoming me to Clinton. I would have been very glad to offer you my thanks in person, and it is a pleasure which I shall give myself at the first opportunity. Yours very sincerely,

Wilfrid Laurier.

Marconi's Story of the Admiral.

A glutton for work, Marconi was recently warned that he was working far too hard, and gaining fame at the expense of flesh. Apparently, however, the wireless telegraphy wizard has no fears for his health, for he treated the warning in a jocular manner. "I am not like the Italian admiral, Libertini, then," he said, laughing. "Libertini," he went on, "had won many battles and great renown, and at a ball given in his honor one lady said to another, 'But how frightfully fat our dear admiral is getting!' 'Yes,' said the second lady. 'Isn't it fortunate? Otherwise he wouldn't be able to wear all his medals.'"

Animal Patients.

As many as 10,973 cases were treated last year at Our Dumb Friends' League's Animal Hospital, Pimlico, England. These included 254 horses, 253 donkeys, 4,400 dogs, 3,625 cats and 729 birds.

THE MYSTERY

CHAPTER XVII.

THE next day we continued our explorations by land and so for a week after that. I thought it best not to relinquish all authority, so I organized regular expeditions and ordered their direction. The men did not object. It was all good enough fun to them.

The net results were that we found a resting place of sea birds—too late in the season for eggs—a hot spring near enough camp to be useful, and that was about all. The sheep were the only animals on the island, although there were several sorts of birds. In general the country was as I have described it—either volcanic or overlaid with fertile earth. In any case it was canyon and hill. We soon grew tired of climbing and turned our attention to the sea.

With the surfboat we skirted the coast. It was impregnable except in three places—our own beach, that near the seal rookery and on the south side of the island. We landed at each one of these places. But returning close to the coast we happened upon a cave mouth more or less guarded by an outlying rock.

The day was calm, so we ventured in. At first I thought it merely a gorge in the rock, but even while peering for the end wall we slipped under the archway and found ourselves in a vast room.

Our eyes were dazzled so we could make out little at first. But through the still, clear water the light filtered freely from below, showing the bottom as through a sea glass. We saw the fish near the entrance and coral and sea growths of marvelous vividness. They waved slowly as in a draft of air. The medium in which they floated was absolutely invisible, for of course there were no reflections from its surface. We seemed to be suspended in midair, and only when the dipping oars made rings could we realize that anything sustained us.

Suddenly the place let loose in pandemonium. The most fiendish cries, groans, shrieks broke out, confusing themselves so thoroughly with their own echoes that the volume of sound was continuous. Heavy splashes shook the water. The boat rocked. The invisible surface was broken into facets.

We shrank, terrified. From all about us glowed hundreds of eyes like coals of fire—on a level with us, above us, almost over our heads. Two by two the coals were extinguished.

Below us the bottom was clouded with black figures darting rapidly like a school of minnows beneath a boat. They darkened the coral and the sands and the glistening sea growths, only the occultations and brightenings succeeded each other much more swiftly.

We stared stupefied, our thinking power blurred by the incessant whirl of motion and noise.

Suddenly Thrackles laughed aloud.

"Seals!" he shouted through his trumpeted hands.

Our eyes were expanding to the twilight. We could make out the arch of the room, its shelves and hollows and niches. Lying on them we could discern the seals, hundreds and hundreds of them, all staring at us, all barking and bellowing. As we approached they scrambled from their elevations and, diving to the bottom, scurried to the entrance of the cave.

We lay on our oars for ten minutes. Then silence fell. There persisted a tiny drip, drip drip, from some point in the darkness. It merely accentuated the hush. Suddenly from far in the interior of the hill there came a long, hollow boo-o-om! It reverberated, roaring. The surge that had lifted our boat some minutes before thus reached its journey's end.

The chamber was very lofty. As we rowed cautiously in it lost nothing of its height, but something in width. It was marvelously colored, like all the volcanic rocks of this island. In addition some chemical drip had thrown across its vividness long gauzy streamers of white. We rowed in as far as the faintest daylight lasted us. The occasional reverberating boom of the surges seemed as distant as ever.

This was beyond the seal rookery on the beach. Below it we entered an open cleft of some size to another squarer cave. It was now high tide. The water extended a scant ten fathoms to end on an interior shale beach. The cave was a perfectly straight passage following the line of the cleft. How far in it reached we could not determine, for it, too, was full of seals, and after we had driven them back a hundred feet or so their fiery eyes scared us out. We did not care to put them at bay.

The next day I rowed out to the Laughing Lass and got a rifle. I found the captain asleep in his bunk and did not disturb him. Perdosa and I, with infinite pains, tracked and stalked the sheep, of which I killed one. We found the mutton excellent. The hunting was difficult and the quarry as time went on more and more suspicious, but henceforward we did not lack for fresh meat. Furthermore, we soon discovered that fine trolling was to be had outside the reef. We rigged a sail for the extra dory and spent much of our time at the sport. I do not know the names of the fish. They were very gamy, indeed, and ran from five to an indeterminate number of pounds in weight. Above fifty pounds our light tackle parted, so we had no means of knowing how large they may have been.

Thus we spent very pleasantly the greater part of two weeks. At the end of that time I made up my mind that it would be just as well to get back to business. Accordingly I called Perdosa and directed him to sort and clear of rust the salvaged chain cable. He refused flatly. I took a step toward him. He drew his knife and backed away.

"Perdosa," said I firmly, "put up that knife."

"No," said he.

I pulled the saw barreled Colt's 43 and raised it slowly to a level with his breast.

"Perdosa," I repeated, "drop that knife."

The crisis had come, but my resolution was fully prepared for it. I should not have cared greatly if I had had to shoot the man, as I certainly should have done had he disobeyed. There would then have been one less to deal with in the final accounting, which strangely enough I now for a moment never doubted would come. I had not before aimed at a man's life, so you can see to what tensity the baffling mystery had strung me.

Perdosa hesitated a fraction of an instant. I really think he might have chanced it, but Handy Solomon, who had been watching me closely, growled at him.

"Drop it, you fool!" he said.

Perdosa let fall the knife.

"Now, get at that cable," I commanded, still at white heat. I stood over him until he was well at work, then turned back to set tasks for the other men. Handy Solomon met me halfway.

"Begging your pardon, Mr. Eagen," said he, "I want a word with you."

"I have nothing to say to you," I snapped, still excited.

"It ain't reasonable not to hear a man's say," he advised in his most conciliatory manner. "I'm talking for all of us."

He paused a moment, took my silence for consent and went ahead.

"Begging your pardon, Mr. Eagen," said he, "we ain't going to do any more useless work. There ain't no laziness about us, but we ain't going to be busy at nothing. All the camp work and the haulin' and cuttin' and cleanin' and the rest of it we'll do gladly. But we ain't goin' to pound any more cable, and you can kiss the book on that."

"You mean to mutiny?" I asked.

He made a deprecatory gesture.

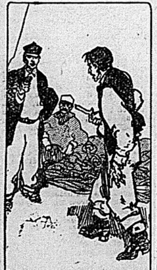
"Put us aboard ship, sir, and let us hear the old man give his orders, and you'll find no mutiny in us. But here ashore it's different. Did the old man give orders to pound the cable?"

"I represent the captain," I stammered.

He caught the evasion. "I thought so. Well, if you got any kick on us, please, sir, go get the old man. If he says to our face pound cable, why pound cable it is. Ain't that right, boys?"

They murmured something. Perdosa deliberately dropped his hammer and joined the group. My hand strayed again toward the sawed off Colt's 45.

"I wouldn't do that," said Handy Solomon, almost kindly. "You couldn't kill us all. And w'at good would it do? I asks you that. I can cut down a chicken with my knife at twenty feet. You must surely see, sir, that I could have killed you too easy while you were covering Pancho there. This ain't got to be a war, Mr. Eagan, just because we don't want to work without any sense to it."



"Perdosa," said I firmly, "put up that knife."

There was more of the same sort. I had plenty of time to see my dilemma. Either I would have to abandon my attempt to keep the men busy or I would have to invoke the authority of Captain Selover. To do the latter would be to destroy it. The master had become a stuffed figure, a bogy with which to frighten, an empty bladder that a prick would collapse. With what grace I could muster I had to give in.

"You'll have to have it your own way, I suppose," I snapped.

Thrackles grinned, and Pulz started to say something, but Handy Solomon, with a peremptory gesture and a black scowl, stopped him short.

"Now, that's what I calls right proper and handsome!" he cried admiringly. "We reely had no right to expect that, boys, as seamen from our first officer! You can kiss the book on it that very few crews have such kind masters. Mr. Eagen has the right, and we signed to it all straight to work us as he pleases, and w'at does he do? Why, he up and gives us a week shore leave, and then he gives us light watches, and all the time our pay goes on just the same. Now, that's w'at I calls right proper and handsome conduct, or the devil's a preacher, and I ventures with all respect to propose three cheers for Mr. Eagen."

They gave them, grinning broadly. The villain stood looking at me, a sardonic gleam in the back of his eye. Then he gave a little hitch to his red head covering and sauntered away humming between his teeth. I stood watching him, choked with rage and indecision. The humming broke into words:

"'Oh, quarter; oh, quarter!' the jolly pirates cried.
Blow high, blow low, what care we!
But the quarter that we gave them was to sink them in the sea,
Down on the coast of the high Barbare-e-e."

"Here, you swab," he cried to Thrackles, "and you, Pancho, get some wood, lively! And, Pulz, bring us a pail of water. Doctor, let's have duff to celebrate on."

The men fell to work with alacrity.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THAT evening I smoked in a splendid isolation while the men whispered apart. I had nothing to do but smoke and to chew my cud, which was bitter. There could be no doubt, however I may have saved my face, that command had been taken from me by that rascal, Handy Solomon. I was in two minds as to whether or not I should attempt to warn Darrow or the doctor. Yet what could I say and against whom should I warn them? The men had grumbled, as men always do grumble in idleness, and had perhaps talked a little wildly, but that was nothing.

The only indisputable fact I could adduce was that I had allowed my authority to slip through my fingers. And adequately to excuse that I should have to confess that I was a writer and no handler of men.

I abandoned the unpleasant train of thought with a snort of disgust, but it had led me to another. In the joy and uncertainty of living I had practically lost sight of the reason for my coming. With me it had always been more the adventure than the story. My writing was a byproduct, a utilization of what life offered me. I had set sail possessed by the sole idea of ferreting out Dr. Schermerhorn's investigations, but the gradual development of affairs had ended by absorbing my every faculty. Now, cast into an eddy by my change of fortunes, the original idea regained its force. I was out of the active government of affairs, with leisure on my hands, and my thoughts naturally turned with curiosity again to the laboratory in the valley.

Darrow's "devil fires" were again painting the sky. I had noticed them from time to time, always with increasing wonder. The men accepted them easily as only one of the unexplained phenomena of a sailor's experience, but I had not as yet hit on a hypothesis that suited me. They were not allied to the aurora. They differed radically from the ordinary volcanic emanations and scarcely resembled any electrical displays I had ever seen. The night was cool. The stars bright. I resolved to investigate.

Without further delay I arose to my feet and set off into the darkness. Immediately one of the group detached himself from the fire and joined me.

"Going for a little walk, sir?" asked Handy Solomon sweetly. "That's quite right and proper. Nothin' like a little walk to get you fit and right for your bunk."

He held close to my elbow. We got just as far as the stockade in the bed of the arroyo. The lights we could make out now across the zenith, but owing to the precipitance of the cliffs and the rise of the arroyo bed it was impossible to see more. Handy Solomon felt the defenses carefully.

"A man would think, sir, it was a cannibal island," he observed. "All so tight and tidylike here. It would take a ship's guns to batter her down. A man might dig under these here two gate logs if no one was against him. Like to try it, sir?"

"No," I answered gruffly.

From that time on I was virtually a prisoner, yet so carefully was my surveillance accomplished that I could place my finger on nothing definite. Some one always accompanied me on my walks, and in the evening I was herded as closely as any cattle.

Handy Solomon took the direction of affairs off my hands. You may be sure he set no very heavy tasks. The men cut a little wood, carried up a few pails of water. That was all.

Lacking incentive to stir about, they came to spend most of their time lying on their backs watching the sky. This in turn bred a languor which is the sickest, most soul and temper destroying affair invented by the devil. They could not muster up energy enough to walk down the beach and back, and yet they were wearied to death of the inaction. After a little they became irritable toward one another. Each suspected the other of doing less than he should. You who know men will realize what this meant.

The atmosphere of our camp became surly. I recognized the precursor of its becoming dangerous. One day on a walk in the hills I came on Thrackles and Pulz lying on their stomachs gazing down fixedly at Dr. Schermerhorn's camp. This was nothing extraordinary, but they started guiltily to their feet when they saw me and made off, growling under their breaths.

All this that I have told you so briefly took time. It was the eating through of men's spirits by that worst of corrosives, idleness. I conceive it unnecessary to weary you with the details.

The situation was as yet uneasy, but not alarming. One evening I overheard the beginning of an absurd plot to gain entrance to the valley. That was as far as detail went. I became convinced at last that I should in some way warn Percy Darrow.

That seems a simple enough proposition, does it not? But if you will stop to think one moment of the difficulties of my position you will see that it was not as easy as at first it appears. Darrow still visited us in the evening. The men never allowed me even the chance of private communication while he was with us. One or two took pains to stretch out between us. Twice I arose when the assistant did, resolved to accompany him part way back. Both times men resolutely escorted us and as resolutely separated us from the opportunity of a single word apart. The crew never threatened me by word or look. But we understood each other.

I was not permitted to row out to the Laughing Lass without escort. Therefore I never attempted to visit her again. The men were not anxious to do so. Their awe of the captain made them only too glad to escape his notice. That empty shell of a past reputation was my only hope. It shielded the arms and ammunition.

As I look back on it now the period seems to me to be one of merely potential trouble. The men had not taken the pains to crystallize their ideas. I really think their compelling emotion was that of curiosity. They wanted to see. It needed a definite impulse to change that desire to one of greed.

The impulse came from Percy Darrow and his idle talk of voodoos. As usual he was directing his remarks to the sullen nigger.

"Voodoos?" he said. "Of course there are. Don't fool yourself for a minute on that. There are good ones and bad ones. You can tame them if you know how, and they will do anything you want them to." Pulz chuckled in his throat. "You don't believe it?" drawled the assistant, turning to him. "Well, it's so. You know that heavy box we are so careful of? Well, that's got a tame voodoo in it."

The others laughed.

"What he like?" asked the nigger gravely.

"He's a fine voodoo, with wavery arms and green eyes and red glows."

Watching narrowly its effect he swung off into one of the genuine old crooning voodoo songs, once so common down south, now so rarely heard. No one knows what the words mean—they are generally held to be charm words only—a magic gibberish. But the nigger sprang across the fire like lightning, his face altered by terror, to seize Darrow by the shoulders.

"Doan you! Doan you!" he gasped, shaking the assistant violently back and forth. "Dat be King Voodoo song! Dat call him all de voodoo—all!"

He stared wildly about in the darkness as though expecting to see the night thronged. There was a moment of confusion. Eager for any chance I hissed under my breath: "Danger! Look out!"

I could not tell whether or not Darrow heard me. He left soon after. The mention of the chest had focused the men's interest.

"Well," Pulz began, "we've been here on this spot for a long time."

"A year and five months," reckoned Thrackles.

"A man can do a lot in that time."

"If he's busy."

"They've been busy."

"Yes."

"Wonder what they've done?"

There was no answer to this, and the sea lawyer took a new tack.

"I suppose we're all getting double wages?"

"That's so."

"And that's say four hunder' for us and Mr. Eagen here. I suppose the old man don't let the schooner go for nothing."

"Two hundred and fifty a month," said I and then would have had the words back.

They cried out in prolonged astonishment.

"Seventeen months," pursued the logician after a few moments. He scratched with a stub of lead. "That makes over $11,000 since we've been out. How much do you suppose his outfit stands him?" he appealed to me.

"I'm sure I can't tell you," I replied shortly.

"Well, it's a pile of money anyway."

Nobody said anything for some time.

"Wonder what they've done?" Pulz asked again.

"Something that pays big." Thrackles supplied the desired answer.

"Dat chis'"— suggested Perdosa.

"Voodoo"— muttered the nigger.

"That's to scare us out," said Handy Solomon, with vast contempt. "That's what makes me sure it is the chest."

Pulz muttered some of the jargon of alchemy.

EXPLAINS EARTHQUAKE.

Canadian Scientist Has Made Big Discovery.

Seekers after information in the starry regions above, and in the earth beneath us, and the general public as well, will be interested to know that at last a man has been found who has discovered the reasons why this old earth is shaken up by earthquakes, and by depressions in its land surface. This man is F. N. Denison, a Canadian, who is a careful, earnest, plodding scientist of Victoria, B.C., and who is in the employ of the Government observatory there.

Two years ago Mr. Denison addressed a meeting of the British Association of Advanced Science at Belfast on "The effects of atmospheric pressure on the earth's surface," but at that time he could do no more than interest his colleagues, because he had not the necessary data to lay before them to prove his theories. Sir George Darwin, who is now the president of the great British Association, became deeply interested, however, and advised Mr. Denison to procure another instrument and carry his ideas further. The Government supplied the instrument, and the observatory man settled down to work.

His instruments are barometers and seismographs. The territory he covered totals 2,000 square miles, from California to the Yukon. He kept records for the past year, and came down to the meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada recently armed with much information.

His findings in brief were that the earth's surface is periodically depressed and elevated, and that these movements are brought about by the variations of atmospheric pressure as well as to changes of temperature. In the winter time, and during the cold weather the movements were south and east, and during the hot weather west and north. That is to say, he found that the elevations and depressions were governed largely by weather conditions, over a vast extent of territory.
